of souls are not free unless they have a reasonable security for them.

This gigantic effort is the fight of free men people against those who have nothing but who are rich with arms and the right to work.

His Will Stated.

Our will: Italy does not intend to bring other people into the conflict. Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Egypt will take notice of this fact.

Italians! Your determination, marching in Berlin, I said that according to the laws of fascist corporate state we have a friend, you march with him in the war.

With Germany we shall march with these victorious armed forces. In this night of destiny, in this supreme event we think of the Italian Emperor-King, Victor Emmanuel who has interpreted for ever the soul of Italy. Italy—Fascist and proletarian—is for the third time under arms, strong and united. The word of order is only one: Everything for the imperative—victory.

And we shall win!—to give finally a long period of peace to Italy, to Europe, to the world.

Italian people, to arms: and show your tenacy, your courage, your valor.

Director of Mine Mentally Unfit To Stand Trial

Montreal, June 10—(CP)—A court of King's bench jury decided today that James Eaton, miner of Montreal, a director of Stadacona Mines (1939) Limited, was mentally unfit to continue trial on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the public and Stadacona shareholders of more than $300,000.

When today's session opened, Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lazure told the jury Mr. Eaton was "under examination by physicians for the past three days." He is instructed the court clerk to swear in the jurors for the case, before hearing whether the aged accused was fit to stand trial.

Dr. Daniel Plouffe, alienist of the Montreal jail, testified that Mr. Eaton was unable to defend because he could not concentrate and could not remember hearing. Answering a question from the bench, Dr. Plouffe declared that in his opinion there was no simulation by Mr. Eaton.

Dr. Plouffe said he was unable to say at the moment what chances the aged man had of recovery of the fact that he had been using liquor all his life."

Dr. Plouffe's evidence was corroborated by Dr. C. A. Porteous of the Verdun Protestant Hospital.

WEYGAND ORDERS "TO HOLD FAST"

French general headquarters said that since the war is now one of large-scale movement, and the enemy is on the lookout for the slightest information, no further details can be given of general operations than those contained in the communique.

Weygand's Order to "Hold Fast"

General Maxime Weygand, commander-in-Chief of the Allied forces, reiterated his order to the troops to "hold fast" in the face of the mass German onslaught in which more than 1,000,000 Nazi troops were engaged.

The French soldiers are fighting with "courage, initiative and stubborn suffering of the highest admiration," an official French military spokesman said. "They are fighting like the soldiers of Verdun."

The spokesman explained General Weygand's statement "we are in the last quarter-hour" in this period of-the-day yesterday as meaning that the German material is beginning to be exhausted. All information given by German prisoners agrees on this point. The tanks particularly, are being sent back in large numbers for repair.

Situation Admittedly Serious

Nevertheless the situation was admittedly serious as the Germans sent more than 100 divisions with their mechanized smash toward Paris and reached a point only an hour-long Seine within 35 miles of the capital.

Hurling what military experts considered their full force into a gigantic battle of men and machines, the Nazis battered ahead with planes, armor and guns followed up with waves of fresh infantry.

The usual morning military press conference at the War Ministry was not held. Only bulletins remained at the ministry.

The British defenders reported sacrificing ground only "when it was covered with German dead" under General Maxime Weygand's order to "hold tight." In the last quarter of an hour," the titanic battle of France blazed most fiercely in three major sectors:

Tanks Enter Rouen

1. On the Allies' western flank, nearest the sea, where crack guards of German mechanized divisions, some 600 tanks, encircled the suburbs of Rouen, rumbled into Pont De L'Arche, and drove into Louviers, only 23 miles northeast of Paris.

2. In the centre, where the surviving units of Nazi shock troops, after suffering tremendous losses, established two new bridgeheads across the river Aisne on either side of Soissons and thundered the battle to the flat plain of Tardenois, about ten miles south of the river and some 60 miles northeast of the capital.

3. Further east, in the region of Vouziers. There, just to the south of the Plains of Champagne and behind the lines of the newest conflict, German planes dropped "massive" detachments of parachutists. Some 2,000 Nazis were promptly surrounded them and they were either dispatched or taken prisoner.

Suffered Heavy Losses

At one other point the Nazis drove to a region south of Soissons, Villiers and east of Beauvais. Since Beauvais itself is 40 miles airline from Paris, this marked the deepest thrust to between 30 and 40 miles from the outer edge of the capital. But it also was in this sector that the Nazis encountered the new French High Command, had suffered "a serious setback and considerable losses" on Thursday.

Paris newspapers made no attempt to hide the gravity of the situation. In large headlines the papers described the battle as "fierce," "very serious" and "culminating."

Though the more important events are still ahead of some of the government departments already have been removed as a precautionary measure, Parisians saw only a few signs of flight. Many of the thousands call for a cabinet session at 7 p.m. (1 p.m., EDT) today at the War Ministry.

Premier LeBrun Presides

Since the Ministers, with President Albert Lebrun presiding, also had reviewed the military situation for an hour and a half last night, Premier Paul Reynaud announced a strong support of its fighting forces, French said.

The French also were heartened somewhat by Premier Reynaud's declaration that "the enemy has suffered heavy losses. Soon he will commence to the end of his effort."

While Paris intermittently heard the drone of planes and the sound of big guns intensified anti-aircraft fire and the explosion of bombs, apparently were bombs fighting was general along the entire front. Nowhere was there a 22-mile gap between Pontavert, east of Soissons, and Orsaeux Puricien, five miles west of Rethel.

Called a "Passive Zone"

This was termed a "passive zone" by a French military spokesman. But it was in the 30-mile long sector running between Chateau Porcien to the Argonne Forest, where the Nazis early today sent 600,000 men, troops and 3,500 tanks into a smashing offensive. Here, the spokesman said, the French counter-attacked after the Germans were able to cross the Aisne "only at two points."

With the battle already stretched over more than 300 miles of northern France, General Weygand in his order of the day to his armies yesterday proclaimed with "he will extend tomorrow as far as Switzerland" if Nazi Armies were interpreted this statement as referring to the Rouen front, where the French hastily face the German Westwall.

The "decisive point" in the German push was along the lower Seine, Nazis's avenue to Paris from the west, where isolated Nazi units reached Pont De L'Arche, and the region along the valleys of the Adenelle and Epte Rivers, thrusts which have landed the Germans to Paris and 40 miles due east of the important city of Rouen.

Danger to Defences

These raids, however—apparently by forces driving originally from the Montdidier sector south of the Somme—were declared to be spearheads out at considerable risk to the Nazi forces. But their danger to the French defences, for a time at Rouen itself, was in communications between Paris and Le Havre, Cherbourg and Genlis.

The bitterest of the land battles was being waged in the flat Tardenois Plain about 19 miles south of Rheims.

There, in the vicinity of the town of Fere-En-Tardenois, about 60 miles due east of Paris, the full force of the German attack was concentrated in field-gray clad Nazi infantry, supported by tanks, all hurled headlong set against the static French defences between Soissons and the Marne.

A French staff officer described the action as follows:

"The crossing was forced on the 6th and the enemy launched his first attack was repelled on Friday with terrific losses. On Saturday the Germans made good an advance of from eight to 10 miles in the flat plain.

"Here again both sides fought with the greatest violence. Fresh German divisions were rushed to the front. The battle is still fighting to the last, were falling back slowly, sacrificing ground reluctantly when it was covered with German dead."

on other fronts.

It was indicated that port facilities at Narvik have been demolished, preventing the Germans using it for any shipping.

Meanwhile, in a message to Premier Reynaud, Prime Minister Winston Churchill said that "the battle of Air Forces has been continually engaged over the battlefields and the fighter line has been drawn back from the Somme to the Seine and Aisne, and the Germans have suffered very severe losses."

PLAYING AT WAR BOY IS KILLED

Mr. and Mrs. Alex MacCormick, parents of the two children, were not injured although their car, along with other members of the convoy, was forced to stop. Alone, when the accident happened, the children were entertaining themselves by playing at soldiers.

Ross took the rifle, owned by his brother, now serving overseas with the 48th Highlanders of Canada Regiment, and marched upstairs with it to his bedroom. Walking into the bedroom he took the gun from his shoulder and pointed it at his brother who was standing on the bed. In some manner, the gun fired. Ross is thought to be unloaded, accidental discharge and John fell, mortally wounded.

Neighbor Heard Shot

Mr. Baker, a neighbor, living almost across the road, heard the shot and ran over to the MacCormick house to find the boy on the bed in a pool of blood with Ross frantically fanning his wounded brother. Dr. Hugh Armstrong, of Bannockburn and a former teacher of Ross MacCormick, was called and the children attended, happened to be at the Baker home intending to go to the show with Ross. Provincial Constable Raymond of Maxville, he thought the rifle was unloaded. The barrel of the gun was empty, but the fact remains that there be closed the action a shell, which had been in the gun, had apparently been injected into the barrel. It is also thought that the shell which killed John was the only cartridge for the gun in the house.

ALLIES WITHDRAW FROM NARVIK AREA

Men and Material Can be Used to Greater Advantage Elsewhere

Stockholm, June 10 —(AP)— After two months and a day of fighting, the battlefields of the Norwegian forces in the north today placed Germany's grip on Norway in position to dominate all of Norway.

On order of King Haakon VII, Norwegian troops laid down their arms at midnight Sunday night. At the same time reliable reports said the British and French were withdrawing their troops from the Narvik area, which, the last fighting of this campaign had been waged on, and that the King, the Crown Prince and the government had fled to England to render whatever help they could give to the Allied cause.

Given by Radio

The declaration by the King and the government was read by Minister Dr. Halvdan Koht in a radio broadcast from Tromso, north of Narvik, which told of how the Allies' provisional headquarters in the far north.

It said that the Norwegian fighting decided on capitulation on the advice of General Claude Auchinleck, the commander-in-chief, and that the Allies had agreed to help the King and the government should take seat outside the country.

Pointing out it was impossible to continue the struggle against Germany alone, the declaration said:—

"If we continue the fight it would only mean complete destruction. The German invaders do not save Norwegian lives and civilians. The commander-in-chief therefore advised the King and the government to capitulate, and they followed his advice."

Allegiance Ended Sunday Night

The declaration indicated that the Norwegian army would not have had fled to England to continue Norwegian support of the Allies, although resistance to the German invasion ended at midnight of June 9.

The necessity of war forced on the Allies by the strife in other fronts, where all soldiers and all materials are necessary," the proclamation said.

"Norwegian soldiers, who during two months fought bravely, now have not ammunition and fighting forces enough at end can no longer fighting against the German power."

"It may seem without sense to go to the north now, but we must see things from the point of view of the war. Dr. Koht declared in his broadcast speech.

"One may direct reproach at the Allies, but the war of Norway and the world now lies on the Western front and the Allies must use every plane now is needed on the Western Front."

King Haakon's declaration was in his broadcast, and explained that Norwegian resources as well as soldiers withdrawn from the Narvik area would be used for the disposal of the Allies in France.

Royal Party Flies

The King's party was urged to go with the government but stayed behind to negotiate the evacuation of his remaining troops to the Germans, issued a statement declaring that they, in spite of the fact that we are not defeated," was abandoning its struggle to save the northern part of the country "before complete destruction."

Addressed to "Norwegian men and women," General Ruge's statement said:

"The first phase of the war is over. We are neither defeated nor beaten but the fight will continue at other fronts where there also are Norwegians.

"Keep in mind that time when we fought together as one man. We will not finish this war until we have liberated our Norwegian flag as free men."

Roosevelt to Discuss Over Radio War, International Relations Tonight

Stephen Early, White House Secretary, Describes Address as a "Very Important Pronouncement"

BROADCAST AT 7.15

Washington, June 10 (AP).—President Roosevelt will discuss the war and international relations this evening in a hastily-planned address at the University of Virginia's commencement exercises.

Stephen Early, a White House Secretary, made the announcement unexpectedly last midnight, describing the speech as a "very important pronouncement".

No hint was given as to its details, but there was speculation here that the President might touch on the international situation in his first address of any importance available to the public.

Major broadcasting companies were invited to carry the address which probably will be made between 7:15 to 7:30 p.m. E.D.T., and it will be heard throughout international seven languages.

Mr. Roosevelt began writing his address while on a week-end yacht trip down the Potomac, from which he returned yesterday afternoon.

While the President was occupied with the speech, Congressional leaders and the White House press pushed ahead rapidly with his defence recommendations and the Special Session Bill to pay for the military expansion.

Extensive senate debate was in prospect on the measure, expected to result in plans and arms to the original manufacturers so that they could be made available for the Allies and France. Attaches reported that several planeloads are awaited for time to discuss foreign policy.

Week-end Defence Developments

Here are the week-end developments included:

1. Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Rep.-Michigan) said in a radio speech that "isolation" is not the answer, but that "insulation" remains; that Americans no longer are neutral in spirit in the "present crisis".

2. Senator William King (Dem.-Utah) suggested that the United States and Canada lease British possessions in the Western Hemisphere for 99 years. He proposed that the United States purchase Greenland, that Canada be made a "co-trustee" to assure treatment in accord with British wishes.

3. Edwin S. Smith, member of the House Military Affairs Committee, in a speech that a "drive to identify American labor with a 'fifth column'" had been started by "those persons in and out of government who have vigorously opposed all forms of progressive (labor) legislation."

4. Representative Ditter (R.-Pa.) introduced a resolution to raise $1,094,000,000 a year in defence taxes will come before the House of Representatives next week and probably will be passed this week.

NEW ZEALAND WAR AGE KILLED

"Cobber" Kain Awarded D.F.C. for Gallantry in March Killed in Action

London, June 10 (CP).—The Empire's first air ace of the war, Flying Officer Jack Kain, of New Zealand, officially credited with more than five German planes shot down in action, has been killed, it was disclosed today.

The death resulted from a flying accident while on duty, not in action.

A New Zealander, Kain had recently been named to head a group of pilots with a bag of twenty or more" enemy planes on roving commissions.

Kain was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross last March for gallantry in attacking, with another plane, a formation of 36 bombers, and shooting them into German territory.

Previously "Cobber" had shot down five German planes—two of them bombers—in three Messerschmitt fighters. In one air battle he shot down three when his machine was "shot down.

He was wounded by shrapnel in his back and hands.

While on leave in England last year he married a nurse, Miss Agnes Jessie Phillips, 23-year-old actress.

McKim's Directory Just Off Press

Canada has one new daily newspaper, three new weekly publications and two new semi-monthly, four fewer monthly publications, according to the 1940 (the thirty-first) issue of McKim's Advertising Directory of Canadian Publications, just off the press.

The publication, in the tradition of its predecessors, summarizes exhaustive information on markets, media and population of Canada, thus constituting an industrial analysis reference of all towns having 5,000 population.

In the preface of the current edition, under the heading of "Advertising in War Time" it is pointed out that "in the first World War and in the reconstruction period which must follow, advertising will have to play a new and enormous role in the solution of many new burdens . . . analysis and understanding of more than unreasoning fear and excessive caution will be the result in terms." Reference is made, in this connection, to the Canadian Advertising book of the year, The Story of Advertising in Canada! A Chronicle of Fifty Years, by Stuart Cameron and Carlton McNaught and published in May, 1940, wherein it is entitled "The War (1914-1918) and Its Aftermath" is discussed.

The Directory is published by A. McKim Limited Advertising Agency, head office, Montreal, with offices branches at Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver and London, England.

ANDRE VERDIER GIVEN 6 MONTHS IN REFORMATORY

President of Aircraft Corporation Convicted of Using Subversive Language

WRITTEN JUDGMENT

Andre Verdier, President of the Verdier Aircraft Company of Greenville, was sentenced to serve six months in the Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate E. E. Butler, K.C., when he appeared for sentence in police court today. An additional six months' indeterminate term was also imposed, the maximum sentence, however, is to be dated from the time of Verdier's arrest last month.

Magistrate Butler also ordered the confiscation of the type-written copy of an alleged anti-Semitic book, entitled "The Dice are Thrown", a book that was to have been published by Verdier in addition to books in Canada. All data compiled by Verdier on the subject will be turned into the possession of the Minister of Justice Department at Ottawa, His Worship announced today.

Charles A. Payne, K.C., appearing for the accused, contended that certain inferences made were irrelative to the case, as he noted the sentences imposed, under similar circumstances, at Saskatoon, Toronto and Quebec, "I saw by the paper where a woman was only fined $5.00 for shooting 'hell Hitler' in the presence of Canadian soldiers", pointed out Mr. Payne.

"This is a much different matter. The accused can't help the stench of allegiance to His Majesty and frankly I feel he has been guilty of gloating over the movement of the enemy," replied Crown Attorney R. C. Dominick, K.C., in rebuttal.

Judgment Given

In passing sentence Magistrate Butler said:—

"This case is charged under Section 39 of the Defence of Canada Regulations, and is the first case in Ontario, between the first day of April 1940 and the third day of May of the spread reports, or make statements likely to cause disaffection to His Majesty, or to prejudice the efficiency of His Majesty's forces."

"I have carefully weighed the evidence of the parties testifying, and noted very carefully, the very able arguments put by both Counsels, but I can come to no other conclusion, than that the accused is guilty as charged. The evidence of Mr. Fred Stoneman, and of Mrs. Hazel Poste, clearly indicates that he used the language set forth in the evidence, which is in direct contravention of the act. There is further very strong evidence of Dr. Blanchett, as to statements made, also the evidence of John W. Lindsay, which has convinced me, that the accused did use language sworn to, and that the same was contrary to the act and the regulations, to cause great discouragement amongst the civil or enlisted forces of men, for service. The evidence of the accused is contradictory of statements made by witnesses, but Mr. Blackwell is quite clear, in several statements, from time to time, made by the accused. The evidence of Mr. Mills on behalf of the accused is only general. The attitude of the accused were contrary to what one might expect from anyone who claims to be a British subject. It is very hard to believe that anyone can claimthe allegiance to the British Crown, would use the language, I am convinced the accused did use as sworn to.

There were several exhibits filed. I refer particularly to "exhibit 8", written by the accused, which indicates the identical policy used by the man, who is now engaged as chief dictator of Europe. It also appears that the company which was formed, to construct an airport has done nothing whatever, or in any way perfected their plans.

Consequently I find the accused guilty as charged, and impose a penalty of six months definite in Ontario Reformatory and a further indeterminate period of not more than six months."

RUSSIA, JAPAN SIGN AGREEMENT

Manchoukuo - Outer Mongolian Boundary Dispute Settled

Moscow, June 10—(AP)—Signing of an agreement today and defining the Manchoukuo-outer Mongolian boundary, ended a dispute which produced several years of sporadic fighting, left Russia free today to concentrate her attention on the complex European situation.

Announcement of the signing of the agreement coincided with resumption of normal diplomatic relations with Italy and the immediate arrival in Moscow of new British and French Ambassadors.

The British and French Ambassadors en route to Moscow are Sir Stafford Cripps and M. Labonne.

(In London diplomatic circles expressed belief that Sir Stafford might be able to make progress toward an agreement with Premier Stalin if the latter is sufficiently concerned over German military successes and the extension of Nazi influence in northern Europe. Other sources asserted that Stalin is angling for a new bargain with the Rome-Berlin axis.)

Two Munitions Plants To be Built in Canada

Ottawa, June 10—(CP)—In association with the British and French Governments, Canada will begin construction immediately on two munitions plants with a combined total capitalization of $20,000,000, it was announced today by Munitions Minister Howe.

One of the plants will be a shell filling plant and will cost approximately $8,000,000 and the other will produce nitro cellulose explosives and will cost about $12,000,000. The British and Canadian Governments share jointly in work of the first and the French and Canadian governments in the second.

"The plants are in addition to the huge explosives plant now nearing completion in Northern Ontario," the announcement said.

The Canadian Car and Foundry Company, Limited, Toronto, has been awarded contract for construction of the shell filling plant. The name of the builders of the second and the location of the plant was not disclosed.

Italy Not Prepared For Marathon War

Possibility of French Mountain Troops and Border Forces Amputating 'Italian Boot' is Foreseen—Allied Mediterranean Fleets May Cut Their Lifelines from Italian African Empire — British and French Fleets Have Strong Hold on Mediterranean

By The Associated Press

Italy, by the nature of her geographical position and resources, is not regarded as in any condition for a marathon war.

Consequently:

The Italian boot dangles into the sea with the Mediterranean on the side and the Adriatic on the other. Behind it, ringing Italy, are the most mountainous section of the European continent, with the nations on France, Switzerland, German Austria and Yugoslavia.

Unless Italy could create sufficient diversion elsewhere, French mountain troops and border forces in the Nice region might amputate the Italian boot while the Allied Mediterranean fleets cut the tenuous lifelines from the Italian African Empire.

The French and British battleships have a big preponderance on the Mediterranean, confronted only by Italy's power in the air, her relatively small fleet and the lurking submarine menace such as the Sues Canal and Gibraltar.

War Chances

Nine million soldiers (according to Mussolini) are under arms on the Italian side. In 1935, he could muster that number of men between the ages of 18 and 32. Today, that 9,000,000 would be first line combatants. Behind them, Italy's strategists have fused to splits the American flag, maintaining that the Italian soldier's forbade allegiance other than to the Deity. A fist fight developed at last time.

Robbesca and McDonald told police that they were fined $10 each after they sat in an automobile near the sect's headquarters. Witnesses were returning from a dance, they said, and had no intention of disturbing the religionists, who previously had complained to police that they had received threats.

Secretary of Disturbances

The shooting was followed by a succession of disturbances during which a mob of 1,200 gathered in the group's headquarters twice before it was levelled by fire. Another mob of 1,000 stormed the ford apartment house, police said, dragged two men from the building and "roughed" them and threatened another before he was convinced that he was not a member of the sect.

Police had to place at least two men in protective custody and escort several more to safety before the disturbances ended. Authorities said they had to use five rifle and two shotguns in the group's headquarters.

The French army, staging a desperate battle against a powerful German right wing attempting to reach a sector NOW at Paris from the west, checked Nazi attempts to advance beyond the Seine River, the high command said.

150 NAZI TANKS DESTROYED BY R. A. F. BOMBERS

These Tanks Had Smashed Their Way Through Left Flank of Allied Forces

CONVOYS CONFUSED

London, June 11 (CP).—Authoritative British sources today reported that 150 German tanks which smashed their way through the left flank of the allied lines along the lower Seine had been destroyed by Royal Air Force bombers.

The Air Ministry news service reported that British bombers had carried out a series of devastating raids in the Ruhr industrial area and inflicted heavy damage on German supply lines and artillery emplacements in northern France.

"Armored vehicles and mechanized columns which filtered through the left wing of the allied defences south of the River Bresle have been hunted and repeatedly attacked by strong forces of R.A.F. medium bombers during yesterday's daylight operations over the western front," the Air Ministry said.

"In brilliant sunshine with perfect visibility the raiders flew low above main roads and woods attacking moving columns with bombs and machine-gun fire throwing convoys into confusion with salvos of high explosive.

"In a series of intensive attacks a large force of raiders destroyed after dark 1,000 lorries and a number of various types within a period of 13 minutes."

Forces of Liberty Will Rally to Meet New Enemy Challenge Says Mr. King

Prime Minister Broadcasts Speech in Which He Reviewed the Swiftly Moving Events of the Day

ROGERS' DEATH TRAGIC

Ottawa, June 11 (CP).—Forces of liberty will rally to meet the new challenge of Italy's entry into the war at Germany's side, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the Canadian people in a speech broadcast over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation today.

Recalling his speech of Friday night in which he said new and old records would rally to the allied cause if new enemies rose against it, he told the United States as one of the nations he had in mind.

He cited a speech broadcast by President Roosevelt earlier Monday as evidence.

Nazis Throwing Every Single Thing Into Battle Say British Military Men

London, June 11 (CP)— British military circles said today Germany was "throwing every single thing they've got into this battle because they've got to win it to win the war."

"No doubt in the next few days the battle will be the greatest attack man has ever spent," a spokesman said, adding that the casualties of the attacker must inevitably be greater than that of the defenders.

He cited Hitler's attack on Hitler yesterday which he said had gained little by any "progress" while the losses of men and tanks were "colossal."

The withdrawal of Allied troops from Narvik, Norway, he continued, was made only after the port was rendered useless for months to come and when it became known that ships, men and guns used there were "required more urgently elsewhere."

Military circles said Italy entered the war for one or two reasons—because Mussolini thought Hitler was winning or because Hitler ed. needed help.

Another British spokesman said, had 70 to 80 mobilized divisions, an air force and a navy and has greatly increased the opposition. Italian forces, he added, would be more effective under German command than they were under Italian command in the last war.

Reviewing possible points for Italian attack, he said Corsica was reported to be the easiest, but that the French Riviera and Nice, which she would be "tough nuts to crack."

Heat and lack of water made impossible any large-scale attack in the African desert, he said.

Military circles said there were about 200,000 white troops in Libya already short of water and unless help was able to keep her lines of communication and supplies open "then men must die." Another 50,000 white troops in Abyssinia face extermination, he said.

Economically Italy will not prove a asset to Germany, forced as she is to obtain coal from Germany and oil from Rumania, he declared.

Gliding and motorless flight. There are over 180 gliding clubs in the United States, and every active member is interested in basic meteorology. They all know that in gliding the pilot takes advantage of rising currents; if not vertically ascending currents then of winds that blow upwards to some extent. The more vertical currents are called "thermals" because the air rises from overheating of the ground beneath. The less vertical currents, called "slope currents," are caused by wind blowing upward against a slope such as the side of a mountain ridge. In long flights pilots make use of both types, or, as is frequently the case, of mountain slopes of both kinds, "thermals" and "slope currents," met with in the same locality.

'VULTURE' SAYS HANSON

With One Voice Parliament Approves Canada's Entry Into State of War With Italy

Ottawa, June 11—(CP)—By declaration of the parliament of Canada, this nation today stood more resolutely than ever beside Britain and France against the newly declared enemy of the Allied cause, Italy.

With one voice parliament yesterday endorsed Prime Minister Mackenzie King's resolution approving "the entry of Canada into a state of war with Italy."

It followed close on Italy's declaration of war against the Allies. With unanimity the Prime Minister and Opposition Leader Hanson condemned the Italian action. Neither pulled punches in referring to Italy's Il Duce.

"A carrion bird of prey waiting for brave men to die," was Mr. King's appraisal. Mr. Hanson, who seconded Mr. King's resolution, spoke briefly of Mussolini as a "vulture."

Material Resources Of U. S. Pledged For Use by Allies

MANY RIOTS

British Resentment is Displayed When Rioters Smash Store Fronts of Italians in U.K.

London, June 11 (CP).—A surprising series of violent demonstrations in which Britons expressed their resentment at Italy's entrance into the war preceded a statement today by Prime Minister Churchill on the general war situation.

Mindful with outward evidences of anger at Italy were expressions of approval for President Roosevelt's speech last night in which he pledged the material resources of the United States to the aid of the allies.

The press gave almost as much attention to the President's speech as to Italy's declaration of war, and official sources applauded his words as encouraging the allies to "fight with greater confidence."

"The material resources of the United States, added to those of the allies," said one spokesman, "will prove to be a vital factor in the struggle now going on between the democracies of the west and the anti-Christian forces of barbarism."

In London, Liverpool, Edinburgh and other populous centres angry crowds participated last night in wild riots, hurling bricks and bottles through Italian store fronts before they could be checked by police.

'Criminal Act of Common Murderer' Says Duff Cooper of Mussolini

London, June 11—(CP)—Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information in a broadcast last night after Italy's declaration of war, said Mussolini's act was "the criminal act of a common murderer" and predicted that "because we are the Italians of old, we can never fail to defeat them somewhere on the field of battle."

He said that Italy's act "will be remembered for generations as one of the vilest acts in history."

"When a whole nation put their faith into the hands of one bad man they become sooner or later both the accomplices and the victims of his crime," Mr. Duff Cooper said.

"Today the Italian people are the accomplices of Mussolini."

Mr. Duff Cooper recalled that Garibaldi, liberator of Italy during the last century, "registered the debt his country owed to Great Britain when he called down a curse upon any Italian government that, in the future, should fight against the country that had saved Italy.

"That prophetic curse will assuredly be fulfilled," he predicted.

KING OF ITALY EXHORTS TROOPS TO FACE TRIALS

Proclamation Says King Entrusts Mussolini With Command of All Troops

Rome Newspaper Warns Italy Not to Expect Victory Without Bitter Fighting

Rome, June 11 (AP)—King Vittorio Emanuele, went to the front today as Italy went into the European war after nine months of nonbelligerency.

In a proclamation dated from the "zone of operations," the monarch exhorted his armed forces "of the land, sea and air" to prepare themselves "to face difficult tests" in the fight with Germany against Great Britain and France.

The proclamation said that the king entrusted to Premier Mussolini "command of troops operating on every front."

The Italian people began their day somewhat anxiously when and where their armies were striking or being struck first.

No Mention of Hostilities.

Morning newspapers told them nothing of hostilities, but continued to stress Italy's value to Germany in tying up numerous French divisions on the Italian and Libyan borders and in keeping important British fleet units in the Mediterranean.

The Rome newspaper Il Messagero warned Italians not to expect victory without bitter fighting.

The announcement of war, ranging Italy on the side of her axis partner, Germany, became effective at midnight (6 p.m. EST Monday).

Berlin reports that Italian troops had advanced into the French Riviera lacked confirmation here (They were made before Italy's declaration) legally became effective.)

Premier Mussolini's war announcement yesterday sought to narrow the probable front by excluding Switzerland, the Italian neutrals, as long as they observe strict neutrality, said Rzyp.

This meant, however, that fighting might be expected anywhere from the difficult terrain along the French frontier to the stretches of African desert bordering Egypt and French Tunisia.

The midnight deadline passed without event in Rome, which was blacked out. Street-helmeted blackshirt troops patrolled the city through the night.

Mr. Attlee Praises President Roosevelt's Message as Worthy of "Great Republic Sending Whole of America's Sympathies to Those Nations Who Are Giving Their Lifeblood in Combat, Against Forces of Hate"

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 11 (CP). — British and French naval power already has started to sweep Italian shipping off the seas, Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, told the house of Commons today. The British navy has seized 14 Italian ships, 10 others are in British ports, and three have been scuttled.

"We are not dismayed," Mr. Attlee declared after pouring invective on Mussolini for throwing his country into the war on the side of Germany.

Roosevelt's Assurances Cheer.

President Roosevelt's assurances that the material resources of the United States would be placed at the side of the allies were heard in Britain and France with the greatest satisfaction, the minister said.

"It makes it heavier," Mr. Attlee declared, while the House punctured his phrases with prolonged cheers, "however hard the road, that the cause of civilization will in the end prevail."

Mr. Attlee filled in for Prime Minister Churchill, who was prevented from appearing in the House by the rapidly changing military situation caused by Italy's declaration of war. Usually Mr. Attlee is soft spoken, employs language and mild by tone, but today he echoed the thoughts of everyone in this country when he castigated Mussolini and

Shipping Lost During Week is 78,715 Tons

London, June 11 (CP).—The Admiralty announced today that the total of British merchant shipping lost by enemy action during the week ending midnight Sunday was 78,715 tons, of which 34,000 tons were lost during evacuation of Allied troops from Flanders through Dunkirk, France.

Excluding the Dunkerque withdrawal, the Admiralty listed losses for the week:

Allied—4 ships, 17,913 tons.
Neutral—3 ships, 7,933 tons.

Garage Operators To Bring 'Safety Lane' Equipment to City

"Safety Lane" equipment over which the automobiles in Belleville and immediate district may have a thorough check-up will be brought to Belleville, Trenton and Picton in the near future was the information arrived at during the regular monthly dinner meeting of Hastings and Prince Edward Garage Operators' Association, held Monday evening in the Queen's Hotel. It was decided that the committee appointed would arrange all details regarding bringing this equipment to Belleville for which the Garage Operators would be required to pay the transportation charges from point to point and the expenses of the supervisor, who travels with the equipment. A charge of twenty-five cents per car tested will be made to help defray expenses incurred.

The matter of arranging a set price for safety lane inspection regardless of whether they were fleet owners, was to be considered at the meeting, as it had been impossible to line up with the association's price for fleets in Toronto in the city. The idea was to decide who should get the discount and how much, President J. Trudeau stated, but until all garages in the city co-operate nothing could be accomplished.

Operators to Hold Picnic

It was revealed that when gasoline rationing has been accounted for gasoline, which could not be collected, there was a fund set by the government for the return of gas tax to these companies on the meeting empowered the directors to learn if a like arrangement could not be had in this district. Plans were formulated for the Garage Operators' annual picnic and it was decided to hold the picnic at Oak Lake during the second week in August.

Kenneth Vivian gave the report of the entertainment committee revealing that an increase each year in the number of members. Eleven new names for the approval of the meeting.

Mr. Fred J. Hawes, Director of Apprenticeship Department of Labour, Toronto, was the guest speaker of the evening, and gave an interesting talk to the Garage Operators on the advantages of having highly trained mechanics working in their shops. He told that his department in Toronto was giving a course to assistants through technical training schools, and to give boys a thorough training in mechanics. He referred to the growth of the automobile industry saying that there were 11,000 garages in Ontario with over 18,000 men engaged in repair work. In order to ensure the replacement of these men, there should be 1,000 boys learning the trade and learning it right. The rural public is not wholly confident of garages they do not know as the necessity of fully-trained mechanics is appreciated he said. In closing he assured aid to the local branch of the Garage Operators in any difficulty that may arise, if something doesn't agree, bring it to the meeting for discussion or advise his committee, he advised.

Mr. Jack Marriott of the Dominion Company gave an interesting picture proscreening selling methods, flame silhouettes, casting rods and fluxes for a variety of common species. Reports of this he showed a movie reel "Oxy-Welding for Profits" showing the many different jobs which the welders could turn their handicraft into profits.

Mr. Walter Asselstine, George Asselstine and J. Asselstine, as the "Saxophone Trio," gave several musical numbers for the enjoyment of the members, and on behalf of the bourne of the R.C.A.F. gave several delightful violin solos. Mr. J. Orchard acted as pianist.

Inspecting Officer Praises School Cadets of Belleville

"Belleville school cadets are very well trained," declared Captain A. Oaks of Military District No. 3 Headquarters, Kingston, today, speaking to the Belleville Rotary Club yesterday. "It is a fine thing to know how to drill," he continued. Belleville has kept alive the spirit and training of cadets," he declared.

Captain Oaks praised the fine organization of the Belleville girls' cadet corps, whose smartness will go a long way towards sprucing up the boys," he observed.

The Rotary Club was asked to assist in conserving the wrong impression existant about cadet training.

"The cadet corps are not military organizations" Captain Oaks declared, but they provide steadiness, discipline and self-assurance which enabled the cadets ever be faced with the necessity of military service," he declared.

Lieut. Col. Ponton, Belleville, a member of the Montreal Amateur Baseball League and Parisite, its farm team in the International League, announced the operations following entry of Italy into the conflict. Majority of the men, members of the senior team, champions three times in the last four years, are Italian-Canadians.

Toronto — A steady flow of new supplies is going overseas as a result of the Canadian Red Cross recent urgent appeal to women throughout the country to increase their activities, Miss Constance Campbell, national chairman of the Red Cross War Work Committee, announced yesterday.

"The response has been marvellous," she said. "Our enormous stocks of hospital supplies in England have been made available to the British and French Red Cross without stint. The conflict now raging makes our fullest co-operation and generosity not only necessary, but imperative.

"Articles are going out in thousands to relieve the urgent calls," Mrs. Campbell continued, "the appalling losses of British and French Red Cross supplies, as well as the terrific number of sick and injured among the wounded of our own and allied forces, makes replacements of our stocks in our warehouses in England a pressing responsibility."

Along with her tribute to the way the women of Canada have rallied to the call, Mrs. Campbell gave a word of caution:

"To meet our needs wisely and to make both effort and funds most effective, everyone should bear in mind the fact that the most-needed articles should be produced first. All work centres and canvassers should confer to use up all the materials they have on hand, for the purpose for which they were intended."

Mrs. Campbell advised women to "Think first." This will avoid its demands made equal calls upon everyone's purse.

"Remember," she continued, "there are many things greatly needed by the Red Cross of the Allies that we women cannot supply, while others in our provision must be made for these.

"Let the true spirit of service prevail. Do the job nearest at hand, grateful for the privileges of serving our Empire from the present crisis, Canada and pray that our small effort may contribute to the alleviation of the horrible suffering of our own people and our allies."

"It is as necessary now as it was when we began our work to make every dollar go as far as possible. There must be no slackening in the quality of work."

CANADIAN NAVY GOES INTO ACTION IN HOME WATERS

Italian Freighter, Capo Noli, Captured After Attempted Scuttling by Crew in St. Lawrence

BOAT SET AFIRE

By the Canadian Press

Italy's declaration of war on the United Kingdom was the signal given Dominion Government authorities and stirred the ire of Canada's "man-on-the-street."

At Ottawa yesterday, soon after Benito Mussolini announced that Italy was at war with France and Britain, Parliament endorsed Prime Minister Mackenzie King's resolution appointing "the state of Canada into a state of war" with the Fascist kingdom.

Meanwhile Canadian and Opposition Leader Hanson spoke harshly of Premier Il Duce, referring to him as "a carion bird of prey waiting for brave men to die." Mr Hanson termed him a "vulture."

Entry of Italy into the war brought the conflict into Canadian waters for the first time in the present struggle. The Italian freighter Capo Noli was run aground in the St. Lawrence River and fired by her crew, seeking unsuccessfully to evade capture by Canadian authorities.

The 3,321-ton vessel was beached on the north west tip of an island four miles from the town of Iroquois, 115 miles east of Montreal City, yesterday afternoon, a few hours after Italy entered the war.

She had been shadowed since she left Montreal early the previous night and was overtaken by the Canadian Government minesweeper, H.M.C.S. Bras D'Or.

Lieut. Tarrant Dyer in Command

The minesweeper took off the Italian crew and turned them over to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

A fire tug, it was said here, was en route from Quebec to aid in fighting the flames in the vessel's hold. The Bras D'Or also went to work to quench the blaze.

It was the first act of war in Canadian waters since the outbreak of conflict and the declaration of war caught the Italian ship driving for the open sea under the Canadian minesweeper hot on her trail.

When the word of the Canadian Parliament's decision to declare a state of war between Canada and Italy was made known the Bras D'Or ordered the Capo Noli to stop.

The crew of the Capo Noli ran her (the Italian ship) aground on Big Island and set her afire," said a Defence Department announcement.

"The Bras D'Or however, closed in, put a prize crew aboard the Capo Noli and swiftly made prisoners of the Italian crew.

"The Italians were later handed over to the R.C.M.P. after the boat was sent from Quebec to the scene of the attempted scuttling."

The Capo Noli is a 1,000 ton freighter. She was 385 feet in length with a 50-foot beam.

Canadians Angered

Canadians generally were angered by Italy's "stab in the back" and in Toronto a riot call was reported in violence.

Several minor disturbances were reported there and police stood guard in Italian centres of population throughout the city. A number of Italian-owned establishments were closed.

In Nova Scotia, Canadian-born miners, refusing to work with Italian-born men, tied up three Dominion Coal Company collieries in the south Cape Breton district and left another working at half capacity. About 1,000 men were affected.

Operations were halted in two pits in the Glace Bay area and in the New Waterford district. The New Waterford pit hoisted coal at half its normal capacity.

Ottawa — Director of Unemployment Relief, E. A. Hoey, announced that more than 2,000 Italian families, regarded as enemy aliens, have been struck off relief rolls effective today.

The action, effective today, was in accordance with a ruling last fall that all non-naturalized enemy aliens be dropped from relief lists.

From across the country came expressions of loyalty to the Empire as a number of Italian organizations.

Reputable Duce's Action

At Fort William, Ont. this Friday night, a resolution unanimously passed a resolution saying: "We view with disgust the deepest regret and wish publicly to repudiate the action of Italy's misguided leader and the Fascist Party of Italy, in declaring war against the British Empire and Canada."

A similar affirmation of loyalty was made by Italian Canadians at Le Presti, President, on behalf of the largely Italian Independent Workmen's Benevolent Association.

Delegates from Montreal lodges of the Italo-Canadian Order and from the Italo-Canadian Veterans of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada pledged loyalty to the Empire in a resolution adopted at a meeting in Montreal last night.

Parents' Night Brings Large Crowds To Tweed Consolidated School

Tweed — Parents' Night was held in Tweed Consolidated School on Friday evening, June 7th., with a splendid attendance of interested parents and friends of the children. A fine program of choruses, part-songs, piano solos and selections from the readers were enjoyed. Short addresses of interest to pupils and parents alike were given by Rev. A. E. Pepper, Captain Bonar, Rev. H. L. Morrison and Inspector A. W. McGuire, all of whom stressed the importance of the work of the school in the training which it gives the children to fit them to make a useful contribution to their country in the years that lie ahead. The speakers complimented the children on their fine program numbers and added a word of appreciation to the members of the staff for their splendid work which they are doing. Mr. Lincoln Elliott, Chairman of Tweed Consolidated School Board, acted as chairman and performed his duties in a very capable manner.

Through the practical interest of some of the merchants, prizes were donated to be awarded for meritorious work in Crafts and Home Economics, courses which have been conducted for more than twenty years and in the conduct of which Tweed Consolidated School has been a pioneer in this section of the province. The sewing of the girls, which was on display in the Household Science room, was of an excellent character. This work is taught by Miss Catharine McQuarrie and Miss Mabel Gunning. The judging was done by Mrs. J. D. Reeves and Miss Margaret Kerr who awarded the prizes to Thelma Fisher and Marian Pattison. These prizes were donated by Belch's Drug Store and Bonar's Dress Store.

Some very fine wooden articles, including magazine racks, tables, low stands, towel racks, book-ends, etc., were on display in the Manual Training room, the work of the boys of grades six, seven and eight, who are instructed by the principal Mr. S. H. Connor. Their work was judged by Mr. Burton Thompson of the staff of Joe Rashotte's Sash and Door Factory. Mr. Thompson in himself a graduate of the Manual Training department of Tweed Consolidated School and an expert in all branches of wood-working. The prizes were awarded as follows:—Grade 6, Glenn Connor; Grade 7, Sam Fisher; Grade 8, Stewart Elliott. These prizes were donated by Tweed Hardware, H. O. Myles Hardware and Kent and Co.

The presentation of the prizes for Home Economics and Crafts were made by Mr. C. Graham, Secretary-Treasurer of Tweed Consolidated School Board, who stressed the value of this phase of the school program.

Of particular interest on the program was a piano solo by John Fenwick, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Roy Fenwick (nee Evelyn Ellis, a former teacher on the staff of Tweed Consolidated School) and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Ellis, Tweed. The young artist played from memory the difficult Clementi Sonatina in C major. The singing of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and "Sweet and Low," arranged for soprano, alto and tenor, was especially inspiring. These numbers were unaccompanied and were directed by Miss Lois Richardson, teacher of music of the school, who also directed the unaccompanied numbers and played the accompaniments for choruses which were directed by the principal, S.H. Connor. The audience was thrilled by the rendition of "There'll Always Be An England," a song which has swept through England and Canada during the past few weeks and has served to strengthen faith in the successful outcome of the war.

The following is the complete program:

The presentation was made at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Ryan.

According to the local Forestry Branch 6.68 inches of rain fell in Tweed during the month of May. Most of the precipitation occurred during the last few days of the month. This record has been surpassed only once during the past twelve years, in March 1936, when 8.78 inches of rain fell.

Mr. G. Roy Fenwick, Director of Music for the Department of Education in the Province of Ontario, attended the musical festivals in several centres in Eastern Ontario last week, including Kingston and Arnprior. He also visited a number of schools in the Flinton district.

On Friday afternoon he visited Tweed Consolidated School while a rehearsal was being conducted for Parents' Night which was held in the evening. Speaking to the children at the conclusion of the program Mr. Fenwick complimented them on their excellent singing. During the past two months he said that he had heard at least twenty-five thousand children sing at festivals and concerts in all parts of the province and that the singing of the children of Tweed Consolidated School compared favorably with the best that he had heard anywhere. Their tone, enunciation, phrasing, shading, absence of harshness or hint of forcing, were evidences of the excellent training, which they had received. Mr. Fenwick referred also to the excellent accompaniments rendered this June by Richardson, teacher of music, and the school choir, on their very fine work.

An operator of the eighties

BETTER and better mechanical equipment has played a great part in telephone service. But the human element—the men and women who make the equipment serve you so quickly and accurately—has been an all-important factor.

Telephone employees are your friends and neighbors, fellow citizens of your local community. Their most cherished aim is to provide telephone service that is efficient, speedy, and as nearly flawless as it can be made.

More than that — they lay great emphasis on courtesy, on being as helpful as they can in everything that pertains to your telephone. The famous phrase, "The Voice with a Smile" expresses their way of work and service.

Bell employees have made a great contribution to our sixty years of successful operation. It is to them in large measure, that Canada owes its world leadership in the use of the telephone.

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER — published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

TRAGIC DEATH OF MINISTER OF NATIONAL DEFENCE

The entire Dominion of Canada was shocked by the news of the tragedy which befell the Hon. Norman Rogers, Canadian Minister of National Defence on Monday afternoon while flying to Toronto to make an address. He travelled by air in order to expedite his return to Ottawa to take his place in the Commons yesterday afternoon. With three airmen he lost his life near Newtonville when the plane crashed in a swamp.

News of the tragedy will be keenly felt in the Motherland from which he had recently returned, in France where he met the staff and visited the Maginot line and in the other Dominions.

The late Mr. Rogers had promised to address a Toronto meeting. It was thought that the absence of a minister from a public engagement at this time might cause undue alarm.

Veteran of the Great War he has lost his life for his country as did the airmen in the plane which was taking him to Toronto. The nation will mourn his passing with a sense of personal sorrow.

During the recent election Mr. Rogers spoke in Belleville and those whom he met were charmed with his personality, his sincerity and his earnestness.

The late Minister of National Defence was a brilliant student, a Rhodes scholar and a professor of history, he was private secretary to Prime Minister King and has been in the latter's cabinet since 1935. He was at first Minister of Labor and since September 19, 1939 he had been Minister of National Defence.

A very fitting tribute was tendered his memory in the Commons when Prime Minister King broke down while on the crowded chamber and recalled the last words of Mr. Rogers "I will carry on." Later referring to the engagement to go to Toronto.) The Prime Minister said this would no doubt be the last message the late Minister of National Defence would have given his colleagues and the people of Canada.

Mr. King's words, spoken in a broken voice, showed the depth of his feeling for his brilliant young colleague. He said he had never known a more faithful public servant, "never a more beautiful character" than Mr. Rogers. The eyes of other members of the House were filled with tears.

Mr. Rogers carried on. His duty took him to his death. The man who as a young man fought gallantly as a private soldier as a private soldier was devoted to his country, served her in days of peace and in the time of war.

The loss of the Hon. Mr. Rogers will be keenly felt by the Government in a time when defence problems and the prosecution of the war are of paramount importance to the Dominion and the Empire.

MUSSOLINI PLUNGES INTO WAR

The Fascist Government of Italy has joined the German Reich in the endeavor to crush freedom and liberty from the earth. The Axis agreement is to be carried out, Hitler the master of the Axis, has the Italian dictator lending a hand in the attempt at destruction.

Mussolini's action is to stab the French, a kindred race in the back, and the best friend Italy has ever had among the nations, Great Britain, who helped her become a united people out of a number of weak states, which had been a prey to all sorts of political evils. It is the greatest betrayal in private life in history, done in cold blood and in practical calculation. Mussolini has sold Italy to Nazi barbarism on the promise of a division of spoils if the totalitarians should win. In fact Hitler by his actions during the past years has steadily been becoming the serf of the dictator, Hitler. Hitler is pompous, blusterous thrive swordrattler. He has thrown away his honor when he strikes against civilization, whose defenders France and Britain are. In doing that Hitler is the enemy of faith, civilization and brotherhood has been joined by a fellow conspirator against justice and right.

The tragedy is the sacrifice by Mussolini of all that is best in Italian ideals and life in his greedy hope of sharing in conquest which he so much coveted. He has led Italian youth from the true path to follow that of rapine, war and death.

The Prime Minister might well refer to him as "a carrion bird of prey waiting for the moment to die," and Opposition Leader Hanson to speak of Il Duce as a "vulture."

The tragedy is that she allowed this dictator to arise, turn the course of Italian history from path into war and destruction, make her betray her friends and the noblest ideals of democracies fight against tyranny. Mussolini is a tyrant and despot and he has joined his country to its greatest foe.

The Government of the dictator Mussolini had come to the end of its resources-war. Dictators can go so far in blustering and threatening and arming and in cajoling nations that they inevitably come to the end of the tether because their course is destined to war and ruin.

Nazi Germany entered the war with all the violence and brutality of which the Nazis are capable. The Fascists of Italy have seen the republic of Poland, in which they had taken great interest, violated by the Germans, they have waited for nearly ten months to strike in the hope that the Reich would be assured of victory. Yesterday the Italian King Emperor and Italian Duce went to war. The Fascists' Government's action is looked upon as the most despicable.

Nazism and Fascism are both revolutionary, they are the creeds by which the two dictators come to the top in their countries. Against Mussolini can be charged the unholy war against the Ethiopians and the role of playing a great part in Spain's civil war. Against Hitler can be charged the crime of being a petty seeker who could rise only by the urgings of his own revolutionary nature.

In the war's accounting Mussolini will go down as the great betrayer of the old time friendship of Britain and Italy. There is no cause but senseless, personal ambition, a greed for power and the exercise of militarism which has made him lead his Italy into the morass of war. He has linked a Christian country by the pagan Nazism of Hitler and has destroyed the Italian traditions of peace by grass by the Nazi wild dream of a greater empire.

Were Mussolini the idealist and noble Italian figure he pretends to be, he could not have let the troubles he had started. For the ideals for which Britain and France fought for four years are the same ideals as they fought for in 1914-1918. For those ideals Italy fought from May 1915 to November 1918 on the side of the Allies.

Mussolini has played a part in the Battle of Flanders and of the present struggle in keeping French troops occupied. He paid no price for this. But going to war he must pay the price of aggression, for if ever a leader of a people is an aggressor, it is Mussolini. His claim about Italy being fettered within the great Mediterranean is hollow babble, fit only for Fascist youths like Count Ciano and his ilk. The fascist revolutionist, has diverted the true course of Italy and his country must pay the price. Mussolini goes to war for conquest, of course, hoping that Germans will win and that he will get a fairly easy for him or have weakened the Allied position in the Mediterranean, but that he will find is untrue.

Nations bordering on the Mediterranean and on the Adriatic and other states of the Balkans will watch if force carefully in spite of his promises respecting the rights of neutrals. The man who went to war for the sake of ambition and power and broke his nation's tradition will be treated as an enemy. Nations will watch for possible aggression on his part.

Other events Mussolini can cause to pass in the region of the Mediterranean he remains the dictator and instead of vain bombast, how he has to fight because he elected to do so. His forces are ready for Italian action. They have honor and liberty as their watchword, they are not for destruction, but the fantastic claim which he all along has made, a claim which has no foundation than a thousand other foolish claims that might be made.

Weygand and Petain

It was, I believe, the chance of war and a great emergency that brought Foch, Joffre and Colonel Weygand, as he then was, together in the first battle of the Marne. It came legendary. Foch, on the eve of the battle of the Marne in 1914, was called upon to command what was called at first the Provisional army and later became an army. He was given Weygand as his chief of staff. Weygand was a brilliant staff officer, and one of the strangest friendships in the war was that he who had not been through the mill of the French staff system, which Foch knew and most brilliant staff officer of our time. Foch was a man who could not get well with Foch, who combined the two men was to strike a union not only a staff officer but a professor at the French Staff College, a barrier of leadership in war.

Foch was a man who expressed himself with great difficulty. His military conceptions were always set in metaphysical terms. It was Weygand who put them into language all could understand and enabled us to clear orders.

Weygand has always struck me as a Spanish grandee in appearance, prominent cheek-bones, alike of soft, a fine, sensitive mouth that used to be black and is now grey. Time has changed all his features, and emphasized his pointed chin, which is the spirit of the breed of the man at the very part of his face. He has always been a great man, with immense powers of work, and his mental powers are those of a great staff officer of a century ago.

We may be certain that Weygand did not accept blindly all of Foch doctrine. Foch was impervious to the counter-attack and he was able to and prove to be. Foch had the toughness and the fibre of Wellington's more metallic in Weygand's similar quality. Foch was always an aggressive soldier. Weygand, insofar as the means it will always act cautiously down as the same.

Weygand saw Foch in the second Battle of the Marne allow the Germans to pierce their line without permitting this to influence his dispositions for the counter-attack which eventually ended the situation. Weygand was at his side all the time. It was then that the Foch conduct of the Polish campaign Weygand was at his side. He noted there proved that he could carry out effectively a plan as well as his old chief.

He has to his hand a magnificent instrument, the French army, an infinitely finer instrument than it was in the days of Foch. Because of those days was untrained, the officers lacked experience and confidence in war conditions. The German army had enormous advantages over that of the French army learned its lesson as it retreated, and suffered as a result of unparalleled disasters and defeats the months of this French army has again been caught unawares by the new methods of warfare of the enemy has been entirely due to mechanization of the German army. We can hope that when Frenchmen and Germans are more equal, when the men who are fighting for their soil and their country will be fighting for soil whose only object is conquest and rapine.

The French armies deserve good commanders. Their officers are magnificent and are trusted and loved and respected by their men. General Georges, commanding the armies from Switzerland to North Sea, and General Weygand in supreme command, provide leadership of a quality that has never been surpassed.

And behind them, in Paris, Marshal Petain, the man who held Verdun in 1916, the man who pulled the armies of France together after the debacle of the Nivelle offensive in 1917, has been called to add wisdom and stability and resolution to the councils of the Cabinet. Marshal Petain rose to be commander-in-chief of the French armies in what were probably their most critical days. Of medium height, bald, has keen-eyed, with long white moustache, the impression this man of the days is of imperturbable calm. He is a native of Alre-sur-la-Lys on the borders of Flanders, where people are anything but effervescent. He is slow, deep and pleasant, his speech deliberate. Never does one think of his face moves but a talking business, never can a change in his light-colored eyes be detected.

Petain is a very clear thinker who takes time to give himself time for reflection. When he commanded a corps in front of Verdun I saw a good deal of him. He would walk in his garden, head down, pondering. When trench warfare set in he was the first to carry out a most satisfactory and brilliant local operation, taking a great number of prisoners, when he captured Souches and Achiet le Petit. He established a great fame at Verdun. He was always successful, for every operation he put in was just little ahead of the practice, theory and thought of the moment.

On May 15, 1917, after a very brief period as chief of staff and office corresponding to that of our C.I.G.S. in which he was succeeded by Gen. M. Painleve, then Minister of War, made him commander-in-chief. This was a time of maximum crisis, when the French army under the fine shadow of the terrible reverses of April 16, and a fearful discouragement had resulted, at least partially, even in spite of the grandiloquent promises and fantastic prognostications of the then higher command, when General Nivelle, the commander-in-chief, they had been hurled at German defences while were stronger, while their own preparations were weaker, than the year before on the Somme. The men murmured sullenly; then with a great outburst broke out into open mutiny. In an incredibly short time it was found that there were twenty-two divisions which were absolutely unreliable between Soissons and Paris.

Petain found the situation. Almost as quickly as it had spread the mutiny was suppressed. He used calm, method, and infinite patience and forbearance, he re-established order and discipline. Executions were clamored for, yet he only sanctioned 23.

The army recovered rapidly during the Summer of 1917. Small but well-planned and very successful operations at Verdun and Malmaison, the last the initiative in some 12,000 prisoners (I think 8,000 were captured on the first day) and re-established the morale, whilst German attacks on Champagne and on Dunes were repelled, and General Antoine's army, subordinated to Petain, remained unbroken and did extremely well in the North.

Every Allied country owes a debt of deep gratitude to Petain, for in saving the armies of France he saved the Allied cause. Great as were his achievements as a commander in the field, they pale before his splendid feat. A man of immense courage as is demonstrated by the way he who finally led the French armies to victory in 1918. He is 72 years older today than he was at the Armistice, but at 64 he has lost little of his mental vigor and nothing of the mental alertness which he manifested when the last war was ending. The combination of experience and knowledge to strike and a great moral which knows when to hold on to the shock should make Petain the confidence in the peoples both of Britain and of France.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The Battle of France resolves itself into a test of the endurance of the German armies.

So long as the Germans can keep up the pressure they are now applying to the outnumbered French army they continue in advance. Should the pressure slacken they will be halted, for despite withdrawals, the French army maintains its discipline, its organization and its co-ordination.

Yesterday's reports reference to the final quarter-hour has been interpreted as indicating a belief the Germans were making short of mechanized equipment and supplies. Certainly they have suffered heavy casualties and have now penetrated a great distance over difficult country which complicated their transportation problems.

The morale of the French position, however, is increased by the possibility of having to face a fresh German army that will continue in the German army shows signs of weariness and shortage of equipment.

The greatest German success in the present drive was attained on the west end of the line, near the coast where the enemy reached the Seine River. This part of the drive is of course aimed at cutting off Paris from the coast and from supplies coming from England.

"ON THE SECOND HAND"

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Prometheus Bound

The myth of Prometheus has always interested poets. Prometheus was the friend and benefactor of mankind. He defied Zeus, Jove, who, according to one version of the myth, created a race of inferior species, or, by a new and better version, wanted to avenge himself because men had not been duly grateful for Olympian gifts. Prometheus tricked him; he offered the Olympian, as a feast, chunks of sacrificial ox and Jove, thinking he was choosing the fat for himself, selected the bones, and the real meat was in the other package. Prometheus was punished with filth. Jove, to take revenge, withdrew the gift of fire from mankind. Prometheus stole it back. For this Jove chained him to a rock, and sent a vulture to tear out his liver for ours of time, until, at last, he was released by Jove's own son, according to the prophecy.

x x x

This nation of ours is like Prometheus bound. The genius of America is dual; the passionate idealism of our beginnings, the vision of a country that should be the benefactor of mankind. And the gifts of fire whose people were the surplus of the earth, the energy, the daring, the vital forces prayed upon his liver for ours of time, until, at last, he was released. Jove's own son, according to the prophecy.

This nation of ours is like Prometheus bound. The genius of America is dual; the passionate idealism of our beginnings, the vision of a country that should be the benefactor of mankind. And the gifts of fire whose people were the surplus of the earth, the energy, the daring, the vital forces that should be the new world, with a new vision. That is the genius of our nation.

And the genius of our hands has been invention. American hands have been bring down fire from heaven and put it at our service. What are the inventions of this great age of discovery and find the scientific, technological, the rationalized and mass-production industry, automobiles, aviation, the world-wide revolution of science, technology and invention. This country has been the torch bearer, the fire fighter, the forerunner. Of recent "violent hands and casual tongue" here, in the "Atlantic Monthly," Lewis is "moulding its mighty fate."

What has happened to this bright Prometheus, that has brought him, chained, exposed to the Eagle's swoop and the Vulture's beak? Why is he bound? Why is he bound, as bound we are? Did Jove forge the chains? Or are they of our unwittingly, out of a thousand threads?

Indeed we are. The vital energy of America pulls against the chains that bind our hands and our feet, our heart. The youth of America walks in idleness. The workers walk in idleness. The best brains among them are furious, the backs and arms are strong, but their hands stay. What are they saying, these? They are saying in every sense; work with their contemporaries and their fellows, in every sense a cause that makes sense. A cause. Something worth living for; something worth dying for.

We have inherited a great estate, and it is ours. The best people of the talents is revived, but who buries his talents in the ground is hated by his fellows, for he is contributing to militate over production! For the talent in the golden calf is supplanted by the symbol of the dollar. Workers are out of the mines from here and there throughout the country in sympathies—we demand of them that they shall pay more gold for the coal they need, in order to defend themselves; we call it cash and carry and we'll still keep on out of war. Since we have too much gold in the country the world will begin to plan for war.

Nobody is neutral except the indifferent. Indifference is indifferent, and so nobody is neutral. This is the fact. The fact is that nobody might induce us to do something that we do not understand, and bind ourselves hand and foot so that no ship can sail with supplies for the enemy; so that no doctor, bored with an office empty of patients, can go to a field where patients will at least murmur grateful words as they die; so that man full of ardor for a cause will express it in action, and the youth, out of sheer waste of surplus energy, kill themselves in every possible adventure driving automobiles too fast, we take every precaution to keep the best safety to walk the streets unwanted.

Our industry is the marvel of the world. On its model Hitler built up a machine to blow up the world. In our industries are the native hands and organizational and inventive brains which could create the plans by which this country could become the envy of the world—the furnace rooms and kitchens, playgrounds and churches, movies and the dwellings of the happiest and busiest of families, and with all that is needed to defend that estate at home and at its outposts.

We have family quarrels, and the estate is neglected. The power of the Prometheus has been cut off from the transmission system. Our hands are idle. We are not the most realistic and most creative brains of America, are given adequate social task.

The recognition that true self-interest comes from social interest is tardily composed by the law of balance is replaced by the law of competition between race and racial groups, with the result that the gentle gorilla and the tiger do not even balance.

Lacking any conceivable sort of right—it gets everything except work; three square meals a day, a bed, and even the respect of the community. The profits of effort, which should accrue to the whole society and invariably must so accrue with almost mathematical precision if only the simplest principles of justice and realism prevail, is either siphoned off to the least creative individuals or extorted by organized pressure.

There is in this people a vitality, a life-affirming will and an idealism that have not even been tapped yet. The power of this country is in the Government: it is spread about through millions of individuals, and though thousands can be put in motion with the greatest ease, the whole psychosis which binds us with procedures, which makes us subject to vested interests tripe up that power at every step until it is exhausted before the bound Titan.

To take a simple illustration: I am not a pacifist, and speaking in behalf of the Red Cross, I have pointed out that the most useful things we could do for humanity, in the present world, would be to take a hundred thousand Dutch, Belgian and French children and to care for them for the duration of the war.

We have every possible reason for doing this; not only consideration for humanity, but considerations of long-term self-interest. If not one child ever returned, or was turned, they would be a gift to America, that needs children. Every consideration of self-interest, if you so. We are getting to be an old population, and we want to live life and to the use of our powers as we grow old.

Furthermore, it could be done without the wasting of a single bureaucrat—with nothing from the Government except the permission to the Christian churches—or for that matter to the Boy Scouts and Women's Clubs—of the power to do it.

And they would do it supremely well. They would find a home for every child in the most wholesome habitable as possible with that child's own background, and they would do it speedily, efficiently and enthusiastically. It is against the rules of cards.

But the State Department won't let us, because it insists on formal procedures which are impossible in the emergency which matters, but which are impossible in the less important than the contest. And if the Government could do it through a network of bureaucracies and salaries—then nobody can do it.

x x x

We need not the restriction and regimentation of energy, but the production of energy by the release of co-ordinated communal action.

Lewis is moulding his mighty fate and leash it all to a common goal. We do not give "Stalin" finds some mischief stir for idle hands to do.

Rotary to Assist in Furnishing Hospitality Centre at Airport

Approximately $300 to be Contributed to Supplying Furniture to Equip Sitting Rooms

FILLS PRESSING NEED

Belleville Rotarians took immediate action at their regular luncheon meeting yesterday to assist in the furnishing of the Airport Hospitality Centre. Approximately $300 was contributed following a description of the project by Ed. Bernstein, chairman of the Rotary War Service Committee, and amplification by Mrs. Marion Hawson, who is to be the permanent hostess.

Mr. Bernstein said that the government had provided the double house on the north side of the Airport towards Trenton but that up to the present, the furniture consisted of two electric stoves. There is immediate need for the "Hospitality Centre," and the people of Belleville and Trenton were being asked to provide furniture so that it could be in full use within two weeks.

Mrs. Hawson told of the pressing need for a place in which relatives could greet them on arrival at the Airport. There are twelve rooms, most of which would be equipped as sitting rooms.

Mr. Andy H. Reekie, Y.M.C.A. officer at the Airport, was present to consult with the members regarding provision for entertainment of air force men in Belleville homes. Several men already have been taken for short visits to homes and summer cottages and on picnics. Mr. Reekie was willing to look after registrations at the Airport. He declared, that with very few exceptions the Airport personnel always conducted themselves as gentlemen.

Ross Neal asked all those who could entertain Air Force men next week end to advise him by Wednesday.

It was announced that the chairmen of various Rotary committees for the ensuing year, starting July first, are:

Club service, Irvine Hefkey; vocational service, Lloyd Hicks; International service, J. Owen Hertly; community service, Dave Martin; Rotary education, Oswald Scott; program, Jack Deacon; finance, Harold Sanders; membership, Ed. Bernstein; recretion, Bill Morrison; music, Leo Biggs; attendance, Chas. Plane Turned on Right Side And Kept on Without Slackening Speed Says Eyewitness of Crash

(Written for The Canadian Press by JAMES FARMER)

Newtonville, Ont., June 11 (CP).—I was standing on the lawn at the house next to the garage at dinner time when I saw the plane swing around and come back east. I thought something was wrong as the plane was flying low. It flew less than 100 feet over the service station across the highway. Its motors were roaring something awful. One of the boys said afterwards it sounded just like an old automobile with a busted crankshaft and the throttle wide open.

As the plane crossed the service station it turned on its right side and kept on without slackening speed. I called to Jack Elliott, who was in the house eating, and said: "My God, there's a plane going to crash."

Scraped Tree Tops

Then it started scraping the tree tops and cutting them off. The tree tops cracked and snapped. The motors were still roaring when it disappeared into the trees and a big flame shot up. It seemed to me the plane caught fire before it hit the ground because I saw fire as the trees were snapping.

Jack and I ran across the field as those flames were shooting up. They must have been 80 feet from the ground.

The plane hit first in Pat Cotter's field and then jumped over a fence into George McGuigan's bush.

There was a loud noise, either an explosion or the crash into the ground. One propeller was almost off where the plane first hit and from there on there were pieces of flame all over the plane.

Gets 70 Miles Per Hour

I'd say the plane was going at least 70 miles an hour when it disappeared. When we got in the bush the plane was still burning. It was quite a while before we found any of the bodies. Two of them weren't burned so badly. One was found partly buried in the ground. We walked all around looking for the bodies. We had to scrape away pieces of burning wreckage.

We didn't touch any of the bodies. I never saw such a wreck. There were bits all around. Nothing whole was left. The landing part of a wing and the propellers. The propeller blades were bent.

The first official man in the bush was Provincial Constable Hugh Kellar. Later other Provincial and R.C.A.F. men came there and they took charge. By that time hundreds of people were stopping and cars were lined up off the highway. One of the officers said it was a class "A" wreck.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Doesn't Love Her; Why Marry?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

After I had been going with a certain young girl for a short time, she told me she loved me. Although I didn't love her, I thought by going with her I might fall in love. However, now that I've become better acquainted, I know I could never care for her. When I told her, she became very sad, and seemed quite broken up.

Another lady, who is very dear to me, commented on the attitude of this young girl and asked me why I didn't marry her. I told her I didn't want to make a mistake; that I wasn't sure whether I loved the girl or not. She didn't seem a bit satisfied with my answer.

I don't want to lose a very dear friend, and I would like to help the girl also. Any advice you can give me will be greatly appreciated.

Young Man

If the girl has no other claim on you, except that she has fallen in love with you, there is no reason, according to the modern code, why you should marry her. To marry a girl you do not love, for the sole reason that she loves you, is almost as unkind to her as it would be unfair to yourself. To do this, because a third party thinks you should, would be the height of folly.

If the girl has no real claim on you, she'd better brace up and forget her unrequited love.

Unfaithful Yet Claims He Loves Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married ten years to my husband, who says he loves me very much. After I found out he was running around with other women, we separated, but always he'd look me up, beg me to quit working and come back to him. When he promised to be true to me, I went back to him. It lasted only two weeks before he was out again.

He claims he can't help it. I asked him if he couldn't look ahead to the time he will have a good wife, instead of running after cheap women. He replies that it is his right to do this, but wants me to stay with him.

He's very good to me and I love him. He gives me money so that I can have the best of everything, but I feel I shouldn't stay with him.

Unhappy

Whether a woman can be happy living with one of these runaway husbands depends entirely on her type. Some women put up with it

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BECKMAN

Cooperation in Hallmark of Ideal Guest

You're going to be a wedding guest? The wedding invitation offers you the opportunity of friendliness, courtesy, and the appealing beauty of as lovely a wedding as good hosts can afford.

What is your personal responsibility as a guest?

If you are a kind-hearted friend and if it is your aim to be a kindmannered guest, you will respond by doing everything that will show your friendliness and appreciation. You will keep in mind the feelings of everyone concerned with the wedding plans, and you will do your best to cooperate completely. You'll be understanding—not critical; you'll be considerate of the bride and the bridegroom and their families—not selfishly absorbed in your own reactions and in your own conveniences.

Here are some suggestions that will help:

First, answer the invitation promptly. Your hostess will appreciate this, for she will want to know how many guests to plan for.

Send your wedding present as soon as you can. The bride-elect will appreciate this, for it will give her time to write you a note of thanks before the last busy days before the wedding.

Arrive at the church 'reasonably early. By doing this, you will help the difficult task of the ushers.

The ideal guest bows to the usher who meets her and talks graciously and naturally to him as he escorts her up the aisle. Then she will, of course, accept without question the seat he suggests for her.

Rise the very first moment that you hear the wedding march, and remain standing during the ceremony.

When you are a guest at a church wedding, do not leave your pew

The Four-Year-Old

Taking up where we left off yesterday

By the time your child reaches his fourth birthday he has passed all the outstanding landmarks of early babyhood and has taken place in the baby book for marking down about the first word, the first step and so on. He can speak up long ago. Changes from the fourth to the fifth year are noticeable. Mind and body broaden in every way, but there are no more marked changes until his second set of teeth appear.

The most important change between the three year old and the child of four is in the development he does. He thinks more thoroughly. His "why" comes oftener, and is more persistent.

His imagination has become very well developed. In fact it is quite likely to become so ungovernable that parents get frightened. Only last year I have had mothers come and tell me how little Jimmy or Mary has most unbelievable stories of things happening to him. Such stories are the first step for a child to come home and announce that he has been fighting three bears who attacked him down the street.

The good mother has listened to these tales and jumped to the conclusion that her child was a congenital liar. Of course that is foolish. All children go through the stage. It just means that the imagination of the child is running riot. Well, that's all right. It is the duty of the parent to control the educational system in our democratic countries to the elimination of old-fashioned disciplinary methods associated with outsaid theories and unholy philosophies—such as letting children do as they please. They are little

Religion Will Help

The fact is that Canadian lads moral fortitude does not need to be bolstered up. On the contrary, it has not been given a chance. What we need is a return to the true principles of decency, honesty and charity among men. What we need is an inculcation of the moral lessons of the Sermon delivered by Christ Jesus on the Mount, in the hearts and minds of all Canadians. That is the only sound antidote for the poison of lawlessness. Crime, like religion, really begins at home.

I remember the time we had with the twins when they were that age. The nurses used to get worried at times and I had to warn them not to scold the children too much for their flights of fancy. For as I told them it was nothing wrong in the stories they told us at first.

A common happening is that a child will tell a story told, and will come home to repeat the story with variations as something that has happened to him.

Everyday tasks that were interesting to a three year old, becomes automatic with the child a year older. He hangs his clothes carefully if he has been properly trained, and he bathes himself. He knows more and more words and he now speaks almost entirely in sentences.

At four your child has learned to look out for his own interests and that morning, afternoon and evening succeed each other. Whereas he has formerly made small talk he now carries on with a child of his own age. He is more self-assertive. He often hear it said of the child: "He's tied to his mother's apron strings." Well, that's true to a point. That is the unfortunate work of a mother who won't let her child develop independence.

Tomorrow, we go on to the subject of five year olds.

Makeup Eases a Constant Blush

By HELEN FOLLETT

Women with florid complexion usually have a constant blush they shouldn't use rouge; right there they make the situation kind-ness of coloring of the right tone, placed on the cheek bones, around the eyes and over the eyelids will make the rest of the facial area appear paler. Lipstick can be used, but it must match the synthetic blushes and be applied in light fluffs, especially on the lower lip.

It's hard to keep a powder of a creamy tint mixed with a bit of flesh color. At cosmetic bars, powders are blended to match. The formula is filed, so the beauty preparation can be duplicated. Think about the only way the seeker after beauty can be sure of matching the right color. No charge for the mixing, lady. The price of the powder is moderate.

When selecting frocks and hats that lady with the florid blush should have her wits about her and her taste. Pinks, reds, blue reds and reds are not for her; pastel shades are fatal. She looks well in light blue, in soft shades of green, browns that do not carry a magenta tint, and she can wear any colors they should be below her chin, but not above. Her best choice in wear is safer than white which often gives a contrast to her ruddy complexion.

Your Carriage

What type of walker are you? There's room for improvement in the walk of most women.

Let the arms swing easily and naturally. Let the knees bend a bit and springy, toes pointing straight ahead. Short steps make a slow walk and long steps a fussy and affected. Long strides make her appear masculine. Avoid the twist-and-between step that is the right one.

Maintain the inward spinal curve at the waist line; it flattens the abdomen and gives a good roundness of shoulders; keeps the back flat.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, June 12

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ANOTHER eventful and enterprising day, with much stirring in the direction of high goals and ambitions, with happy and prosperous reactions on all departments of living. At the root of any achievement is much stability of character, with industry, application, judgment, fidelity and endurance winning their reward in material gain and advancement. Elders and superiors readily contribute to the fortunes of the inheritance or enhanced values in real possessions. The responsibilities of life are likewise responsive.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which their past virtues, stability of character and soundness of purpose and objectives are in line for reaching rich reward, either in benefices from elders or superiors or in increased valuations of investments, property or other possessions. Natural gifts of personality, talent and preferments in the real realm of the cultural world, domestic and emotional, where the flower of past performance blooms in happy contcord and joy.

A child born on this day, while having much stability and depth of character and wrinkle, may have much versatility in intellectual, artistic and cultural expression. It should attain a lofty position in professional life.

PRESENTATION

On Monday evening, June 3rd, 1940, a large number of friends and neighbors met in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Brickman in honor of their much cherished 20th anniversary. Mrs. Brickman, who as a bride came from Scotland, received handsome changes in their 20 years of married life. When everyone was called to order a very pleasing address was read, and the guests of honor were presented with a dinner set.

Although taken entirely by surprise, Stanley, on behalf of his wife, in a few well chosen words thanked everyone for the kindness bestowed upon them. Everyone wished them much joy and many more years of married life in store. Refreshments were served and all departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Brickman many more years of happiness.

Ode to Lemonade

CROWNED A KING OF BEVERAGES

By LOGAN CLENDENNING, M.D.

● THE FIRST drink out of a glass other than water or milk that was ever offered me was lemonade. This event occurred in 1891 and I remember it well. It was proferred me by a gentleman named Aldrich who had a wooden leg and a kindly, friendly voice. The very words which accompanied this regal gift come back to me. He said, "Here, little boy, put this under your belt." The locale of the proceedings was on Penn Street, just below Seventeenth Street, Kansas City, Missouri, and the house is still standing. At least the porch is.

I have sampled, I presume, somewhere roughly in the neighborhood of a zillion different concoctions in the form of drinks in the interim but I sincerely believe lemonade is the best evermade by man, if we except my first experiments — water and milk. Water and milk, I am bound to praise as a hygienic but they are more or less for emergency purposes when you can't get anything else. They are kind of like the constitution of the United States: they are there; I am glad of it; I would die for them if necessary, but I have always had them and they arouse enthusiasm in me only when I am exposed to ornatory by health specialists.

But lemonade is difficult. Oh! I am not talking only about the hygienic qualities of lemonade though it will probably get around to that in a minute or two. Lemonade has vitamin C, minerals, calorie value, fluid fluid content, which last is important now that the summer season is upon us and we have begun to sweat again.

Lemonade must be well concocted. It isn't hard to teach a person to make a good lemonade but it is hard to teach them to keep on taking the trouble to make a good lemonade.

You must in the first place have real lemons—not an extract. They should be large, and when I refer to them as "they" I speak advisedly—there should be four juice of three lemons. Put about half a teaspoonful of sugar in the glass first and let the lemon juice dissolve the sugar completely. Then add the ice. Carbonated water is preferable to fill the glass with, but plain water will do, the important thing being that you stir the mixture constantly, making the ice do its function, until a light film of frozen dew forms on the outside of the glass. Unless you are lost to all sense of beauty you will now add something entirely superfluous to the glass—a sprig of green or a cherry, or a small piece of sliced fruit.

You have then a beverage that can be recommended wholeheartedly as healthy, cooling, beneficial in every way, including satisfaction to the taste buds and the feelings of the inner man.

Unfortunately, at least for me, the days of 1891 have passed and people no longer devote any loving care to the brewing of a glass of lemonade. Pop and other atrocities have taken its place, and therefore its reputation has undeservedly declined. I guarantee, however, as these spring days slowly turn into full-throated summer, and flies, mosquitoes and pollticans begin to clutter up the horizon, that if you will follow my directions as to preparation, you will have a real treat on your hands.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

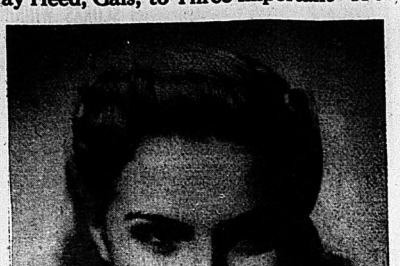
R. M. W.: "What is the calorie value of the following foods: a chocolate almond bar, a plain chocolate bar, a serving of the breast of a baked duck; lettuce, limburger cheese and fruit cake?"

Answer—You do not state how much of any of these articles. Calories depend on weight. Your question is like asking "How many apples can I put in a box?" Chocolate bars come in different sizes. I would say that two or three average healthy bites of a chocolate almond bar would amount to 85 calories, of a plain chocolate bar 100. An average serving of the breast of baked duck is about 75 calories. The lettuce, limburger cheese and fruit cake combination is about 200 calories.

L. E.: "Please give an exercise for reducing the stomach. All my extra pounds want to go there. I am five and one-half feet tall, weigh 130, am 33 years old."

Answer—It is very debatable whether special exercises will reduce special parts of the body. I have seen some results, supported by photographs, which would indicate that such exercises as lying on the back and raising both legs together, 50 times morning and evening will do so. All exercises of this kind should be accompanied by diet.

Pay Heed, Gals, to Three Important "H's"



Nan Grey—When about to select a hat, start out with a neat coiffure."

By HELEN FOLLETT

● CONSIDER the three "h"—hair, hats and hat lines. There was never a time when coiffures were lower, hats dippier. Bonnets are perplexing and vexing, tresses spring satisfaction.

When a woman finds a becoming hat that has an air of chic and distinction, the shouts of joy are likely to reverberate from the Rockies to the Alleghenies and back again. Men who have so much to say don't know what the pretty ones are up against when they go shopping.

Start Right

When about to select a hat, start out with a fresh-laid finger-wave and a neat coiffure, even though you may work them during the trials of trying on. If looks are out of form no hat will be flattering, and hair should live in a state of wedded bliss, not fight.

Remember that soft fabrics will give softness to the eyes and the complexion. Shining straws are only for the very young. If the model is an eye liner, made to hang on by a thread, wear it that way; don't plank it in the center of your head, a practice that goes on all the time. The right tilt is the making of it. Regard the back of your head in a triple mirror. Note the lines.

Beauty operators will tell you that the toughest jobs they have to tackle are putting to rights those heads that have been dyed at home. In the first place, women aren't qualified to select the best preparation for their individual cases, and are likely to ignore directions.

Not Home Work

A woman will save time, worry and money if she will seek the services of an expert beautician who specializes in dyeing and bleaching. The work can be done so successfully that it will fool the keenest eye. It doesn't stand to reason that the apprehension will be successful. Also, the professional will make a test to be sure that no skin disturbance will develop.

This Simple Menu Routs Monday Blues

By BETSY NEWMAN

● SUPPOSE it's Monday and you are in the midst of washing or spring cleaning? Try this menu, which will not take much time to prepare, and which will use up the last of yesterday's meal.

Today's Menu
Cottage Pie Green Salad
Hot Ice Box Rolls
Fresh Strawberries
Coffee or Tea

Cottage Pie — Two cups diced cooked meat, two tablespoons lard, three tablespoons flour, one can mixed vegetable soup, leftover mashed potatoes.

Brown meat in lard, sprinkle with flour and blend well, add canned vegetable soup and stir and let thick and boiling. Put mixture into casserole, cover with mashed potatoes which have been made fluffy again by beating with a little hot milk, and brown in oven (350F.) for about 15 minutes.

Ice Box Rolls—One cake yeast, one-half cup lukewarm water, two oz. three cups shortening, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoon salt, one cup mashed potatoes, one cup scalded milk, two eggs, seven pints, flour to make a stiff dough.

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water, add shortening, sugar, salt, and mashed potatoes to scalded milk, stirring to mix thoroughly. When cooled to lukewarm, add dissolved yeast cake and eggs and again mix well. Add sufficient flour to make a stiff dough. Turn out on to a lightly floured board and knead thoroughly. Put into bowl large enough to allow slight rising. Rub with melted shortening, cover tightly and put into refrigerator. About an hour before mealtime pinch off dough, shape into rolls and let it rise until light. Bake in hot oven (425F.) 15 to 20 minutes.

For quick fixings, add a jar of shrimp to mine a la peerfull and serve on crackers, pulled high in grapefruit shells. Tamales, ready to heat and serve, come in jars, as do preserved oranges, which, cut in wedges and served on lettuce, make an unusual garnish to glorify the simple lunch chop. Tried fruit also prepares a good pop or getting together with scrambled eggs.

Double-Duty Gown

By ALICE ALDEN

ONCE UPON a time it was difficult to find a dinner dress which could also pass as an evening dress. You're still to be congratulated on having one such style in your collection—but, however, because there's a scarcity. Individual designers as well as shops offer lists of ideas; guided by the score, printed cottons from India, sleeved chiffons, organzas. Today's dress is cut of an unusual fabric, pongee in a Chinese motif of brick-red and beige stripes, with dashes of black in the geometric pattern. Unspoolable by trick. It accents a small waist, has a skirt permitting freedom in the rhumba or the tango, and leaves the wearer free to add costume jewelry or not. Lots of girls are using evening shawls of silk or wool with dresses like this.

Household Hints

If you haven't room in your clothes closet for a regular shoe rack or bag, make one from two 10 cent curtain rods, thus: Fasten one on floor four or five inches out from wall, or far enough for sole of shoe to rest on. Fasten the other on baseboard high enough so when heels are hooked over it the sole of shoe rests on floor rod. Rods can be pulled out almost to full length if desired, making ample room for seven or eight pairs of shoes. The rods also serve well as bleaching, practical and inexpensive.

When silk, rubberized shower curtains become stiff and whitish from constant use, you can remedy it by generously coating on floor and rubbing floor wax on them, polishing just as you do the floor. Polish both sides of curtains every few weeks and you will find that with this treatment water rinses off more freely and curtains stay longer in dip-top shape.

Odd Fact

The amazing durability of leather was shown by a discovery made when the foundations were being dug for the Bank of England. Beside brought up soles of Roman shoes, one of which plainly bore the mark of the Roman Eagle.

THE COOLEST sheets made are linen, and thoughtful housewives continue to cherish them for some of their daintier uses, but that they wrinkle rather easily. Our linen frocks and suits are another matter. Pure Irish linen, used, for instance, in the frock pictured, is treated to resist rumpling almost as successfully as sharkskin. At the same time, it holds its crispness, takes practically any accessories we wish to use, and launders beautifully. The two-piece dress shown is for the young and active. It comes in aqua, natural, dusty pink, light blue and white. Wear it with a calot for spectator sports and change, for Sunday afternoons, to a lighorn or milan picture hat. Sandals to go along might be strippy affairs with wedge soles matched in a pouchy handbag.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT has a griddle cake recipe which turns out fool-proof cakes, with an almost limitless number of taste variations. Here is the basic recipe, and two variats: Two cups flour, one teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon sugar, two cups sour milk, one or two well beaten eggs, two to four tablespoons melted shortening.

Sift the dry ingredients into a deep bowl. Add eggs beaten in with milk. Add shortening. Blend the batter, for sweetening, instead of sugar.

LOTS OF BROWN around this Spring, despite the emphasis on blue and black. One dress is deep golden brown wool in a tissue-thin weave. The button-down-the-front bodice contrasts with the full skirt gathered low on the hips in a chevron line. Long tight sleeves are full at the cuff. Brown and white printed silk jersey is used for a frock styled with a brief, bunchy apron. For evening, a lovely gown of brown tulle has a skirt with big wheels of the fabric edged with brown velvet ribbon.

Practical Table Talk

THE GAILY colored table sets, luncheon cloths, napkins and pastel dinner damasks, are easy and inexpensive ways to make your dining room table as flowery and spring-like as your garden. It's no wonder that these pieces are hard to launder, the reassuring answers to the problem are of a few simple glycerine tricks.

Laundry Highlight

The next time you launder that colorful bridge set, or peasanty luncheon cloth, follow the usual procedure with mild suds and lukewarm water, followed by clear rinsing water of the same temperature. Then if the use of starch is advisable to give the fabrics "body" and to impart a slight sheen when ironed, try the starch-glycerine method. Add a tablespoonful of glycerine to a thin starch solution, and dip the articles in this. The glycerine finish is particularly effective for cottons and synthetic linen materials.

Out, Vile Spots

For bothersome stain removal keep in mind glycerine where you are afraid to use drastic remedies for fear of removing color as well as stain. Mustard stains, tea, coffee, fruit juices will usually yield to glycerine. Let the glycerine stay on for two hours or so before washing. Warm glycerine is even more effective than cold.

Incidentally, the next time you are purchasing table linens and there is a question in your mind as to whether the damask is linen or cotton, a drop of glycerine will settle all doubts. Glycerine on linen forms a shiny, transparent spot. On cotton, the spot is opaque and cannot be seen through when held to the light.

Now Flowers Get Vitamins

By ALICE DENHOFF

● ANYBODY ANY tall, without any soil, but with vitamins all in a row, is the way Contrary Mary's flowers grow today.

Science has come out of the lab into the garden and things are happening in the plant world. If you have planned for a garden but yearned in vain, producing instead a backache and a set of nerves, or if you are a city child with a penchant for a bit of earth about the house, but minus that mystic "green thumb," don't despair. Science is seeing to it that you'll be able to grow flower-show blossoms—just like that!

Let's have the folks with gardens for a moment and concentrate on the window-box brigade, and the plants-about-the-house group. They need to tell about tugging in soil to fill window boxes and for transplanting. But now, with soilless gardening an accomplished fact, those days are gone forever. It's all due to a remarkable liquid plant food, result of a conviction that plants do not need soil to grow in.

Liquid Food

Plants live on the chemical the soil contains, give them these chemicals and they can turn their green skirts on the good earth. Research labs, universities, State Agricultural experimental stations and the U. S. Department of Agriculture have been working experimenting, studying, and have fed plants liquid food under various conditions, indoors and out, in solution cultures, and in culture, in hot houses, so that we of the back yard and the window box could have our quota of greenery.

In a glorious garden at the New Jersey Agricultural Experimental Station, luscious tomatoes ripened in mid-winter, tobacco, cotton and a variety of flowers, Dahlias on a water solution set with the necessary elements — phosphorous, potassium, nitrogen, calcium, sulphur, iron boron and other vital elements—in proper amounts and combinations necessary for plant growth. In an experimental greenhouse, the tomato plants grow the year round and give three times the average yield of tomatoes grown in soil. Seven-foot-to-the-ceiling black cotton bushes bota. Flowers bloom continuously. Plant diseases, caused by scratchins, bane of the professional and amateur gardener alike, are seldom present and easily controlled.

Simple Culture

To grow flowers and plants without soil is really simple. The culture vessel may consist of a cheese cloth tank or tray, a glazed crock, or you may even raid the kitchen for such items as a percolator, a fruit jar or a candy jar. Plants may be suspended in baskets made of wide-mesh wire screen. Nurseries and greenhouses carry inexpensive balanced diets for plants, together with all the directions and instructions. Gardening, man's panacea for many ills of the spirit, a solace for the lonely, a delight for the gregarious, has become as simple as a seed catalogue would have you believe. Now it has been reduced to a formula.

Gardeners everywhere are talking about B1, the vitamin which makes cuttings root in hotbeds, daffodils bigger than a salad plate and day lilies with seven-foot flower stems. Plants have shot up with a rapidity that makes Jack's Beanstalk a slow poke.

Modern Beanstalk

Vitamin B1 had been isolated and tracked to its lair to prove its worth in foods for human beings and dumb animals. Liquid Vitamin B1 solution is on the market for commercial and gardens are ablaze with glory, while cut flowers thrive and last longer. . . . Plants manufacture enough B1, as it's up to us to remedy their deficiency and go nature one better. Why not become a horticulturist this very day? Investigate, invest a very modest sum and the side of the house will be for yourself the thrill of owning a real garden, the pride of your house with glowing plants.

Make Your Fringe

FRINGE IS especially smart for the average period room. Either the single variety fringe, or the thick moss type, is entirely practical for beginners to tackle. Wind the cotton or wool yarn around the handicraft guide attachment of your sewing machine, then stitch and cut according to the type fringe you desire. Almost every community has a sewing center where you can learn all the modern short cuts at little or no expense.

I was coming home from school by myself and I found a medium size piece of pink chalk and I didn't want to waste it so when I came to the empty brick wall I wrote on it, Fanny Brice is not scared of Reddy Meerfy.

Writing it in a dickiard handwriting, thinking, He cant prove I was the one wrote it and all I'll have to do is look innocent and ask him what he's talking about.

Seeming like such a good idea I started to write it all over again on the side of the wooden shanty around the corner where the workmen are keeping their tools, only I hadn't hardly started when who came around the corner but Reddy Meerfy walking fast like someone that had seen something and wanted to find out more, and I quick stuck the pink chalk in my pocket and kept on going and Reddy caught up to me, saying, Hay, what's going on around here?

Around where? I said, and he said Around there on the empty wall, I've one place. What's that you stuck in your pocket? he said.

My hand, I said, and Reddy said, Come on, take it out before I take it out for you.

Oh, do you mean this, I said taking the pink chalk out, and he said, Yes I mean that and that proves it. Now show me who you're not scared of, he said, and I said, Well G wiskers why dont you give me time to finish it? I was going to finish it the next time I went passed, so I bellev I guess I'll go back right now and do it, I said.

And I went back around the corner and no did Reddy Meerfy, and I hided even if he has a wooden leg but some more letters on the end making it say, Benny Potts is not scared of Reddy Meerfy's grandfather, and Reddy said, Well all right, but if my grandfather sees it that he'll chase you around the block a few times and then he'll show you he wasn't in 2 wars for nothing.

The result being I went around right after supper and rubbed it off with a old rag.

Major League Pennant Races Tighter Than New Shoes

Dodgers Ahead by Percentage Points but Behind in Win-Lose Column

BOSTON ON TOP

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Major League pennant races are tighter than a new pair of shoes and just as fancy to look at. But they don't seem to be going anywhere.

The National League struggle today is right back in the compilated spot it got into May 27, which isn't getting along very fast toward the business of determining a champion.

Brooklyn's baffling Dodgers pushed past Pittsburgh Pirates, 8-7 yesterday and mounted into first place in the percentage standings of the senior circuit by a single point. They have won 28 games and lost 13 for .680. Cincinnati Reds who were idle yesterday, have won 31 games and lost 14 for a .689 percentage. What's more the Reds still are half a game in front on won-lost reckoning.

The American League aquabile is nearly as bad, Boston Red Sox holding only a small percentage margin over Cleveland Indians with whom they are even in games won and lost. Detroit Tigers are only a single game behind and the fourth-place New York Yankees are a scant three.

The status quo of the junior circuit leaders was preserved by the weatherman yesterday. In the only game that was played St. Louis Browns spanked Washington Senators 7-4 and moved into sixth place in the standings. Each team made 10 hits, but the Senators committed two errors behind Sid Hudson.

The two games played in the National League were hitting exhibitions. In the Brooklyn-Pittsburgh melee 17 players saw service for each team, five pitchers and two catchers included for each. The Dodgers opened with three runs and the Pirates came back with three in the second. Brooklyn had two s - run innings thereafter and Pittsburgh clustered four runs in one. Finally Babe Phelps tripled with one on in the eighth for the play-off.

There were 25 hits in this game and 28 in the one at St. Louis in which Boston Bees crushed the Cardinals 13-2. The difference was that the Bees owned all the total of 28 while lefty Joe Sullivan held the Red Birds effectively caged.

MOON'S BINGLE SCORES WINNING RUN FOR CORBY'S

Harold Reid Pushed Across in 1-0 Victory Over the Shell 'Oilers' .

HURLER'S DUEL .

Both Teams Exhibited a Rare Brand of Fielding in Patches

Jack Moon's bingle pushing Harold Reid in from second proved the moniker his of the night, when the Corbys A.C. broke into the win column of the Belleville Softball League as the latter beat the Shell "Oilers" 1 to 0 in the season's tidiest hurling duel of the year at Coleman Flats last night. The loss dropped the "Oilers" into third place in the league standing while Corbys advanced a notch into fourth place in the lobby.

Connie Harris, hurling Corbys' first win of the season, hooked up in a sterling pitchers' battle with Eddie Schriber, as the "Oilers" got-hit the victorious Corbys 11 to 10, but the Bawden-led nine could not collect the necessary run-producive hits in the clutches, leaving the tying or winning runs stranded on the runways in each of the last three frames. Both teams fielded exceptionally well.

With the pitchers in complete command of the game there was no evidence of scoring until Moon punched out his sixth lasting single after Reid had poled out a double into right-center to give Corbys the only counter of the game. Playing-manager Harold Bawden injected himself into the game as a pinch-hitter in the ninth, but popped out to Barrage at second.

Moon with three hits in four tries, Reid, Kiser and Barrage accounted for the winners' hits, while Amo had three for the "Oilers" Sero and Reynolds also getting safeties. First place in the league standing will be at stake when the Junior Uptowns meet Point Anne here Wednesday.

The lineups:

Corbys: Moon 2b; Ronsky 3b; Whalen 1b; Sero ss; Amo lf; Decarey cf; Reynolds rf; Hoodcham c; Harris p; and H. Bawden.

Corbys A.C.: Chas Barriage 2b; Ed Barriage ss; Bingle lf; Reid 3b; Moon 1b; St. Louis cf; J. Barrage rf; Kiser cf; and Schriber p.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS BEAT TORONTO

U.S. Team Has Yet to be Beaten in Canada This Season

(By The Associated Press)

From the way things are going, it appears highly improbable that Syracuse Chiefs will get out of the International League's second division this season. But even if they have found little to condemn for efficiency as a third party in the ring, but they still insist that "women have no place in a prize-fight ring."

Mrs. Martell dresses tastefully and designs her own ring togs with great care. Her official ring costume is grey silk jersey with blouse, full skirt and matching shorts—that latter being worn so that there will be no embarrassment for her when she climbs into the ring. Mrs. Martell was an actress and dancer, but has been interested in the fight game for nine years and today is in charge of sport at the Los Angeles A.C. She is credited with knocking out a young middleweight while demonstrating a punch once. "Boxing teaches self - defence, sportsmanship, clean living and the care of the body. And who is better qualified to teach these things than a woman?" exclaimed Mrs. Martell at a Los Angeles sports-writer recently. Cliff Faux had better watch his future or we may find a woman refereeing the professional wrestling bouts here next fall.

Last Friday night Barney Ramos's Canton softball lassies defied all of the pet superstitions of the game by appearing in new uniforms and boldly having their photographs taken prior to beating the "Big-Nickel" nine. Evidently in sports it is said to be bad luck to wear new uniforms after the opening of the season. There have been more than one baseball team to have their photographs taken prior to a league game and Charlie Gerbis hasn't tossed all such nonsense out of the sports window when they did both on Friday night and then went on to soundly beat their opponents. After all perhaps it doesn't matter exactly what happens after a sports test, that is if the club concerned possesses the playing strength. Although the "jockmakers" were asked to drop Lois Calenti and "Pete" Rosell, they still possess the league's Babe Ruths, as was demonstrated when they cracked out eight circuit blows the other night. Incidentally the K-Nines and "Mets" clash with second place at stake tonight at the Armouries.

Do you remember when New York Yankees invaded Columbia University 16 years ago today to sign Lou Gehrig, pitcher and first-baseman? Joining the American champs, Lou began making baseball history with his "iron-man" record broken last year by pancake Hank who had played 2,130 games with the Yanks.

Connie Harris and Eddie Schriber locked up in the season's first pitching duel of the softball season, Harris getting the nod when Jack Moon drove Harold Reid home with the only run to score in the sixth to not only give Corbys a 1-0 win over their "Oilers" and their old teammate, Schriber, but it also marked the first Corby win of the year. Both Harris and Schriber pitched good ball and were given the year's best support. Incidentally Nicky Sero finally decided to play softball and showed up in a Shell uniform last night. However, the "Oilers" were minus the services of Art (honey-moonin') Cole and Johnnie Pace. The latter hasn't been out with the Oilers for their last two games and hasn't played since opening day. There is little doubt but that the Oilers miss the hitting of both Cole and Bawden, but whether one and the later is returning to the fold is a deep dark secret, which Bawden, Shelter of Harkness and Softball League executive - meets tonight and some exciting announcements may result.

SPORT SPICE — Although the hockey season has been over for only a little time now, the champion Oshawa Generals are being feted by the C.C.M. bankers tonight. . . . The new passport regulations between Canada and the U.S.A. (effective July 1) may cause difficulties in the operation of the M.O. League. . . . Apparently the rumors around this entity things are turned around this season. . . . Today it looks like a three-teamed race in the National League, while the Ontario League is there only nine games difference between the top and bottom and only three games separates the first four clubs, believe it or not. . . . The Underwood Trophy was made the permanent property of the Edmonton Grads the night they disbanded. . . . No doubt the Underwood people will soon have another mug in circulation, and it'll be in "circulation" much more than the first one, that never left Edmonton from 1923 time it was first won in 1923.

After the official announcer finished with his introduction of Joe Louis and some well-known heavyweight challenger, what would the fight fans say if they heard the announcer continue thusly—"And the referee is Mrs. Belle Martell"? It could well happen if a world's heavyweight boxing title bout is held in the State of California. Recently the California State Athletic Commission granted Mrs. Bell Martell, 45 and attractive, a boxing referee's license. For some time Mrs. Martell held an announcer and an official time-keeper's license. She took an examination for her referee's license and outscored all her male rivals in the test and she was immediately granted a referee's license, despite the fact a storm of protest from the fans broke over the Commissioner's head.

Sports writers and boxing managers threw up their hands in disgust and scorned the decision. Even Jack Dempsey, who nardine the fight fans for the first time her a woman stand over a kayoed boxer and tell the fatal count of ten, when Mrs. Martell carried out her new duties in ship-shape style and surprised even those who had been loth to scoff. Connie Harris and Eddie Schriber locked up in the season's first pitching duel of the softball season, Harris getting the nod when Jack Moon drove Harold Reid home with the only run to score in the sixth to not only give Corbys a 1-0 win over their "Oilers" and their old teammate, Schriber, but it also marked the first Corby win of the year. Both Harris and Schriber pitched good ball and were given the year's best support. Incidentally Nicky Sero finally decided to play softball and showed up in a Shell uniform last night. However, the "Oilers" were minus the services of Art (honeymoonin') Cole and Johnnie Pace. The latter hasn't been out with the Oilers for their last two games and hasn't played since opening day. There is little doubt but that the Oilers miss the hitting of both Cole and Bawden, but whether one and the later is returning to the fold is a deep dark secret, which Bawden, Shelter of Harkness and Softball League executive - meets tonight and some exciting announcements may result.

SPORT SPICE — Although the hockey season has been over for only a little time now, the champion Oshawa Generals are being feted by the C.C.M. bankers tonight. . . . The new passport regulations between Canada and the U.S.A. (effective July 1) may cause difficulties in the operation of the M.O. League. . . . Apparently the rumors around this entity things are turned around this season. . . . Today it looks like a three-teamed race in the National League, while the Ontario League is there only nine games difference between the top and bottom and only three games separates the first four clubs, believe it or not. . . . The Underwood Trophy was made the permanent property of the Edmonton Grads the night they disbanded. . . . No doubt the Underwood people will soon have another mug in circulation, and it'll be in "circulation" much more than the first one, that never left Edmonton from 1 time it was first won in 1923.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the agony of the day. Use Pazo ointment. Its soothing, softening lubrication relieves at once. It tends to relieve inflammation, and by relieving pain and promoting nature's warmth and proper treatment should be relieved. In fact, results for this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender tissues. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. Police Blotter

A complete tire, tube and rim were stolen from off a parked motor car left on a city parking lot over the weekend. The vehicle was the property of George Baldwin, of this city, and the complete set of tire tube and rim reported stolen to police yesterday.

City police investigated two distinct robberies yesterday, one resulting in the arrest of a transient, John Stephens, who was subsequently incarcerated and causing trouble on Wilard Street. Stephens was found guilty in custody on a charge of intoxication and disorderly. In the incident Constables Arnott and Thomson answered a call to an Ontario Street residence where a disturbance reported was soon quelled upon the arrival of the authorities.

Oshawa police reported the theft of a 1937 model Buick sedan today. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario license plates number 419-J-2 when taken.

Two inner tubes and seven transients shared the cell block at the police station last night, the latter seven being permitted their liberty at the break of day, while the drunks were remanded to the custody of the county jail.

Discuss Motion to Aid Authorities Suppress Subversive Talk

Marmora (Special)—Though the attendance stood at only 50 per cent. due to several members being engaged at their employment at the time of meeting, the monthly meeting of Marmora Kinsmen's Club, held at the Royal Hotel on Monday evening was of an enthusiastic nature. After listening with interest to an excellent supper, the Royal toast was honored and the Kinsmen's song led in by Kinsman Bill Townson occupied the chair with prospective players had proven a handicap thus far.

The Membership Committee reported for the Ways and Means Committee and suggested enterprises whereby the club might be benefited. President Underwood for the Sports Committee touched upon difficulties encountered in trying to get baseball and softball into action. The weather and working hours of prospective players had proven a handicap thus far.

The membership committee reported that the club is now 100 per cent. strong with a total membership of 25.

After unanimously singing President Underwood reported the attendance and made some general announcements. He also submitted a motion along the lines of a discussion at the preceding meeting whereby the club pledged itself to be of service in co-operating with the authorities in the suppression of subversive talk. Kinsman Joe Murray then gave some interesting readings from bulletins of other clubs upon the discussion of a helpful nature ensued.

Kinsman Orval Wells reported for the Boys and Girls Committee that a splendid meeting had been held on Monday evening with a decision victory over a team which was raised by Kinsman Ross Kinsman for the concluding report, that of the Publicity Committee, was left over to the next meeting.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Clouds Over Europe"

Forget the headlines and join the laugh fest, see the fine star comedy "Clouds Over Europe" now playing at the McCarthy theatre for a real movie treat.

Featuring Laurence Olivier, Ralph Richardson and Valerie Hobson, in addition to an excellent supporting cast "Clouds Over Europe" is one of the best motion pictures which has reached the screen and despite its somewhat weighty title is one of the happiest motion picture surprises movie lovers have had the pleasure of enjoying. Also now on the McCarthy theatre screen is the latest fox movietone war news events, an exciting laugh-loaded comedy, a special technicolor treat entitled "Wanderers of the Desert" one of the most entertaining featurette subjects of the current season and last but not least "The World of Sport" the best show in the World's Fair in New York.

"If I Had My Way"

Bing Crosby's latest more than have ever before been heard in a Bing Crosby picture, will be presented in Universal's "If I Had My Way", which stars Crosby with Gloria Jean, and which comes to the McCarthy theatre next.

Of the eight, Bing and Gloria perform three as duets. Written by the popular team of Johnny Burke and James V. Monaco they are "Meet the Sun Halfway," "I Haven't Time to be a Millionaire," and "Sweetheart Darlin'." The same team authored "April Played the Fiddle," which is sung by Bing Crosby.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Three Cheers For The Irish"

Shure and it was a great day for old Erin yesterday when "Three Cheers For the Irish" Warner Bros. second hit, opened at the Capitol. It's a swell story packing all the lightness and gaiety of the Irish at Easter bonnet.

Lovely Priscilla Lane, Dennis Morgan and Thomas Mitchell all scored excellent performances as the lead roles and will delight the hearts of every happy Hibernian in the audience as given unstinted praise by the audience.

Also Hale, as Gallagher, is the campaign manager and with the help of Casey's hundreds of friends manages to get the popular policeman elected to office in spite of 81 and one terrific obstacles and interference.

"Madame X"

Gladys George stars impersonating the gripping starring role of "Madame X" with Warren Williams and John Beal.

AT THE BELLE

"A CHILD IS BORN"

"A Child Is Born", number three in Warner Bros. hit parade, is now running its first local showing at the Belle Theatre. Rich in drama, abundant with humor, it is the fresh and thrilling story of two lovers each on the brink of their greatest experience.

Startlingly realistic, yet presented in the finest possible taste, "A Child Is Born", is a beautifully told story of five women on the brink of their greatest adventure in life. A compelling it joyously, some with regret, some with fear. Geraldine Fitzgerald, the sensational dramatic discovery of the year, wins screen stardom with her "Wuthering Heights" won immediate acclaim for her tender, dark-haired lit. actress, heads the cast, and the role of

BRITAIN'S CHILDREN ON THE MOVE AGAIN

During the long period of fairly activity on the western front, many of the children who had been evacuated from English cities returned home. Now that Germany has begun to bomb parts of the English coast, children are being evacuated again. These children were photographed in Scotland on their way to a safer refuge. Nazi planes have already bombed this area.

PRYING FOR NAZI PLANE SECRETS

A British aviation sergeant mechanic is shown carefully taking a German bomber apart piece by piece. The plane is a Junkers 88, latest type of German bomber. It was shot down by Royal Air Force fighters. While the expert works inside the fuselage of the plane, a camouflage net, into which are twisted tree branches and other greenery, protects him from the eagle eyes of other German planes who would like to "scuttle" the corpse of the bomber lest it be of any help to the Allies.

her husband is played by Jeffrey Lynn. Other leading roles are played by Geraldine Fitzgerald, the lovely blonde stage and screen star, and Gale Page.

"French Without Tears" Funny.

Dedicated to the theme that there is nothing more dangerous than a pair of sparkling eyes, Paramount's new comedy, "French Without Tears", announced as the companion feature attraction, proved to be definitely one of the funny hits of the current movie season—good to the last drop of film.

We suppose it will always be funny to watch a woman-proof male finally hooked by the simplest of feminine wiles. We only know that a man in love is an object of mirth as well as pity. But "French Without Tears" tackles the subject with such a fresh approach, provokes so many unexpected laughs, gives so many turns to the age-old situation, that we view it with astonishment.

Suppose that you are wise to the dames. Along comes a cooing, wide eyed young creature, and your friends, one after another, fall for her despite all your efforts to warn them.

Boy, do you have fun, laughing at the plight of your friends until suddenly the siren turns her melting gaze at you, and you know that you, too, are sunk.

That may give you a rough idea of the plot of "French Without Tears", but it can give you no notion of the diversity of fun the situation holds.

"French Without Tears" was an outstanding success as a stage play; it seems destined for even greater success as a film.

The Belle News of the Hour com-

WAR MOVES DOWN TO BLUE MEDITERRANEAN

COUNCIL MEETING HELD ON MONDAY IS BRIEF ONE

Bert Zebedee Given Contract for Collection of Garbage at $4,700 for Year

BY-LAWS PASSED

The contract for the collection of garbage in the City of Belleville for the ensuing year was awarded to Bert Zebedee at a price of $4700 at the regular meeting of the City Council held on Monday night and an agreement signed by him to that effect. The session of the Council was one of the shortest of the present season. The members were agreed, that the traffic lines be painted on the streets and this work will be commenced on Tuesday and continued to completion so that the streets will be ready for the heavy traffic that will be caused by the tourist traffic for the holiday summer.

The council ratified a number of bales of property recommended by the chairman of the Special Property Committee, Ald. H. J. Clarke. This alderman has taken a special interest in this work and has disposed of some fine property upon which some beautiful houses will be erected and which will be revenue bearing to the city in the form of taxes. The council agreed that the contracts made for the sale for supplying sand, gravel, cement, castings and sewer pipe be renewed at the prices that we paid last year, providing the tenders of the contractors are agreeable. Ald. Harry Rollins, chairman of the Police Committee reported that some money could be saved by this procedure but was subject to the tenders if the price could be obtained. The members agreed there would not be a better price obtained.

Given Leave of Absence

Wallace Snell, a member of the Belleville Fire Department, was granted a month's leave of absence from duty without pay, it being that if he did not return to his position in that time, his place would be declared vacant in the Fire Department. A recommendation that four firemen completed with the chief of the department and the assistant chief be brought before the special committee and warned in terms of which we found in our investigation," was passed without comment. The special committee meeting to deal with this matter will be held on Wednesday afternoon in the city hall.

The troller and the chairman of the Property Committee were also appointed to look after the insurance on houses owned by the city or those in the period of redemption. A refund of $305 to J. F. McCarthy, the purchase price of the property at 32-34 Great St. James Street, was granted since the corporation failed to perform the covenant and the by-law was not registered in the city solicitor to take the necessary steps to protect the corporation.

Mrs. Margaret Blaklee, President of the W. C. T. U., sent a letter to the Council thanking the members for the resolution to the effect that all which will be used to furnish a room in the new wing of the Belleville General Hospital. The Council concurred in an Ottawa resolution that residents of Canada over the age of sixteen be required to register and that the fee for the registration whether he or she is a British Subject by birth, naturalization or other nationality, and the members also concurred in a resolution that would call the government to pass a law whereby all enemy aliens be interned for the duration. The Humane Society will hold their Tag Day on September 28th.

Request Not Granted

The recommendation from the Retail Merchants Association asking that the incoming system on Front Street be turned on for the months of June, July and August, was not granted. There was no vote taken in the council on the question. By-laws granting Thomas Edward Jordan a right to dam creek, Ernest Brown and Herb Fox sewer extensions on their properties and one authorizing the closing of a portion of Pine Street were passed through the various stages. W. C. Mikel appeared before the council asking the council to recognize the signing of the Magna Charta and the following resolution was adopted.

"WHEREAS in the month of June, 1215 A.D., the British people, secured the important document known as Magna Charta, embodying the principles of freedom and liberty for the people;

"AND WHEREAS these principles are still in operation throughout the British Commonwealth of Nations, the United States of America and other liberty loving countries;

"AND WHEREAS the present war is being fought for the preservation of these same principles;

"THEREFORE be it resolved by the members of the Municipal Council of the City of Belleville, Ontario, that it is the opinion of this council to take notice of the anniversary of this great achievement and urge all loyal organizations and citizens to suitably commemorate this important historic event."

There being no further business the council adjourned.

Canadians Mourn Death Of Hon. Norman Rogers

(By the Canadian Press)

Canadians mourned today for death of Hon. Norman Rogers, second Minister of National Defence.

From all sides, including the United States, came tributes to the cultured, soldierly minister who died in the crash of a Royal Canadian Air Force bombing plant yesterday.

His last words to his chief before forcing to Toronto to keep a speaking engagement were: "Very well, I will carry on." The moving tones Prime Minister Mackenzie King, his leader and close friend, told of them.

"I do not believe that I have ever known a more faithful public servant," said Mr. King, in the House of Commons. "I do not know that I have ever known a better administrator of public affairs.

"I have never known a more disinterested public servant nor have I ever known a more beautiful nature or a nobler soul than that of Norman Rogers."

Leaders of other groups in the House of Commons paid tributes too and in the United States the New York Times said in an editorial:

Able Administrator

"Canada lost an able administrator, a patriotic citizen and an eloquent exponent of the British tradition."

Conservative Leader Hanson said he was satisfied "that had Norman Rogers lived he would have occupied an even higher place in the councils of this nation."

The sympathy of the House of Commons was extended by Mr. Speaker Glen to the Defence Minister's widow and her two sons.

"This government and this country have lost the services of a very worthy and valuable son," said M. J. Coldwell, (C.C.F. Rosetown-Biggar).

R. B. Blackmore (N.D. Lethbridge), New Democracy leader, said Mr. Rogers was one man "whom all men instinctively trusted. I know of nothing greater that could be said of any man.

Death Will be Loss

Justice Minister Lapointe added the expression of grief he said was felt by the people of French Canada at the loss of the man who served in the ranks in the First World War and directed Canadian operations in this conflict.

"His death will be a loss to Canada, the Empire and the Allies," said Attorney - General Gouzenko of Ontario. Premier Patterson of Saskatchewan said Canada could "ill afford to lose such a man, "especially at a time like this."

Premier Aberhart spoke for Alberta. He said Mr. Rogers' death would be felt "severely" throughout the Dominion.

"It's terrible," said Premier Godbout of Quebec. He was a great asset to the Canadian government." Premier Macdonald of Prince Edward Island said Canada had lost a fine scholar and a capable administrator."

Britain's Morning Press Condemned Jackal Tactics Of Rome's "Ersatz Caesar"

London, June 11—(CP-Cable)—Britain's morning press warned Italians they will suffer bitterly for being drawn into the war and roundly condemned what it termed the jackal tactics of Italy's "Ersatz Caesar."

The Daily Herald summed up the editorial reaction with a cartoon entitled "The Jackal," assailing Premier Mussolini as a jackal, labelled Italy, roving through a skull-littered land.

In an editorial captioned "To Mussolini" The Herald began: "Do you have plucked up your courage at last? Or are you merely the meth-ods of a Capone," it said.

The Cardiff Mail pointed out that with a coastline of 5,000 miles Italy is vulnerable to attack assailant at many points and that even Rome is within reach of long-range bombers.

The Liverpool Post said: "Mussolini has now taken his signature appointed place among enemies of mankind and therefore goes far to confirm the Allies in the righteousness of their cause and in the certainty of ultimate victory."

The Daily Mail said: "The annals of dishonor hold no more dishonorable deed. Italy begins to fight with the stain of treachery on her arms. For this dastardly act the names of Fascist Italy and Mussolini will forever be execrated."

The Glasgow Herald said that "It is up to Britain and France in the next few days to demonstrate now that the Fascist humpty dumpty crashes from his fame of all its planes, submarines and men cannot put him back on it."

The Yorkshire Post said that Mussolini's act is a "crime against humanity" and added: "Italy has committed it if he were anything more than a slave tied to Hitler's chariot wheel."

The Times said:

"Mussolini has thrown a good second to Hitler in the art of treachery. This is not the first treaty Mussolini has broken. He broke his word of honor' to Turkey, to Greece and to Yugoslavia and is worth no more now than Hitler's."

The Daily Telegraph declared that the Italian people would pay for bitterly and for a cause which has no popularity of them loathed Mussolini himself, if things were to fall out as he hoped, he would be a puppet and only gain the privilege of being eaten last.

The Daily Mirror said that "An-other gangster and gambler has staked the lives of other millions for his grotesque vanity."

The Manchester Guardian said that "Italy's entry comes almost as a relief" although fresh difficulties are placed thereby before the Allies. The newspaper indicated that Britain's stand at least clarified the issues.

Algeciras, Spain, June 11 — (AP) —Three Italian merchantmen have been captured by the British at Gibraltar.

The Capo Noli, 2,200 tons, was anchored near Gibraltar. Her crew tried to fire the ship, but it was seized by two British trawlers and taken to Gibraltar.

"The crew was taken to Canada, the Empire and the Allies," said Attorney - General Gouzenko of Ontario. Premier Patterson of Saskatchewan said Canada could "ill afford to lose such a man, "especially at a time like this."

Premier Aberhart spoke for Alberta. He said Mr. Rogers' death would be felt "severely" throughout the Dominion.

"It's terrible," said Premier Godbout of Quebec. He was a great asset to the Canadian government." Premier Macdonald of Prince Edward Island said Canada had lost a fine scholar and a capable administrator."

Myriads of eggs litter the surface of the term's sanctuary, but as yet only terns are seen hatching, although within a few days, it is expected, they will break from their their shells and increase the population of the isolated rocky and uncountable numbers.

Terns are similar to the Gull but also includes a very interesting trip by boat from the Point Traverse harbor, Belleville, to the nesting farm far and near, including newspaper correspondents, who went to the famed Blute spot.

Thousands upon of the hundreds of terns as they rise in mass flight over their lake-swept domain, in the Bay of Quinte, have long been remembered by those who have had a delightful visit to the Gull Bar.

Commence Daily Runs

The veteran passenger steamer Quinte, commanded by veteran Captain Benson Bo-gard, Picton, will be a welcomed sight here shortly when it commences in daily service on June 15th.

The Toronto will not be in operation this season, being out of commission last year for the first time since it was built many years ago.

Light Fish Catches

Catches of whitefish and trout taken by Point Traverse fishermen are the lightest they have been in some time, they report. So light are the lifts that some fishermen are not bothering for them since their catches are only fair.

Black bass and fishermen are also reporting poor catches at present.

Heavy Fog Lifted

Duck Island lighthouse tenders are getting a brief rest owing to the lifting of the heavy fog of the past few days blanketed Lake Ontario waters.

It is understood that fog alarms were in operation for four successive days, but the fog was not shut-down, a record which has not been duplicated in many years.

KING OF ITALY

As Italy plunges into the conflict all Italian preparations intended to expectation of quick and violent hostilities.

Most military men said a combined aerial and naval action aiming to seize the straights of Mediterranean islands of Malta (British naval base) and Corsica (French possession which was Napoleon's birthplace) appeared probable.

Fascists Forecast Attack on Malta

Attacks on Britain's fortress of Malta, key to British naval power in the Mediterranean, on British Cyprus in the eastern Mediterranean and on British naval base at Bizerte, Tunisia, have been forecast by Fascist writers.

Conquest of the Suez canal, also British, would require an invasion of Egypt, from which Mussolini has been warned to keep out.

Trains were placed at the disposal of French and British diplomats and journalists in Italy to take them under guard to the frontier.

The French and British embassies and consulates took up their residence in the Papal State, in the Vatican City, during the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Telephone channels, other than Trans-Atlantic telephones, were open only to Switzerland, Germany and Portugal.

Only Declaration Necessary

Act of French entry into a declaration by Mussolini placing the country in a condition of war, it was in effect remained to put the nation 100 per cent into action.

Some 1,400,000 women and children had prepared for the call to arms. Many had registered in offices under the civilian mobilization.

Fascist authorities estimated that 10,000,000 women and men and minors, exempt from military service were available for the "militia," to which all Italian workers are called.

Mussolini's [illegible]-in-chief was [illegible]

The 1,400,000 already prepared were volunteers who entered their posts had been assigned for some time.

About 3,200,000 children between the ages of 14 and 18 were considered to be available for war services behind the lines.

PRINCESS JULIANA

daughters, Beatrix, 3¼, and Irene, nine months.

Her Royal Highness was attended by Baroness Voun, Baroness Roell and Rear Admiral Baron and Baroness Van Pallandt.

They were welcomed at Halifax by Lieutenant-Governor H. F. MacKenzie of Nova Scotia, Commander Edson Sherwood, representing Government House, and Major-General H. F. Wood, the External Affairs Department.

Prime Minister Mackenzie Buchanan to Canada, also was present to meet the Royal family which fled the Netherlands to escape Nazi invasion of the Netherlands.

Followed Procedure

From the port of debarkation, it was understood, the princess and Juliana would go to Quebec and stay there until arrival in Canada of the Queen Mother.

For some days the External Affairs Department and the R.C.M.P. studied themselves with preparations for the Royal visit which is to be kept quietly, the government of the United Kingdom having requested that no publicity be given to the coming out.

Late last week Mr. Goerman left Ottawa without announcing his destination. Later it was learned he had departed for Halifax to meet Princess but no word of his trip could be [illegible] offered until after the announcement of Juliana's safe arrival was made.

At no time was there a great deal of certainty among department officials as to when the Royal party would arrive. It was explained that the complaint of the Netherlands royalty could not wireless its position and progress because of the dangers to the ship.

Government House Ready.

Government House in Ottawa in Canada has been made ready to receive the new Queenmother-to-be and her daughters. For some time general refurnishing has been going on in the historic residence, the work following the death of Lord Tweedsmuir as the result of a fall last February.

As recently as Sunday fourteen servants were on duty at Government House, but the number of the household, headed the party.

There Princess Juliana and her children will live in a limestone mansion rather than a castle. It is the official residence of the Governor-General, set amid gently rolling lawns and fine old trees.

The mansion is aluminum from city streets by a high stone-and-iron fence that encloses the beautiful gardens and green parklands.

SCYTHE BLOW MATERIAL

About 100 arrests were made in Eindhoven.

The riots broke out as Scotland Yard began a roundup of British residents regarded as potential fifth columnists. Raids on Italian Fascist clubs in London were executed during the night, and hundreds of suspects were taken into detainment.

Officials estimated that about 25,000 Italians live in the United Kingdom, of whom 19,000 are registered as aliens. There is a number of unalined British subjects or are under 16 years of age.

Renewed Effort

The nation responded to the Italian challenge by renewed energy in war efforts on land, sea and in the air.

Official announcements disclosed that "important contingents" of the British Army had been embarked in France, that the British fleet had launched "successful attacks" on the German west flank along the channel and that reinforced units of the Royal Air Force entered the thick of the fight.

The government said it had been preparing for months for the eventuality of Italy's entrance into the war and that it was ready to meet the sword with the sword."

The public waited tensely for further developments in the great "battle of France," which is now raging from the Alps to the coast for London as well.

Correspondents with the British Expeditionary Force told the folks at home the Tommies were fighting like supermen in the "battle of France."

London, meantime, played host to another refugee statesman, Leon Blum, of Norway, who arrived here last night. The former French English port, where he was landed by a British warship, was decked with flowers as he was driven up to Buckingham Palace as the guest of King George.

Diplomatic observers kept an anxious watch on reports from Rome and reports from Madrid that Italy's entrance into the war would be changed the Spanish policy of neutrality.

Crowned Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia—who has been residing in Britain since his country was conquered by Italy—took up quarters in a rural palm.

There were no demonstrations near the Italian embassy, which was well guarded by police. Arrangements were completed for departure of Ambassador Giuseppe Bastianini and his staff. The Italian flag no longer flew over the embassy.

Italian persons were injured in the rioting, last night in Eindhoven in the Netherlands, where rioting severely cut by flying glass.

Fifteen persons in police were called out to restore order. About 100 persons were arrested. Eindhoven and 70 Liverpool Italians were placed in protective custody. Windows were broken as police vans singing "God Save the King." Italian restaurants, cafes and famous Soho district, which is London's Little Italy, were deserted, though some owners posted signs declaring themselves to be British citizenship and their loyalty to the British cause.

The Press was bitter in its denunciation of Mussolini. The Daily Herald called it a "bully."

The News Chronicle demanded that all Italian bases and ports once attack Rhodes, and Naples and Genoa should be bombed."

The same paper expressed belief that one reason that Mussolini had intervened was that "Hitler is having difficulties" and "Mussolini needs Italian planes and tanks."

The Conservative Daily Mail questioned the possibility of some move by Spain, and the Daily Mail said: Daily Herald said it would be "foolish to count on Spanish neutrality for more than a few more days."

Other observers expressed the opinion, however, that British Ambassador Sir Robert Hoare in the situation in Spain "well in hand."

The latest list of German prisoners issued by the War Office gave the names of 26 German members of the air force. Their ages ranged from 19 to 34 years, the usual flying age range.

Washington, June 11 — (AP) — Italy's entrance into the war found the United States President Roosevelt held by congress to a policy of "all aid" as unqualified pledge of material and moral support from the Unity of States.

A series of Presidential proclamations declared a state of war between Italy as a belligerent subject to the provisions of existing restrictions provided the official postscript to a strongly - worded denunciation of foreign affairs by Mr. Roosevelt.

The State Government, Mr. Roosevelt said, in an address at the University of Virginia, "considers that the hand that held the dagger has struck it in the back of its neighbor," he added, interpolating the sentence into his prepared manuscript.

The President's address was broadcast.

Speaking forcefully and with unusual bitterness, Mr. Roosevelt said the widening theatre of Europe's war "threatens the future of the very life.

Future of Nation at Stake

"Once more," he exclaimed, "the future of the nation, the future of the American people is at stake."

"On every battlefield throughout the United States to intensify its preparations for "the task of high emergency and every defence."

An outcome world "dominated by philosophy of force," he said, would mean for the United States "life indefinitely lived at the point of a pike without freedom, a people lulled in prison, their souls confined, hungry and fed through the bars from day to day by the contemptuous, unpitying masters of other continents.

"It is natural also that we should ask ourselves how now we can protect the future of this nation and the placing of ourselves in the present war.

"Overwhelmingly we, as a nation, and this applies to all the other American nations, we are convinced that military and naval force no longer has any place as a tool whatever to implement the institutions of mankind in the western world—and that equally, therefore, the whole of our sympathies lie with those devoted to the cause of their lifeblood in combat against be destruction.

To Pursue Two Courses.

"In the present circumstances we will pursue two obvious and simultaneous courses:

"We will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of the United States, it its non-belligerent we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that ourselves in the Americas may have equipment and training for the defense of the western hemisphere in the danger of the nation being drawn into the war. Most of those words received applause and endorsed the stand Mr. Roosevelt took.

Mr. Roosevelt declared that he intended to drive forward with all speed to meet the two grim objectives of full material aid to the Allies and a formidably armed America.

"All roads leading to the accomplishment of these objectives must be kept clear of obstructions," he declared.

"We will not slow down or detour.

"Speed and signals call for speed full speed ahead.

"The program unfolds swiftly and into that program will fit the manufacturing and the opportunity of every man and woman in the land to preserve our heritage in these times.

"I call for effort, courage, sacrifice, devotion to the love of freedom, all these are possible.

"And into terms of freedom is the future, still steady in the nation today."

Private Service

A private funeral service will be held at the Rogers residence in Park Row East, Otawa tomorrow afternoon, followed by a cremation.

The crash occurred 40 miles east of Ottawa when the Trans-Canada and Empire Clubs were awaiting to hear an address by Hon. Norman Rogers. The members waited for more than an hour, then listened to a broadcast account of the accident.

An official statement by the R.C.A.F. at Ottawa said Mr. Rogers and C.P.O. Ottawa said Mr. Rogers was killed at 1:35 p.m. E.D.T., when the plane crashed at Trenton at 12.03 pm. in the face of unfavorable weather conditions at the moment. Departure had been delayed by a heavy thunderstorm, but it was decided because Mr. Rogers wished to fulfil his engagement. Two other persons in the plane were killed. Eye-witnesses who heard the twin-motored plane circling before the crash over the district. As the plane swung in a wide circle it began to lose height and headed eastward, probably in an attempt to land at the R.C.A.F. station at Trenton 35 miles away, it swung low but flew level when it struck the trees.

Scarcely 300 yards from where it crashed, it dipped sharply to the right, the wings perpendicular to the ground, and plunged into a dive roaring. For a moment it appeared as if the pilot might bring the plane out of the dive but on its side at 75 to 90 miles an hour and crashed into the tops of trees.

Wreckage was strewn for 200 to 300 feet around the plane. "The bodies, two of them mangled, had been thrown clear of the machine. One of them was in a furrow dug by the impact.

Mr. Rogers was identified tentatively by the insignia on his clothing and identification later confirmed by Flying Officer Denis Hill, Conservative member of House of Parliament for Toronto-Greenwood, who was flying with Mr. Rogers, where he is an administrative officer.

Gunner J. A. Connor of Sarnia, one of the eye-witnesses, who watched the plane through the woods for almost an hour before all the bodies were recovered, described the crash. "I was with the controls because the motors were going all the time.

Leading Aircraftsman Fred Newtonville garage mechanic, said "I never saw the plane. I heard the motors. The plane crashed at a speed of 70 to 90 miles an hour. It appeared to

Canada More Determined than Ever

"This new peril to the Allied cause will only increase our country's determination to stand resolutely by the side of our friend France until the powers of evil which threaten the freedom of mankind, are vanquished once and for all," Mr. King declared.

Although a state of war technically was not affected until King George VI proclaimed "approving parliament's action, Canada at once took "appropriate steps" to ensure internal security against fifth column.

It took the Senate, called into special sitting, only three minutes to approve Mr. King's resolution after it was sent to the Upper Chamber from the Commons.

Justice Minister Lapointe submitted the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to apprehend and intern all Italian Nationals whose activities might be considered to be the war effort. Other steps were taken to deal with relations with Italians and with regard to Italian property in the country.

The War Cabinet met all last evening dealing with the situation created when Italy entered the war. The Royal Canadian Navy lost no time, either, in getting its Italian ship homeward bound down the St. Lawrence. Word was received from the ship, the Cap Noli, attempting to foil capture near Rimouski by changing her course for the Canadian mhewsepper.

Parliament was under the shadow of Italy's unprovoked but-not unexpected entry into the war. That gloom became deeper and more personal as news of the sudden death of Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, as the Commons resumed this afternoon.

First came the Prime Minister's statement on the circumstances surrounding the death of his colleague, and then the tributes.

Rebirth of Italy

As he proceeded, his voice gained in firmness. He reminded the House that Mussolini aided in the rebirth of Italy as a free people. Now he has betrayed that liberty.

Long Suspense Removed

"While all the nations of the Allied world breathes harder, it may truly be said that it has removed a long suspense of the Italian threat was now removed; hence a sense of relief.

"Knowing where Italy stands Britain and France can breathe more freely.

"Hardly ever before in history can the decision to embroil a great nation in war have been so suddenly and with so little excuse.

In his opening remarks on Norway, Mr. Lapointe told how the Norwegian government had come to England to "save Norwegian territory—a territory threatened by the Germans and to watch over Norwegian interests during the war."

Britain and France Patient

Mr. Atlee spoke of the "ignoble blow that had been struck" by Italy and declared that Britain and France had been extremely patient, tolerant, brave and reasonable.

Italy, he said, had declared war on a country which had provided more than [illegible] for her.

He said Mussolini had "seized the chance of securing some spoils to sit at the peace table" because of the miracles when they were at grips with the brute force of Germany. Italians, he declared, were Fast Shame

"I cannot but believe that many Italians feel shame at the part played at the rule thrust on them," Mr. Now, thinking of France, she is stabbed in the back by the descendants of men whom France has saved.

"If Britain is to be attacked in the back from the Mediterranean Mussolini might get some pickings for his own Empire, because Signor Mussolini has made a profound mistake," he declared.

"The victims whose spoils he hopes to share are not dead.

"They are mortally wounded."

"The French people, never greatly moved by emotion, are fighting magnificently by sea, by land and on their own soil.

"Britain, with her growing strength in the air, by sea and by land, is standing by their side. The Italians, like the Germans, will find themselves up against fierce resistance."

Italian Ships Seized

Mr. Atlee said fourteen Italian ships had been seized in Canadian and British ports and three were scuttled "on the best German model."

"We have no ill will for the Italian people," he said. "We are sorry they should be brought to the present pass by their own lust for weaving ambition and lust for blood of one man, but we are prepared to meet the challenge.

"We shall give blow for blow. Italy will feel Blockade.

"Italy, like Germany, will feel the blockade."

Mussolini's Professed Mistake.

Mussolini has made a profound mistake,' Mr. Atlee declared. Britain and France were fighting magnificently side by side on land and sea and in the air and Italy's intervention would make them more united and more determined to win.

President Roosevelt's assurances of material aid from the United States received loud cheers. Mr. Atlee told the House.

Commenting on Prime Minister Churchill, who was absent, he announced Britain had already seized 14 Italian ships. Ten others are in British ports.

Worthy Ally of U.S. President

"From across the Atlantic has come an offering of great democracy," Mr. Atlee said.

"It was as though day had followed night for many of the hours after the dictator of Italy had declared war on the unprepared before the serried ranks of the unconquerable, unconquered of the United States delivered to the youth of his country a message inspiring to the world, inexplicable sending the whole of America's resources to the help of those who are giving their lifeblood in combat against the forces of hate." He accused Mussolini of "jackal" tactics in entering the war.

Hitler's Arguments

"Mussolini uses the argument of the jackal that from the responsibility of getting some scraps from another beast's kill," Mr. Atlee said.

In his statement to the House he contributed that Prime Minister Churchill who was absent — the Right Privy Council of Allied troops had been withdrawn from Norway and would be used to use them elsewhere.

He said the postponed secret session of Commons would take place as "soon as permissible" but that it would be held in private.

"As the House knows Italy declared war on Britain and France this morning," Mr. Attlee said. "Mussolini has chosen his moment.

"Hardly ever before in history can the decision to embroil a great nation in war have been so suddenly and with so little excuse.

In his opening remarks on Norway, Mr. Lapointe told how the Norwegian government had come to England to "save Norwegian territory—a territory threatened by the Germans and to watch over Norwegian interests during the war."

Undaunted, Lord Gort Reports to War Office

General Lord Gort, commander of the British Expeditionary force that fought in the Battle of Flanders, is shown saluting the sentry outside the war office the day after his return from the "flaming hell" of Flanders. Credited with playing the stellar role in the evacuation of some 350,000 Allied troops from the jaws of the Nazi trap, General Gort was decorated by King George on the day of his return from Flanders.

A RIFLE WITH A HISTORY

Visiting an arms factory, King George is interested in a battered rifle that played a part in the now-famous Battle of Flanders. The rifle, brought back by its owner of the British Expeditionary Force, was sent to the factory for reconditioning.

AFTER MEETING TO DETHRONE A KING

M. Pierlot, prime ministry of Belgium, leaves the meeting of his cabinet now in exile in Limoges, France. It was Pierlot who followed King Leopold's surrender of the Belgian army with the announcement that the king lost his right to rule when he fell under the power of a foreign government, and that Belgians should no longer obey their king.

Johnstown

Johnstown — On Friday evening June 7th, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Curtis to wish Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lohnes (nee Ruby Curtis) the best of good luck and happiness. Mr. and Mrs. Lohnes were recently married. The meeting was called to order by Mr. G. C. Stickle. An address was read by Miss Jean Meyers.

At the close of the address, little Miss Muriel Stickle and little Miss Jean Brooks dressed as a groom and bride respectively, slowly walked in wheeling a doll carriage full of gifts. Then Misses Doris Walt and Doris Stickle carried in baskets of gifts to the bride and groom. The bride and groom graciously thanked the assemblage. The groom, Mr. Lohnes, then sang as requests, two selections. The Lohnes' sisters, nieces of the groob of Frankford, then delighted the audience with their musical ability. Dainty refreshments were served. The party closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

MUSSOLINI HURLS ITALY INTO WAR TO FURTHER EMPIRE AMBITIONS

No region in the world has known so many wars as the strip of thickly populated countries on the rim of the Mediterranean threatened with conflict again today by a militarist dictator whose models are the conquerors of ancient Rome. Not satisfied with the conquest of Ethiopia which she achieved at tremendous cost, Italy today seeks a wider empire, and has joined Germany in the war, to achieve her aims. Italians declare their "national aspirations" include a share in control of the Suez Canal, and—some sources declare—Djibouti, Tunis, Corsica, the French districts of Nice and Savoy, the British stronghold of Gibraltar. The Mediterranean sea may soon prove of vital strategic importance in a widened conflict.

New York Times (Dem.-Ind.): "With the courage of a jackal at the heels of a bolder beast of prey, Mussolini has now left his ambush. Fascism marches when it thinks that it smells carion.

"It is the overwhelming testimony of those who know Italy best that the Italian people would have chosen to remain at peace.

"If there was ever a decision made by one man it is the decision that now takes Italy into the darkness of night and makes her a moral enemy of every democratic people."

New York Herald Tribune (Rep.): "Mussolini has tied his people to the wheels of Hitler's tanks; we can only, for our part, lend every malediction in our power to those still fighting for freedom and prepare ourselves as well and as quickly as we may to meet the test of a struggle for which no compromise is possible."

Des Moines, Ia., Register: "President Roosevelt has decided it (the matter of aiding the allies) in the way that the vast majority of Americans wanted it decided."

The Washington (D.C.) Post: "The truth and justice of Mr. Roosevelt's declaration is so obvious that no voice is likely to be heard in contradiction."

Detroit Free Press (Ind.): "The American people want preparedness as a preventive of war, not as provocation for one. In the bulletins at Washington this single fundamental fact seems rapidly being forgotten. Mr. Roosevelt forgot all about it in his angry address at Charlottesville last night."

Waterbury Republican (Rep.-Ind.): "In characterizing Mussolini's stab of Italy into the war as striking a dagger into the back of a neighbor' President Roosevelt epitomized the indignation with which his countrymen received news of Italy's vicious action."

Newark, N.J., Star-Ledger (Ind.): "The position of the United States has been stated clearly by President Roosevelt. Mussolini's intervention in the war on the side of Adolf Hitler threatens the United States with encirclement by hostile powers."

New Orleans States (Dem.): "President Roosevelt expressed the sentiment of all lovers of liberty and freedom when he said the United States should extend its material resources to the 'opponents of force'."

Buffalo Courier Express (Ind.): "When Mr. Roosevelt said 'we will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of the nation,' he served notice to this effect:

"Mussolini has thrown his sword into one side of the scales. Now America throws into the other side certain things which may outbalance the weight of that sword."

Boston Post (Ind.): "The President's declaration that we will extend to the allies material resources is heartening. Many of us believe that the defeat of France can be staved off at this late date."

C ANADA'S DEFENCE MINISTER, THREE COMPANIONS KILLED IN AIR CRASH

Defence Minister Norman Rogers, and three companions were killed at Newtonville, near Bowmanville, Ont., in an air crash. Mr. Rogers is seen, LEFT, when he recently visited R.C.A.F. at their station in England during his recent trip to London to confer with British military and political leaders. Mr. Rogers is seen, RIGHT, with Major-General Crerar and Mr. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, at the time of his London visit.

'HE DIED ON DUTY' SAYS N. Y. TIMES

'Editor Pays Tribute to Able Administrator, Patriotic Citizen,' Hon. Norman Rogers

New York, June 11 (CP). — The New York Times, in an editorial expressing regret at the death yesterday of Canada's defence minister, Norman Rogers, said today:

"Canada lost an able administrator, a patriotic citizen and an eloquent exponent of the British tradition when Norman McLeod Rogers, her Minister of Defence, came to his death in the crash of an army plane in Ontario. She has lost Mr. Rogers, moreover, at a time when she has need for such men as he.

"His whole life was characteristic of what may be accomplished by earnestness, industry and high faith in a democracy such as the dominion typifies. Physically he was no giant and his health was never of the best. Nevertheless in the last war, as a boy of 20, he unhesitatingly abandoned his studies at Acadia University and volunteered for active service. He returned from the war in broken health, invalided home, and was advised to plan a future free from strain and heavy responsibility.

"What he did, after a short essay at teaching history and economics, was to enter politics, in which strain and responsibility are daily bread. He Died "On Duty".

"It was characteristic of Norman Rogers that he died 'on duty'. He was on his way to deliver an address in Toronto and decided to fly there despite bad weather, rather than fail his expectant audience. The advance summary of his speech, already in Canadian and American newspaper offices awaiting release, shows that it was a protest against the unreasoning panic-mongers who have been calling for the internment of all aliens from enemy countries. From its conclusion there may be taken two sentences:

"The seriousness of the present situation does not warrant the expression of optimistic platitudes. It is better to face grim realities with courage and resolution, but let us never for a moment lose our supreme confidence in final victory.'

"That was the abiding faith of Norman Rogers. To a brave man and good neighbor, 'hail and farewell'!"

AIRCRAFT CARRIER GLORIOUS LOST

The British Admiralty has announced that the 22,500-ton aircraft Carrier Glorious was presumed to have been sunk.

Mr. King reviewed the swift moving events of the day in Ottawa, the tragic death of Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, in an airplane crash and the action taken to put Canada in a state of war with Italy.

The cabinet passed an order-in-council tendering advice to His Majesty that a proclamation should issue declaring Canada at war with the new enemy as from June 10.

It was transmitted to Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, for submission to the King. Immediately approval of the proclamation is received it will be published in a special edition of the Canada Gazette.

Measures Being Taken.

Justice Minister Lapointe, the prime minister said, has authorized the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to apprehend and intern all Italian Nationals whose activities might be detrimental to the war effort or destructive of property.

Other steps, planned well in advance, were being taken with regard to trading with Italians and to Italian property in Canada. These included measures to stop trading with the new enemy "no words can express the sorrow to our cause."

Referring to Mr. Rogers as "a trusted colleague and close and deeply valued friend", Mr. King said "no words can express the sorrow with which his colleagues and I heard the news".

Mr. Rogers' career was an inspiration to youth. He served in the first great war as a private and "the same qualities that made him a great brave soldier" had sustained him in his higher task.

"Canada has lost a generous and valiant heart. The British Empire a Minister of War who held a foremost place in her military councils."

NAZI INVADERS FALL BEFORE DEADLY FIRE OF FRENCH SNIPER

Here is the first actual photo of German soldiers in the act of becoming casualties. The German in the street has been struck by a French sniper in the leg and is dropping to his knees. The German at the extreme LEFT has been struck, apparently in the chest. Note that he has dropped his rifle. This action took place in the French town of Ham.

Mr. King said, "the allied powers, a minister of the Crown who served them faithfully in the hour of their greatest need. Our country mourns tonight one of the ablest and noblest of her sons."

INSTALMENT 5.

"I'm very proud of you," Nina said one night as Star went about emptying the overflowing ash trays and straightening chairs after an unusual hilarious evening. "You couldn't have behaved better if you had been my own daughter."

She accepted the praise by a casual pat on the shoulder which brought to Star appreciation to the girl's blue eyes. Did Nina have any idea how much her approval meant to her secretary? Probably not, Star thought, waiting to tell her but feeling the words choke in her throat. The habit or reserve was too deeply ingrained for her to express emotion easily so she said only, "Thank you, Mrs. Lambert! You've been an kind!"

"Nonsense!" Nina replied lightly. "You've been a great deal of help to me."

There was a bond of affection between them which seemed in no way to becoming permanent until the night Nina's son came home. Robert Lambert arrived unexpectedly, although Star who was typing in the writing-room knew him the instant his youthful, attractive face appeared at the door. She would have recognized him even if his photograph had not been in front of her. He was like his mother, Nina! An enthusiastic, less sophisticated copy, with Nina's own sparkling grey eyes and warm-hearted smile.

"You're Star, aren't you?" he cried holding out his hand.

"And you're Mrs. Lambert's son." "Bob to you!" he grinned.

Star smiled in return.

"Your mother will be so pleased to see you. She has been wishing you would come."

"Well, I'm back to stay for awhile. I've the promise of a job in October but until then I might as well play around."

"That will be lovely," the girl said warmly.

"Yes, won't it?" Bob retorted, gazing at her so steadily that she could feel the color creeping into her cheeks.

From the beginning she did not feel that sense of caution with Bob which she always kept her away from other men. Perhaps because his life has been so open and she admired Nina so much she felt close to Bob.

When Star had never once before she found the two of them with their heads almost touching as Bob explained to Star the advertising layouts he considered responsible for securing the promise of a job.

Was it surprise that sharpened Nina's voice as she called, "Robert Lambert, what are you doing here!"

They had been too absorbed to hear her although she had stamped up the stairs with her customary heavy tread.

"Mina!" he cried, rushing to embrace her. "Darling, I have been pacing the floor waiting for you to come home."

"Yes, I could see that," Nina said drily but she managed to smile. "Stand away from me so I can look at you. You're overweight. Why don't you exercise?"

"If I weren't such a gentleman, I might return the compliment," he grinned, turning to Star for support, but the girl had slipped from the room, leaving mother and son together.

He did not see Star until the following day as she decided to take advantage of his arrival by calling on her own mother. The only way to furnish Marnie's appearance was to check in regularly just after pay day and after a dozen of such visits Star was making. Mamie accepted her daughter's donations as her civilize right and since Star managed to time her visits when Joe was not at home they passed without friction. Tonight she had bought a steak and eaten dinner with her mother who was less unpleasant than usual. Even so Star's heart sank as she realized more than ever the difference in their relationship and that of Bob and Nina. She returned to her employer's more depressed than she had been since the day of Mamie's call.

The door to the writing-room was closed and she could hear mother and son in a vivacious conversation interrupted by shouts of laughter. Wouldn't it be fun, Star thought wistfully, to be as close to your mother as that!

The next day, however, she appeared at the breakfast table looking as serene as if she hadn't a worry in the world. Nina usually had her breakfast on a tray but she was breaking all precedent to eat with her son. Perhaps that was responsible for her lack of cheerfulness. Sensitive to every inflection of the older woman's voice, Star noticed that Nina was not herself, but Star did not realize that from the moment she had seen them together Nina Lambert had a personmition of what would happen.

Nina knew that Bob's interest in Star was different from that he had shown in any other girl. Nina guessed with what secret emotions she could have told that her son was falling in love. She watched in silence as Bob followed Star about. He insisted upon her company, including her in everything they did. Nina was not even surprised the day she came home and found her secretary in her son's arms.

"Well, Nina said composedly from the door of the writing-room where she had just witnessed the romantic scene, "I seem to be intruding."

Bob's face was radiant. Without losing his hold on the girl in his arms he cried, "Look at her, Nina! Did you ever see anything so lovely? I'm mad about her, darling!"

His mother lifted a cigarette in she long amber holder and seated herself in the nearest chair.

"I'm pretty fond of her myself," she admitted him and hoped he didn't guess how difficult this was for her to say.

Star's usually pale face bloomed with color. Her blue gaze was diffused with joy and the utter completes of all that was happening to her.

She faltered, "You're sure you don't mind, Mrs. Lambert?"

"Mind?" Nina echoed. Nina whose hands were shaking so that she could scarcely bring the holder to her lips. "Because my son finds you charming?"

"There's more than that to it," Bob said, suddenly serious. "We're going to be married."

His mother winced at the finality of his tone. For the first time in his life Bob had failed to made the gesture of consulting her.

"What about the career you say about that?" Nina asked.

Star touched the hair from her face as she often did when she was confused.

"It all seems too wonderful to be true," she admitted. "Bob is so much stronger than I am. I couldn't help loving him. It seems as if we had known each other always."

"Good Lord!" exploded the writer. "Must you talk like one of my heroines in a moment like this?"

Star's face flamed but Bob laughed.

"Pay no attention to the woman," he advised. "She's wise cracking to cover up her emotion novelist always to keep from bursting into maternal tears."

"You idiot! You complete moron!" jeered Nina but Star could see that her eyes were bright with joy.

Pulling away from Bob, she ran to her employer's side.

"I've never could have happened if it hadn't been for you!" she cried gratefully. "You have made me believe in my own luck."

"No doubt about that," Nina agreed, remembering her words of several weeks ago. "You can associate with any one. Marry any one, etc. . . ." She patted Star's hand and rose. "Well, I'll be running along and leave you lovebirds. I suppose you aren't planning to be married overnight."

"Not until I go to New York," Bob admitted. "But when I take over my new job I mean to find a new secretary."

He looked so eager and young and determined that his mother could not bear to look at him.

Star said, "Don't you want to work now, Mrs. Lambert? I've been waiting for you to get home!"

"Not now," Nina replied.

As the door to Nina's bedroom closed behind her she looked at Bob thoughtfully.

"She's awfully upset."

"Naturally,"-he agreed, pulling her down beside him in the big, winged chair. "Nina is just an old-fashioned mother at heart. She likes to boast about how modern she is, and pretends to be my best pal, but the truth of the matter is she's really as silly about me as an old hen with one chick. And I adore her for it," he added loyally. "I think I'm cute."

Perhaps Star was being too sensitive, but she fancied that her own relationship with Nina her not been the same since Bob's return. It might be because she knew that her son was here she hadn't so much time to be with any one else.

"Silly of me to feel neglected," the girl reminded herself. "After all I'm only her secretary and she has so many people dragging at her. Bob is prejudiced. She was just acting that way to keep from crying."

So many times Star had choked back her emotions, but it wasn't like Nina, who broke into a stream of words at the slightest provocation. Bob, however, refused to discuss it.

INSTALMENT 6.

"Look, beautiful, who do you love?" Bob said, holding Star at arm's length.

"And you a college graduate!" she said. "I know better but at the moment I've too much else to think about to be grammatical. Come, my child, tell teacher. Who is your sweetheart?"

Star smiled but asked seriously, "Are you sure it will work out?"

"Of course, darling!"

"I don't know much about love," Star confessed. "But I wanting to be with you and thinking everything you do is perfect . . ."

"Wrong," Bob snapped. "Go to the foot of the class. Now repeat: story story me: I love you Bob darling! I'll always love you. I want to belong to you."

Obediently she repeated it and was rewarded by being seized in his strong arms and kissed with a tenderness which reassured her.

"I'm crowding up, too, just like mother," he whispered. "Otherwise I might break down and tell her I love you. You are the most wonderful thing that has ever happened to me, Star."

Nina was spared the ordeal of listening to them. She had an engagement and she departed dressed in one of her most colorful evening gowns. Her face was calm and showed no trace of tears. Star examined it anxiously but could see that it by any secret disturbance as she called a gay good-night.

It was the most thrilling experience a girl could have. It seemed to Star almost unbelievable that she could have won the love of Nina Lambert's son. Bob was so attractive, so eager and ambitious. She liked everything about him. He seemed to her unbelievably handsome little boy playing at being grown-up. She understood perfectly how Nina must feel about him. She herself felt toward him a gentle protectiveness which was almost maternal. Not for anything in the world would she have hurt or disappointed him.

Mrs. Epperson was told of their engagement as she served their dinner.

Instead of congratulating them, the housekeeper demanded, "What does your mother say?"

"Now what would she say?" Bob teased. "Nina loves Star almost as much as I do. You ought to know that."

The housekeeper who had been with them ever since her husband died many years before said primly, "I'm sure I hope you'll be very happy."

Star knew that she was remembering the day Mamie had appeared at the door shouting and gesticulating. Miss Epperson might be generous enough to help Star rise above her environment but Mrs. Epperson would not be so lenient.

"What's the matter, darling?" Bob asked when Miss Epperson had left the dining-room.

She smiled at him.

"Nothing! I'm all right."

She could not tell him that the thought of Mamie had intruded upon their happiness like an unwelcome ghost. Even then on the first night of their engagement Star had the feeling it couldn't last.

The next day Nina said thoughtfully, "I think we ought to have your mother for dinner some evening, Star."

Bob was present when she spoke. "That's a good idea," he agreed. "We ought to have the whole family."

It was obvious from his remark that Star's background had not as yet been discussed between them. Nina drew a sigh of relief as Star said gravely, "I haven't any one else. My parents were divorced when I was three years old and my mother is married again but her husband works at night so he couldn't possibly come."

Pride kept her from rejecting Nina's offer. If Nina insisted upon making such a gesture, which was just like her, she was so warm-hearted and hospitable, there was nothing Star could do about it. Bob would have to meet her mother sooner or later. She wouldn't want him to think she was ashamed of Mamie because they were poor. If it were only that, Star thought, sick at heart. There was a chance, of course, that Nina might forget about it. She had a way of making plans and forgetting them unless she was reminded and Star knew that although Bob had spoken so carelessly he was really interested in any one except herself. It wouldn't matter to Bob any more than it had to Nina who her mother was or what she did.

As the days passed she began to think that Nina had given up the idea. Perhaps she had guessed how embarrassing such a dinner would be not only for Star but for her own mother. Nina had always been so kind. She would not deliberately hurt she had been before Bob's return but that was only natural. After all, if she didn't approve of Bob's engagement, all she had to do was say so. Even if Bob wouldn't listen Star would never marry him without his mother's consent.

But on this occasion Nina's memory, usually so unreliable, did not fail. On the fifteenth of August when she gave Star her bi-monthly cheque, she said casually,

"Will you be seeing your mother today?"

The girl could feel the color rushing into her face but she replied quietly, "Yes, Mrs. Lambert, I will."

"Invite her to dinner next Monday," Nina directed, consulting her engagement book. "I'll send her a wire and you and Bob can take her home."

When Star did not reply, Nina looked up. "Or would you rather see I'd ask her myself? I'll telephone, if you prefer."

"No," Star said, "it won't be necessary. But I don't know if she'll come. Mother doesn't go out much, you know."

"Oh, she must come," Nina ordered. "Tell her so and I'll be there, too. Just a family affair."

Star left the room with her heart in her shoes. It was dreadful to feel as she did about Mamie. One shouldn't be ashamed of one's own mother no matter what she did, she told herself. But Mamie was so unreliable. Star felt she couldn't bear it if Mamie created one of her scenes in Nina's room. But surely she wouldn't when she realized the importance of the occasion. Perhaps Mamie Delevan might be kind. There would be no necessity for revealing the experience since Star and Bob would be leaving for New York just as soon as they were married.

All the way to the shabby apartment house Star was trying to figure out the best way of approaching the subject, finally deciding that bribery would be a good a method as any. She would buy Mamie a new dress that Star was understanding that she should live up to it. Something dignified and ladylike. The best dress Star could afford.

Fortunately her mother was in a tractable mood. The apartment was less disorderly than usual and Mamie was sitting by the window like the early mother-wife, darning a pair of socks. The domestic task made her seem unusually normal. Her gray hair was combed neatly instead of straggling as it so often did about mid-day.

Star thought, "I wish Bob could meet her now", but she had refused his offer to accompany her.

Mamie said, "I thought it was about time for you to be coming. Did you bring my money?"

Star smiled and sank into a chair without removing her hat.

"Do I ever forget it?"

"No," Mamie admitted. "you've been pretty good about it. Not that it's much but it keeps me from begging it from Joe. He's getting stingier than ever."

This time, however, Star had no intention of listening to the story of Joe's misbehavior.

"I've something to tell you," she said, "You remember the picture of Mrs. Lambert's son you saw on her desk?"

Mamie nodded.

"He's come home and fallen in love with me. We're engaged." Star continued feeling as she said it that it was more like a dream than truth. It couldn't be true.

"Well what did I tell you? Didn't I say you two ought to make a match of it?"

"You must have had a premonition," Star admitted.

"When are you going to be married?" Mamie asked.

"In October. Bob has the promise of a position in New York and wants me to go with him."

That's evidently a swell break," her mother commented.

She seemed rather more reasonable than usual that Star's spirits rose. If only she could make her realize how important it was.

PREMIER FACED WITH ADDING NEW MEN TO CABINET

Cabinet Reorganization Must be Taken Care of Immediately Say Ottawa Sources

POWER TAKES POST

Ottawa, June 11 (CP).—Death of Hon. Norman Rogers, Canada's defence minister, and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, left Prime Minister Mackenzie King today with added tasks in cabinet reorganization problem.

Grief-stricken at the personal loss of a colleague and friend, the prime minister was faced with the immediate business of reconstructing his cabinet.

Three portfolios now are to be filled and finance is to be reduced on those carrying these exacting burdens.

Air Minister C. G. Power has been named acting Minister of National Defence and it is believed that some new blood will be brought into the government, possibly from outside the House of Commons.

At present Mr. power, who is Postmaster General, also holds the new portfolio of Air in addition to his duties as Minister of National Defence head. Hon. C. D. Howe, Transport Minister since 1935, also has been Minister of Munitions and Supply since that department came into being some months ago.

Power Well Qualified.

No announcement is expected at least until the end of this week but Mr. Power's name will be acted for Mr. Rogers during the latter's various absences on business, shows old him well qualified to act as a full-time defence minister.

Meanwhile plans are being advanced by the government for Mr. Rogers' funeral ceremony.

The body is being brought today to his residence at Rockcliffe from Fore Hope where he was taken after the crash at Newtonville which killed the minister and three Air Force men.

Killed with Mr. Rogers were Flying Officer John James Cotter of Halifax, N.S.; Aircraftman Oscar Leslie Brownfield, Big River, Sask.; Aircraftman James Edward Nesbitt, Saskatoon, Sask.

A Private Service.

The public church service tomorrow in honor of Mr. Rogers and the service for the family at the Rogers' residence at Ottawa, usually requested no flowers be sent.

The great shock universally felt throughout Canada by the sudden death of the popular Defence Minister was reflected in the greatest eloquence in the demeanor of his colleagues and other members of parliament yesterday as word of the tragedy, was officially confirmed.

Coming on top of Italy's entry into the war, news of Mr. Rogers' death passed almost in a whisper from member to incredulous member in the House of Commons.

There was no flicker of a smile. Talk was hushed and then only in subdued tones.

The largely filled spectators' galleries were equally silenced when Mr. King rose to announce the death of his friends and colleague.

BATTLE RAGES NEARER PARIS

French Defences Are Firm in West, French Hold Reims

Elements of More Than 100 Nazi Divisions Engaged Over Wide Front in France — Nearest Point Reached by Foe is 20 Miles from Paris, Point Reached by Von Kluck and Von Bulow Armies in 1914

NAZIS ENGULF SEMLIS

Italy Masses Estimated 900,000 to 1,050,000 Men Along France's Southern Boundary — French Conduct Bombing Extending 'Deep' Into German Territory

Tours, France, June 13—(AP) — The elements of more than 100 German divisions, attacking on a broad front from the lower Seine to the Argonne Forest, carried the battle of France tonight to the region 20 miles from Paris which the Von Kluck and Von Bulow armies reached in Sept. of 1914.

The Germans engulfed Semlis, thirteen town 26 miles north of Paris.

Two Orders Issued

As the Germans approached the capital, two orders were issued by the French:

1. The prefecture of the Seine department, which includes Paris, announced the requisitioning of bakeries, pharmacies and grocery stores.

2. The military governor of Paris ordered all employees of the public services in the Seine-et-Oise and Seine-et-Marne departments to remain at their posts. These are areas immediately west and east, respectively, of Paris.

In the Vir-Sur-Aisne region where the Germans crossed to the south bank of the river and occupied a high ground another offensive was unleashed to push the fighting nearer Soissons.

Withdrawal South of Marne

The French command ordered a withdrawal south of the Marne along the line between Meaux and Chateau-Thierry. Meaux is about 26 miles east of Paris.

The withdrawal north and northeast of Paris were counterbalanced the War Ministry announced, in the west where the defences were holding near Vernon, on the Seine, German succeeded in crossing the river there yesterday, but were driven out in a French counter attack.

Tours, France, June 12 (AP) — Italian troops blew up a bridge at Vintimille on the French border in the Alps today after completing the mobilization of 60 to 70 divisions, a military commentator reported today.

On the heels of an estimated strength of 15,000 men to a division, this would mean the Italians had massed between 900,000 and 1,050,000 troops along France's southern frontier.

News of the Italian military activity on France's new front in the south came as the French defenders of Paris braced themselves to stand along the Marne at Chateau-

THREE IN LINE FOR DEFENCE POST

Hon. J. L. Ralston, Hon. C. G. Power and Major-General McNaughton Names Prominently Mentioned

Ottawa, June 12—(CP)—Whether the appointment of a new defence minister will be an isolated move or part of a general cabinet shuffle and reorganization was a matter for conjecture in Parliamentary lobbies today.

At any rate, selection of a successor to Hon. Norman Rogers as Minister of National Defence is one of the big decisions confronting Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

In speculation over a possible successor three names have received attention, those of Finance Minister Ralston, Air Minister Power and Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, Commander of Canada's 1st Division.

While the defence portfolio is only one of three cabinet vacancies which may be filled in the near future the pressure of war activity makes it the centre of attention.

A few days ago Mr. King said the question of whether or when it might be best to enlarge the Ministry was under consideration. This was in reply to a question in the House of Commons from Conservative Leader Hanson in which the suggestion of bringing a non-standing men from outside Parliament into the cabinet was brought up.

In the meantime Mr. Power is acting Defence Minister, having taken over these duties almost immediately after Mr. Rogers died in the crash Monday of a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber near Newtonville, Ont.

Royal Arrivals Symbolize Hope Of Restoration

New York, June 12 (CP)—Arrival of Crown Prince Olaf in exile of the Netherlands and her daughters at Halifax symbolizes the hope and faith of a noble people in the re-establishment of their democracy," said the New York Herald Tribune editorially today.

"It is a hope and faith which as the President has said, will not be disappointed," he added. "But the road ahead looks less like a primrose path with every moment."

Movement of Surplus Planes Speeded-up For Use of Allies

New York, June 12—(AP)—Evidence of a speed-up in the movement of surplus United States aircraft was given today as Britain and France increased today in the wake of President Roosevelt's pledge of full material aid to the Allies.

A squadron of 18 Northrop attack planes, en route to Mitchell Field, N.Y., from the Pacific coast Calif., made emergency landings at nine eastern airports — and in a Brooklyn street—after they were trapped aloft last night by fog and dwindling fuel.

Aviation sources indicated the planes were purchased from Buffalo, N.Y., as "obsolete" military aircraft available for Allied purchase.

Army officials in Washington were noncommittal on a report published in morning papers here that 12 Curtiss Hawk pursuit planes, Model 75, operated by Curtiss-Wright Corp., would be delivered shortly for "trading in" and resale to the governments of France and Britain.

Twenty-four of the navy bombers already have left for the Canadian border and Europe's war fields.

The 19 attack ships forced down by bad weather last night were all of the "obsolete" type considered for light bombing and strafing.

JEWISH ARMY TO TAKE FIELD PLAN OF ZIONISTS

Scheme is Receiving Attention of British and French Governments

TRAINING IN CANADA

Jewish People Expected to Contribute to Creation of Army to Fight Enemy

(By H. M. Peters Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, June 12 (CP)—Negotiations are far advanced toward the formation of a Jewish Army to fight the common enemy, Vladimir Jabotinsky, President of the World New Zionist organization, told a press conference here today.

The plan is receiving the sympathetic attention of the Churchill and Reynaud governments as well as the government at Ottawa and Washington, he said, in a syndicated newspapermen; he made these two premises:

1. The war will go on to victory, regardless of what happens now between France.

2. Within six months a Jewish army will take the field.

By that he did not mean that a full army in every sense of the word would be in action against Germany in that length of time, monthA. But when the first Jewish uniforms, the first Jewish infantry battalion, will have lined a short, effective army would be engaged. The rest would follow.

Status Similar to Polish

The status of the Jewish army would be the same as the Polish army in exile. "Financial aid is being sought from the Allied governments in the same way that they made 'money' grants to equip and maintain the Polish divisions. But the difference between the Polish difference: Whereas Poland has disappeared temporarily and can make no contribution, Jews would be expected to contribute eagerly and liberally to the Allied campaign to absorb a large share of the cost, Jabotinsky was accompanied by Lieut.-Colonel J. H. Patterson, commander of the Jewish battalion in Palestine and Gallipoli in the first Great War, a veteran of 40 years in the British army, author and historian.

Mrs. Butler said the British government welcomed the agreement as "confirming long-established friendly relations between this country and people and the government of Thailand, and introducing a further element of stability in southeastern Asia."

Dispatches from Thailand said the government there asserted that the agreements may be welcomed as "a further contribution to peace in this part of the world."

Premier Hepburn Fears Attack On Ontario by U. S. Sympathizers Of Nazi and Fascist Causes

St. Thomas, Ont., June 12 (CP)— The Ontario Government acted today to drill an army of civic guards as a declaration by Premier Hepburn that Nazi and Fascist sympathizers in the United States are organized and awaiting orders from Europe to attack Ontario.

Recovering at his farm home near here after being stricken with bronchitis, the premier last night said "secret operatives" of the Ontario Provincial Police have learned that there are "hundreds of thousands" of anti-allied workers across the border, many of them armed, and including 1,500 German Bund members in Detroit, across the Detroit river from Windsor, Ont.

Set Up Guard.

"The Ontario government is setting up an organization to drill and instruct civic guard units throughout the province and will arm the guards to the limit of its ability. We are considering a plan of arming the guards and providing ammunition at the present time.

"The Attorney-General has already set up an organization at Parliament Buildings in Toronto and is prepared to act quickly and effectively at the request of the municipalities. But initiatory action must come from the municipalities themselves."

Urging the men of Ontario to join these civic guard units, Mr. Hepburn said such an undertaking normally would be a responsibility of the Dominion Government but that on the basis of its past record he doubted Ottawa would act in time to avert a threatened attack.

Blows Are Struck at Trondheim, Airdromes in Italian Libya and Ethiopia and Behind Front Lines in France

MUCH DAMAGE CAUSED

Italians Caught Unawares in Libya Where Aircraft Were Destroyed on Ground and Petrol Dump Set Afire

London, June 12—(CP)— Royal Air Force bombing planes harassed distant outposts of Italy's African Empire and struck at enemy air forces in Norway and France in ever-widening phases of the war on Tuesday.

From German-occupied Trondheim in central Norway to Italian air bases in eastern Africa, the Royal Air Force reported successful raids, while Italian warplanes bombed Malta, British naval base in the Mediterranean, with little effect.

At the same time, Allied naval forces closed the Suez Canal to the Italian shipping which has piled the lifeline to Italy's colonies on the Red Sea.

These blows were reported struck on both sides in the far-flung theatre of war:

1. The R.A.F. Middle East Command announced "great success" in raids by Blenheim bombers on desert airdromes in Italian Libya.

Chungking, June 12 (AP)—More than 100 Japanese planes, attacking in waves for 15 minutes, started fires this afternoon in the centre of this provisional Chinese capital. Heavy casualties are feared.

Fifty casualties were listed as a result of yesterday's bombs.

Paris 'Citadel' Of Civilization And Human Spirit'

New York, June 12 (CP)—The New York Times said today the Germans are right in regarding Paris as the citadel of civilization, a stronghold of the human spirit, a symbol of everything they wish to abolish from the earth.

"Paris is no ordinary city," the newspaper said editorially. "And if the Germans in their pride of French resistance are bent on destroying it wherever, in one sense possible, it will not be because it is a military fortress—but because it is what it is.

"And though they inflict an irreparable loss upon the world by shattering the outer walls, the inner bastion is forever impregnable to gunfire and the blasting of bombs."

The Princess stood on the deck of the warship which brought here yesterday and addressed the sailors and officers in Dutch. As she turned to depart the seamen gave her three cheers and then three more for The Netherlands.

W. H. Measures of Ottawa, a representative of the Canadian External Affairs Department, escorted Princess Juliana down the gangplank to the pier. F. E. H. Groenman, Netherlands Minister to Canada, met her at the foot of the walk and escorted her to the special train which was waiting alongside the pier.

Two 45,000-Ton U. S. Battleships And Others to be Started at Once

Washington, June 12 (AP).—The Navy announced today that work was ordered started on two new 45,000-ton battleships and twenty other warships and auxiliaries last night, within an hour after President Roosevelt signed the navy's $1,400,000,000 appropriation act.

The two battleships were assigned to the New York and Philadelphia Navy yards, respectively, and the other vessels were divided between government and commercial yards.

The twenty-two ships will cost more than $127,000,000, it was estimated.

The speed with which the navy acted found its army counterpart in measures which were said to be designed both to strengthen defences and furnish substantial assistance to the British and French allies.

A group of 93 airplanes and millions of dollars worth of munitions were being made available to the Allies by the army under the government's "trade-in" plan of aid. The 93 war planes, Northrop attack ships, were being concentrated at Houlton, Me., on the Canadian border, for immediate delivery to the Allies.

The White House reported that the army was turning its reserve equipment, including machine guns, private industry for the "immediate production of sizable quantities" of smokeless powder, ammonia and small arms ammunition.

The army's reserve manufacturing equipment was described by officials as having cost between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000.

The 93 airplanes being traded in are single-motored monoplanes, each armed with five machine guns and carrying 30 small or four large bombs—or alternatively a load of chemicals for smoke screens. They were designed especially to harass enemy troops from low altitudes.

Availability and the Northrops were capable of normally of flying about 1,000 miles without refuelling.

Forced Landing Made In Ploughed Field

Hawtesbury, Ont., June 13—(C. P.)—Flying Officer M. J. Andrews of Cornwall, Ont., and Aircraftsman A. C. T. Collis of the Royal Canadian Air Force escaped serious injury Tuesday when their Westland Lysander army co-operation plane made a forced landing in a newly-ploughed field five miles west of here, and turned on its nose.

It was understood the undercarriage of the plane from Rockcliffe, Ont., on army co-operation practice, stuck in the soft earth and turned over, suffering considerable damage. The plane made the forced landing as it was running low on gas.

In Ottawa it was stated Flying Officer Andrews suffered only slight injuries while Aircraftsman Collis escaped unhurt. R.C.A.F. headquarters in Ottawa said Collis was from Turnstile.)

Netherlands flags flew from the decks of the cruiser and from the English escort sloop of the Western. Dutch sailors with their ribbon caps lined the rails as Queen Princess disappeared in the transit shed behind the special train.

Two 45,000-Ton U.S. Battleships And Others to be Started at Once

Washington, June 12 (AP).—The Navy announced today that work was ordered started on two new 45,000-ton battleships and twenty other warships and auxiliaries last night, within an hour after President Roosevelt signed the navy's $1,400,000,000 appropriation act.

The two battleships were assigned to the New York and Philadelphia Navy yards, respectively, and the other vessels were divided between private shipyards and navy yards.

The twenty-two ships will cost more than $327,000,000, it was estimated.

The speed with which the navy acted found its army counterpart in measures which were said to be designed both to strengthen defences and furnish substantial assistance to the British and Flynch allies.

Orders for 93 airplanes and millions of dollars worth of munitions were being made available to the Allies by the army under the government's "trade-in" plan of aid.

The 93 war planes, Northrop attack ships, were being concentrated at Houlton, Me., on the Canadian border. The concentration point was said to have been decided upon as the most direct route of getting the ships, which are six or seven years old, to the Allies.

The White House reported that the army was turning its reserve munitions manufacturing over to private industry for the "immediate production of shells, gunpowder, smokeless powder, ammonia and small arms ammunition."

The army's primary manufacturing equipment was described by officials as having cost between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000.

The 93 airplanes being traded in are single-motored monoplanes, each armed with five machine guns and carrying 20 small or four large bombs—or alternatively a load of chemicals for smoke screens. They were designed especially to harass enemy troops from low altitudes.

Authorities said the Northrops were capable normally of flying about 1,000 miles without refuelling.

Italians Caught Unawares in Libya Where Aircraft Were Destroyed on Ground and Petrol Dump Set Afire

London, June 12—(CP)— Royal Air Force bombing planes harassed distant outposts of Italy's African Empire and struck at German forces in Norway and France in ever-widening phases of the war on Tuesday.

From German-occupied Trondheim in central Norway to Italian air bases in eastern Africa, the Royal Air Force reported successful raids, while Italian warplanes bombed Malta, British naval base in the Mediterranean, with little effect.

At the same time, Allied naval forces closed the Suez Canal to Italian shipping which has given the lifeline to Italy's colonies on the Red Sea.

These blows were reported struck on both sides in the far-flung theatre of war:

1. The R.A.F. Middle East Command announced that it concentrated on raids by Blenheim bombers on desert airdromes in Italian Libya.

Paris 'Citadel Of Civilization And Human Spirit'

New York, June 12 (CP).—The New York Times said today the Germans are right in regarding Paris as a citadel—"a citadel of civilization, a stronghold of the human spirit, a symbol of everything which is abolish from the earth.

"Paris is no ordinary city," the newspaper said editorially. "And if the Germans in the days of a French resistance are bent on destroying it anyway, as now seems plain, it will not be because it is a military fortress—but because it is what it is.

"And though they inflict an irreparable loss on the world by shattering the most beautiful of all the citadel is forever impregnable to violence and the blasting of bombs."

Forced Landing Made In Ploughed Field

Hawkesbury, Ont., June 13—(C. P.)—Flying Officer M. J. Andrews of Cornwall, Ont., and Aircraftsman A. C. T. Collis of the Royal Canadian Air Force escaped serious injury Tuesday when their Westland Lysander army co-operation plane made a forced landing in a newly-ploughed field five miles west of here, and turned on its back.

It was understood the undercarriage of the plane from Rockcliffe, Ont., on army co-operation practice, stuck in the soft earth and nosed over, suffering considerable damage. The plane made the forced landing it was running low on gas.

In Ottawa it was stated Flying Officer Andrews suffered only slight injuries while Aircraftsman Collis escaped unhurt. R.C.A.F. headquarters in Ottawa said Collis was from Toronto.)

POLISH SUB LOST SAYS ADMIRALTY

1,100-Ton Craft Launched in 1938 and Escaped Internment at Estonia Last September

London, June 13 —(CP)— The Polish submarine Orsel has been lost, it was announced today.

Loss of the vessel was announced through the British Admiralty by the Polish naval staff.

The Orsel, a 1,100-ton craft was launched Jan. 15, 1938, escaped internment at Tallinn, Estonia, last Sept. 18 by sailing suddenly without authorization. Shore batteries fired upon her without success. She took two Estonian guards who were rescued by Swedish seamen after being placed in a dingy in the open sea.

The Orsel had gone to Estonia as the German army overran Polish ports.

The Orsel sank the German transport Rio de Janiero last April, sending 300 German troops to death.

The text of the communique follows:

"The Polish naval staff regrets to announce that as the commander of the submarine Orsel from patrol is now considerably overdue, the submarine must be considered lost."

The submarine's complement was 56 officers and men.

ALLEGEDLY FAILED TO NEGOTIATE CURVE

Failing to negotiate a curve immediately north of the city limits on the Cannifton Road, an automobile driven by Joseph Hugh-John Yeomans Street, crashed into a telephone pole and was badly damaged shortly after midnight last night. Asa Lloyd, Belleville, was a passenger in the car, sustained severe lacerations.

In colliding with the guard rail fence while proceeding south, the car driven by Mr. Hughes sheared four rail posts and badly damaged the front of the vehicle. Provincial Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated and stated that charges of operating a motor car without a licence and careless driving had been preferred against the driver. The vehicle was a borrowed machine.

PARK EMPLOYEES PLACING POSTS TO DIRECT TRAFFIC

Congestion of motor traffic at the south end of Victoria Park is causing inconvenience to drivers at this point and in general proving an annoyance according to complaints registered with Parks Board, who have caused action to be taken, which will relieve the situation in the future.

Parks employees today were engaged in placing posts along the roadway which crosses the park midway between the entrance and the bay, preparatory to fencing the southern part of the park to eliminate motor traffic. Gateways will be left on the road which encircles the park however, but will be guarded with a stout chain to keep motorists from entering.

Under the auspices of the Women's Conservative Association a most successful euchre party and bingo took place in the Chinnecum last evening and a splendid sum was realized for Red Cross work. The first prize was won by Mrs. Byrne and the euchre prizes by Mrs. Cunningham, ladies' first; Mrs. McCluskie, second, and Mrs. Baker, third. Mr. Elliott, men's first, Mr. McCluskie, second, and Mr. Clark and Mr. Scultherp, third. The chair prizes were won by Mrs. Mosaman and Mrs. Andrews. The Association is very grateful for the generous attendance at the affair which made possible a gratifying contribution to the Red Cross.

OVER 1,000 BICYCLE LICENCES ISSUED

There are more bicycles in the city of Belleville than the city officials realized it was proved by the fact, that an order of one thousand bicycle licenses proved insufficient to supply each bicycle owner with a licence and they were sold out ten days after 1000 on sale. Although when it was first decided to licence bicycles in the city it was thought that one thousand would be ample, Mr. Harold Bateman, city comptroller, stated this morning that five hundred more had been ordered and he doubted if this number would be sufficient.

The markers placed on order have not arrived in the city as yet however last are expected any day and owners who have not procured their permits will be able to register their steeds" at the city hall.

County Council Members to Visit H. & P. E. Regiment

A cordial invitation to members of the Hastings County Council now in June session, to visit the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Picton on Friday was extended yesterday by Lieut.-Col. R. C. Churcher, commanding officer of the regiment.

Council Warden John L. Churcher, accepted the invitation and will visit the depot tonight or tomorrow morning when a decision to be arrived at this afternoon.

In addressing council, Col. Donnan expressed the wish of himself and officers of the unit to have council visit the depot in order "to see for yourselves how the troops are housed, fed, and equipped." A more important point, he said, would be the pointing out to the visitors why the Picton Armouries was selected as the headquarters of the regiment. There had been some diversity of opinion regarding the selection of Picton, especially among residents of Hastings County, he said, and he hoped the visit would clear up any misunderstanding which might exist regarding this point, among members of council.

Will Visit Hospital

Earlier this afternoon, Council, upon invitation of Gordon A. Friesen, administrator of the Belleville General Hospital, will visit the institution, when a specially arranged tour of inspection of the new wing will be given the visitors. Special guides have been furnished and the county fathers will get a first hand view of the modern wing with its up-to-date equipment and medical appliances.

Marked interest on the part of council in the new wing and the hospital generally was noted when the invitation to visit the institution was read from the chair. Unanimous consent was given and the council will attend in a body.

PARADE OF YOUTH WINS PRAISE OF ALL RESIDENTS

Cadet Corps of All Educational Institutions and Girl Guides With Bands Parade Through City

SALUTE IS TAKEN

Public Keenly Interested and Thousands Line Route in Downtown Section

The echo of two thousand marching feet that exemplified the spirit of Belleville's youth, re-echoed in the hearts of thousands of city residents last night, when the Cadet Corps of the educational institution of the city marched through flag-decked streets to the applause of the assembled throngs.

The salute was taken by Major T. V. Wills, local military officer, at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Front Street. With Major Wills, were Lieutenants Jack Deacon and Bert Prink of the 34th Field Battery, R.C.A., Lieutenant Reg. Monorieff, of the Board of Education and trustees, Messrs. A. B. Payne Charles L. Hyde and Russell Wood.

To the marching tempos of the Belleville Municipal Band, the Belleville Collegiate Corps, the Public Schools Band, the Belleville Rifles skirling bagpipes and the ringing brasses and drums of St. Michael's Choir School Band, the colorful parade of cadets, both boys and girls, augmented by numbers of fellow students from the different schools, swung through city thoroughfares while the greater percentage of the population of Belleville gazed in admiration from pavement, lawn and houses.

Girls Augment Corps

To the rhythmic call of the pipes, the parade headed by the smartly marching cadets of Queen Mary School swung in quick tempo past the reviewing stand in the most approved army style, led the way for the line of blue-skirted members of the Girl Guide troop of the same school.

Boys and girls of Queen Alexandra School marched at a point to the rear of the girls in Belleville Municipal Band. Then followed King George School, Queen Victoria Corps, their numbers swelled with other students.

Colorful Unit

At this point the most colorful unit of the entire parade of youth, the Belleville Collegiate Girls Corps, immaculate in their blue and white uniforms that won them unstinted praise at their inspection last week, swung along the streets in perfect unison. Arms and legs swinging as in two straight lines, the ranks of threes marched along with the precision of veterans. At their head marched Battalion Commander Bernice Staunton. As the attractive corps swung through the streets spontaneous applause broke out from the thousands of people that lined the streets.

Bringing up the rear of the parade came the Public Schools Band, followed by the boys corps in their khaki uniforms.

Along Church Street to Station Street, thence to Front to McAnaney Street to Pinnacle to Bridge, thence to Church and the collegiate-campus the parade marched.

The keen interest of the public of the city was evidenced in the large enthusiastic crowds that flocked to the main thoroughfares to watch the parade of youth as it ever assembled in Belleville. As if cognizant of the admiration of the spectators the corps, marched along the route of parade with the smartness and efficiency of military units.

Arriving at the campus of the collegiate institute the different corps were dismissed by their officers. Prior to the start of the parade, the corps formed up at the different schools and marched to the point of mobilization.

Post-parade commentary was to the effect that the city should be indeed proud of its various cadet corps, and the members of the many units exemplified in no small degree the spirit of Canadian youth, with their outstanding exhibition before the keen gaze of the most exacting critic of all, the public.

Another Appeal Made To Anti-Subversive Committee by Citizen

For the second time within a week Belleville Anti-Sabotage and Anti-Subversive Committee was petitioned by a Belleville citizen who sought to have certain alleged slanderous remarks investigated last night. The local Anti-Subversive Committee, that is composed of five civilian, military and civil personages in Belleville, is taking a firm stand to put a stop to the repeating of slanderous and libelous statements and rumors directed against innocent citizens.

Col. A. P. Allen, chairman of the committee, assured the delegation registering the protest last night that steps to prosecute all persons responsible for the making of slanderous statements would be made by the committee in the future.

"Where there is one person holding responsible positions in Belleville who has been subject to such slander and embarrassment and it is time something was done to stop such malicious ruptures," added Lieut. Col. A. B. Cribbin, who is also a member of the committee. The committee now has the matter under investigation.

'Canadian Transportation' Force in Canada's War Effort Members of Kiwanis Club Told

Address Prepared by J. F. Pringle, K.B.E., General Supt., Read to Members at Luncheon

OTHER BUSINESS

An address by J. F. Pringle, Superintendent of the Southwestern Division of the Canadian National Railways, to the Kiwanis Club on "Canadian Transportation," was read in absentia of Mr. Pringle by Harold Seldon, a member of the club. Mr. Pringle was suddenly called to Point Hope to escort the body of the late Hon. Norman Rogers, who was killed in a plane accident at Newcastle on Monday, to Ottawa and could not possibly attend. Mr. Pringle felt he would not be fair to the club to disappoint the members and so had his address forwarded to the club secretary. The thanks of the club was extended to Mr. Gordon Butler, who stated that the City of Belleville owes a great deal to the Canadian National in this city and that the co-operation of the organization living in the city were a credit to any city. Officials of the company were present, including Mr. Jones, Locomotive Foreman at this terminal.

Held Ladies' Night

The meeting was presided over by Bill Anderson, President of the club, with Sergeant-at-Arms Bill Sergeant-at-Arms and Harold Carruthers as song leader. Leo B. Riggs acted as pianist. Community singing, Eddie Shapiro announced that a social evening for Ladies' Night would be held on Monday, June 24th and a good time was arranged. There will be no speaker at the meeting.

The members are assisting in the war work by taking up a collection of paper each week and along with which War Savings stamps will be purchased. The Club is not allowed to buy these stamps as a rule but at the end of the year they will likely be thrown away but by the purchase of the stamps it is a help to the government in this emergency.

A minute was also observed for the memory of the Minister of National Defence, the Hon. Norman Rogers and that it was announced that Mr. Pringle, father of Jack Pringle, a member of the club, would be unable to be present due to his duty of attending the funeral to Ottawa as representative of the C.N.R. Following a period of silence in honor of reading the address to the members and it was very interesting. Mr. Pringle's address:

"Although in Belleville goes back for 85 years, the original line of the Grand Trunk Railway has been constructed through Belleville in 1856. During those years the Canadian Railroads have contributed something to your growth and prosperity that could not have helped us in many ways. Today our payroll in Belleville is as large if not larger, than any other single industry, and our taxes are, I am sure, a welcome contribution to your city treasurer. However, I feel that our most important contribution is the number and quality of young men who are associated with the Canadian National Railways.

"There is only one thing I know very much about, and that is Canadian Transportation" and have therefore taken that as my theme today. I may have been asked a great deal of the so-called railway problem, and that is, how can we get to the best satisfaction or otherwise by a few well chosen words or a few minutes talk. I have my own ideas on the subject, and as a result some time would enjoy speaking to some of the hard things that have been said about us in the past. It will not, however, inflict anything like that on you today but will endeavour to present the manner in which the Canadian Railways have met their present responsibilities to the Canadian people, and the part they have played to do in assisting to meet the present national emergency.

Transportation Essential

"In the development of any country, adequate and economical transportation is the most essential element, and in our country, with its great distances, its widely separated centres of population, and its enormous natural resources, this is especially true. There could be no political unity as we have it today, and it is doubtful if the northern part of the American continent would have remained British, if it were not that the Canadian people saw the forethought and courage to mortgage the future to build railways from the Atlantic to the Pacific, dated Upper and Lower Canada; Confederation was based upon the building of a transcontinental railway, and our present British Columbia and our great western plains with the East, and it was only after the completion of these railways that Canada became a unified nation. As we see it today, there must have been over-optimism at certain times, and certain railways were undoubtedly built before their time, but on the whole, I can safely say, that the building of railways has returned to the Canadian people ten dollars in the production of national wealth for every one expended, and I am convinced that the Railway, This is in a commercial sense — the political and social advantages have been added for good measure.

Two Systems Necessary

"Again the present emergency has shown the necessity for one great transcontinental railways. With the demand for transportation for war materials, it has been necessary to reroute freight which normally moves from British Columbia via the Panama Canal, and both lines will soon be taxed to capacity. I may use now being made of these railways should silence the critics who formerly made of their construction and maintenance.

"In speaking of over-optimism, is it not time we paused and considered what is being done today in the way of developing transportation facilities, and whether or not the expenditures which we are making on highways are not creating a wasteful competition for facilities which already exist, is not in excess of our present economic demands.

"The Minister of Transport speaking in Toronto a year or so ago, pointed out that there was a deficit on our highways, that is the difference between their annual upkeep and gasoline and motor licences fees was $52,000,000, and on the Canadian National alone the excess of $20,000,000, yet we are still making further expenditures and commitments.

Stand 6th in World Trade

"It has been well said that trade and commerce are the life blood of a nation, and that the railways provide the arteries through which that life blood flows. We are comparatively small nation of 11 million people, stand 6th in world trade. This can be largely attributed to the fertile fields, our mining mineral production, our immense forest reserves and above all to our waterpower. If you stop to consider a moment, you will agree with me that these would be of very little value were it not that we had the transportation to get them efficient and economical rail transportation system.

"The President of the National Industrial Traffic League recently stated that the greatest problem in the backbone of American industry, and railroads are being asked to provide service to the extent that when industry relies, it is necessary that adequate, reasonable service be rendered. Without such service the railroads cannot help but share the prosperity of the nation cannot be realized." This statement applies to Canadian conditions.

"With a population of 11 millions, we produce enough to feed 45 millions, cheese to feed 30 millions, and wheat to feed 100 millions, and more. These surpluses, to be of value, must be exported, and to do so still their export cheap mass transportation is essential.

Surpluses Must be Moved

"Again the surplus production in one part of the country must be moved to other parts of the country; for instance, the wheat and fruits of the Prairies, Western beef to cities of the East, Maritime fish to the fishery; the products of our factories, manufactured implements, motor cars, clothing, etc. must be distributed from sea to sea. If the distribution of our local products were confined to markets which could be reached by road, the markets would be so limited that production would be very considerably curtailed, with consequent reduction in national income.

"We, of course, have other means of transportation, highways, water and air, and they all have their place, but from their very nature and inherent limitations, they cannot replace the Railways in handling the commerce of the country. The trucks have a distinct and useful purpose in their own sphere, and there is no essential competition between them and the Railways, but from their very nature they can never replace rail transportation for the movement of bulk commodities over long distances —the cost would be prohibitive, comparatively high cost of truck movement is inherent in the nature of the roadbed and vehicles' use' I have only to mention that the distance to movement of a rubble tire on a concrete pavement is 20 times that of a steel wheel on a steel rail, and that five men can handle a trainload on the railway that would take 240 men with 20 ton trucks to handle on the roads and it is impossible for control of motive power to pull a long string of vehicles.

Railways Economical

"Even with the subsidies that this form of transportation receives, it cannot handle traffic as economically as the railways.

"It has been estimated that land transportation consumes 30 per cent of our national wealth, in truth only 9 per cent is consumed in rail transportation, in spite of the much greater volume moved by rail. If it were physically possible for the railways to perform with motor vehicles, the same service rendered by rail today, 30 per cent of our national wealth would be spent on land transportation.

"Water transportation, if we include Capital and Maintenance charges on our canals and improved river system, is cheaper than rail, but is confined to those parts of the country served by lakes, rivers and canals, and as well know what happens to water transportation in this country for at least five months in each year. Incidentally, the railways are called upon to carry a large surplus of equipment over the summer months to meet the increases in traffic which come with the freezing of the waterways and the blocking of the ports in the winter.

"The fact that railroading is a highly specialized and technical industry has placed a responsibility and burden on the railroad executive very officer and employee, and in spite of the fact that in the last few years they have been going through very difficult times, they have not relaxed their vigilance in providing dependable and economical transportation, and have, during that period, increased their service to the public.

Move at Passenger Train Speeds

"Freight trains now move at passenger train speeds. Overnight delivery of freight between points 300 miles apart is commonly maintained. Schedules that have been built from horse-and-buggy days have shrunk the transportation map of this continent materially and have brought communities consuming centres closer together. Passenger schedules and the regularity of deliveries has enabled wholesalers and manufacturers, alike, to materially reduce inventories and resulted in saving millions of dollars in capital.

"We are inclined to take for granted as a matter of fact and one not to be wondered at, the service rendered by the railways of this country in handling daily, thousands of loaded freight cars from one end of the country to the other without delay or congestion, and on schedule that has the reliability of passenger service. Transportation of these points for Vancouver, and every seventh freight car for Calgary rails and at their destinations, having performed service between the two terminals. Your lumber merchant knows that when he orders a car of lumber for delivery at B.C. fir has left Vancouver, he can rely upon that car being in his yard within a given later and make his plans accordingly. The same applies to the fish dealer in Toronto when he orders his supply of fish from the west coast and market knowing that it will be on hand when needed.

Operate Fleet of Trains

"Out of Chicago we operate daily a fleet of scheduled fast freight trains, which connect at the gateways of the Niagara frontier, second morning delivery to the cities in the East, our own lines third morning delivery in Boston.

"Then we have between Montreal and Toronto, fast freight trains of passenger train speed, which make the day about 8 p.m., taking all the freight that has arrived during the day and delivering at destination on the following morning. These trains were first put on, they operated in one section. Now there are four and five sections nightly.

"Similar services are in effect in all parts of the country—Windsor-Toronto, Toronto-Montreal, etc.

"Incidentally the men give these trains their own description. The fast freight train from Chicago to Detroit named by the men "The Ham and Eggers" and for this reason, one conductor answered me that he did not get enough sleep as many drove the Superintendent cuckoo.

"Carloadings and receipts from connections are at the present time running in the neighborhood of 70,000 per week, greatly in excess of last year, yet you hear of no car shortage, no congestion, nor any complaint as to the ability of the railways to handle the large traffic efficiently and satisfactorily.

Increase of 264 Per Cent Shown

"In the first five months of this year, our volume of traffic, as expressed in dollars, has increased over 16 millions of dollars or 26.4 per cent.

"The automobile production line is generally held up as the ultimate in production efficiency. You are all more or less familiar with this manufacture in which an automobile frame is started on a moving belt and as it moves through the building the various parts are fitted on until it finally rolls out of the building under its own power, it is a rather wonderful process, and very successful requires study and organization but in my mind it is to be compared with the study and organization necessary to keep cars continually moving on the railroads line from one end of the country to the other. In the first place, the yards assembly line is under one roof, and capable of close supervision, whereas the railway assembly line is scattered over thousands of miles of country, and in the second, the automobile plant repeats the same operation in the same way day after day, while the railway is handling a traffic which fluctuates in volume from day to day and week to week, and new problems are encountered and have to be adjusted each day.

"All the lakes organization and team work, and the utmost co-operation from each employee is necessary, starting with the section forces who are responsible for the road bed, the engineers who keep it in safe condition for the fast speeds required; the mechanical staff who are responsible for the upkeep of locomotives and cars; the engine and train crews, and our dispatchers our station staffs, all must do their part to make the performance possible.

"It must be remembered that all this service is given at the lowest freight rates in the world. The average freight revenue is less than one cent per ton mile.

Plenty of Improvements

"Let us look at what has been done in the past 20 years since the last war to improve railway conditions. Starting with the roadbed, our principal lines have been rock ballasted and 130 lb. rail has been placed upon it by heavier power, heavier cars, and greater speeds. Our principal lines are safe and comfortable rides for our passengers.

"Reduced grades, I started with a life of from 7 to 10 years, have been doubled, but reduce our annual maintenance bill for tie renewals. Just how considerable that tie bill is, and the contribution made by the wood preserving industry of this country will be realized when you find out on the Canadian National alone we use from ten to eight million ties per year.

"In the last 20 years the weight of rail on our principal lines has increased from 80 per yard to 100 and 130 per yard, again to meet the demands of heavier equipment and increased speed. To increase the life of the rail, we are now putting worn down joints by welding them up, and the rail when worn to the cost of doing this is less than the labor of taking out the old rail and replacing it with new.

"Our denser traffic lines have been provided with automatic signals to meet with safety the demand for increased speeds.

Speaks on Power

"In regard to power; 20 years ago the Mikado engine with a tractive effort of 52,000 lbs. was our largest power, and these were few in number and confined to main lines. Today we have 300 Mikados in service handled with our Northern type engines capable of hauling for fast passenger and freight service. Then we have our 5700 class engines which on our fast day trains between Montreal and Toronto, built to handle comparatively light trains at maximum speed and equipped with booster. This engine develops 80 mph. Also our 6400 class built to handle heavier passenger trains at high speeds. These 6400's were the locomotives that were used for the special purpose in handling the Royal train last year. Each type of locomotive is designed for a special purpose to give maximum economy in such service and all are maintained at a high degree of efficiency. We have recently ordered and are now receiving delivery of 25 of the 6100 type locomotives.

"You may be interested in some of the principal dimensions of these engines. They have eight drivers 73" in diameter with a tractive effort of 56,800 lbs. with booster, and 47,000 lbs. with the booster; their total weight is 300,000 lbs. Freight service with 35 to 40 cars they are operated at a speed of 60 miles per hour and in passenger service at speed of between 80 and 90 miles per hour.

"The old wooden underframe box car with its grief is practically a thing of the past. Today we are using steel-anstebbe box cars with improved draft gears and friction, set truck and spring arrangements, having an average capacity of 70 tons as compared with 32 tons twenty years ago.

"All this enables us to handle the volume of business with fewer cars and with greater efficiency. These improvements in freight car equipment, have enabled us to meet our service but have materially reduced our equipment repair expense. In 1923 repairs to freight cars cost $14.00 per 1,000 miles, and in 1938 this had been reduced less than $9.00 per 1,000 miles.

Average Rail Speed Increased

"In the last 16 years the average speed of all freight trains has increased from 12 miles per hour to 18 miles per hour, and improvement of 50 per cent, but this is a figure for all trains, including way-freights and locals. Fifteen years ago the maximum speeds for main line freight trains were from 50 to 60 miles per hour, today 60 miles an hour is our regular main line speeds, and we handle this our average coal consumption per 1000 gross ton miles has decreased from 160 lbs. to 120 lbs. an increase in efficiency of over 26 per cent.

"Passenger equipment has been modernized and strengthened to meet the same demands for equipment. All passenger carrying cars operating on main lines have been completely air-conditioned, lighting has been improved to provide for reading, radio and talking pull cords lies have been improved, train schedules have been eliminated, and additional appointments added for the comfort and convenience of our passengers. In addition, passenger schedules have been improved and lower fares put into effect, all in an effort to hold passenger traffic and build up the patronage of the railways to the public.

"All these improvements have cost money, but they have more than paid for themselves in increased efficiency, in the reduction of operating expenses, and in increased service to the public.

"The Canadian National has handle a very materially increased tourist traffic, and in the year 1939 that 1,249,000 tourists from the United States of America left $275,000,000 in this country, and it is estimated that in 1940 this will be increased to $300,000,000. Now it is true that a large part of this traffic will come by automobile, but it is also true that the Railways will be called upon to handle a large proportion of this, and in preparation for this we have been preparing, by means of the improvements mentioned to do it satisfactorily.

Tourist Trade Valuable

"Our tourist trade is of very considerable value to this country, the total volume in dollars exceeding the value of the farm exports by over eighty millions of dollars. The railways were pioneers in advertising the attractions of Canada as a tourist centre and in building up this trade, but it is manifest that they have received very little credit for, and, unfortunately, have not got today, participating to the extent in which they should in the tourist traffic.

"This country is being called upon on the maximum production of men, munitions and supplies overseas in the greatest war effort, and to adequately handle this movement to the seaboard and overseas the Canadian National is concerned, their ability to meet these requirements is the result of co-ordination of the various components, the making up of the system which has taken place since 1923, and the resistance of the railways to any policies which tended to impair its usefulness to meet these needs. It is due to their wisdom in improving equipment and efficiency as already pointed out.

Capacity Increases

"There is no comparison between the capacity of the railways in 1914 and 1940 to handle the increased traffic. The Railways in 1914 had 23,000-lb, and be it long or short I know, the Railways will rise to the present situation or any which may develop in connection with it. There will be no sparing of effort on the part of Canadian railway officers and employees citizens, proud of their job, and proud and anxious to render every service to their country that may be demanded.

"For some time, we have heard criticisms of the cost of the Canadian National to the Canadian people. I have endeavored in my sketchy way to show that this cost was justified by the service rendered in the building up of the trade and commerce of the country, and that today the railways are manned and equipped to render a great service during the present crisis.

Hastings County Ready to Make Sacrifices Warden States

'Liberties Dearly Bought Will be Defended,' Says J. L. Churcher

COMMITTEES NAMED

Realization of the seriousness of "one of the most grievous calamities" in the history of the Empire, and affirmation of the loyalty of the County of Hastings, was voiced by Warden J. L. Churcher, Tuesday afternoon in the inaugural address to the June session of County Council.

Prior to the Warden's address the Rev. Dr. James Semple, Minister of Bridge Street United Church read the Psalm "I will lift up mine eyes to the hills," followed by prayer. Following the National Anthem was sung with all members and guests standing.

Residents of this county, the Warden said, were assured the finest, most loyal in the Dominion, and every effort will be made to relieve the seriousness of the military situation overseas comes home, can we do less than "Stick to it."

The county's obligations were far greater than ever before, Warden Churcher pointed out. "Our freedom and liberties did not come to us as a easy manner, but which were bought dearly by the treasure and blood of our forefathers, at the stake of the sofekeeping, we must fight for and die for if necessary."

"Willing And Ready"

Speaking for Hastings County Warden Churcher continued, "I say our people are willing and ready to do their duty, whatever it may be, freedom and justice. This spirit prevails throughout the county, the largest city to the very smallest community. Farmers, businessmen, industrial organizations, are willing to carry on to help win this war."

Turning to municipal affairs the Warden stressed the council that the current session would be one of the busiest in the history of the county. Considerable correspondence would be placed before members, he said, from the Department of Municipal Affairs in connection with the Municipal Act, and a report would be prepared, by means of the committees mentioned to do it satisfactorily.

Tourist Trade Valuable

"Our tourist trade is of very considerable value to this county, the total volume in dollars exceeding the value of the farm exports by over eighty millions of dollars. The railways were pioneers in advertising the attractions of Canada as a tourist centre and in building up this trade, but it is manifest that they have received very little credit for, and, unfortunately, have not got today, participating to the extent in which they should in the tourist traffic.

Rumors That a 'Pronounced and Active Nazi' in Saskatchewan Released During Election Brings No Retort

300 NOW INTERNED

Ottawa, June 13.—(CP)—Rumors that a "pronounced and active Nazi" in Saskatchewan, a supporter of he Liberal Party, was released from internment camp during the election campaign last winter, were repeated in the House of Commons yesterday by M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader.—Signal.

Mr. Coldwell was referring he said, to Alois N. Schneider of Rosthern, Saskatchewan, whose case was the subject of question on the order paper some days ago. The government answer had been that it was not in the public interest to reveal details or internments or releases. The Schneider incident arose during the election when Prime Minister Mackenzie King's motion to set up a Committee to investigate charges of Nazi activities in Canada was under discussion.

There was no government reply to Mr. Coldwell's references to Mr. Schneider.

Conservative Leader Hanson stressed there were 78,000 persons of German origin now resident in Canada, and 300 Italians. He warned the government to be on guard against activities of these elements in view of "fifth column" activities in other countries that have fallen under dictatorships.

Hon. T. A. Crerar, Mines and Resources Minister who has charge of internments, said that in the past three years only 1,340 Germans born had been admitted to Canada, and that 300 were now interned.

12,000 Enemy Aliens Registered

In view of the fact that some 12,000 enemy aliens had been registered with the police Mr. Hanson said he was astonished that only about 300 had been interned.

"Immigration figures of the last few years show that 12,000 Germans have been admitted as immigrants to Canada than Scotch, Irish or Welsh settlers put together." Mr. Hanson declared. "This is the only place while Germany has been intensifying her grip on central Europe."

Mr. Hanson added he could only conclude that the Germans were Germans came to Canada as part of Hitler's plan to create a fifth column organization. But he was aprehensive in view of the record of Hitler's plan to put Nazis into countries countries to prepare the way for internal strife when the time was ready.

Mr. Hanson drew censure from Mr. Coldwell when he spoke of solidarity" in the Canadian Commons came to Canada as part of Hitler's plan to create a fifth column organization. But he was aprehensive in view of the record of Hitler's plan to put Nazis into countries countries to prepare the way for internal strife when the time was ready.

Mr. Hanson drew censure from Mr. Coldwell when he spoke of solidarity" in the Canadian Commons when he suggested that those who might object to the Defence of Canada Regulations Mr. Hanson who objected to internment of persons with advanced ideas and suggested that they should be dealt with in accordance with common people where "perhaps their pale coloring will shade into a more eloquent white."

Like Is Not Like Moderna

Mr. Coldwell said that one more he heard from some politicians the better. He suggested that what was improved by association with colleagues professors. He said the people of Great Britain had turned in their extremity to the very type of advanced thinkers to which Mr. Hanson referred.

Mr. Hanson had said of some university professors should "apply with all force of their celebrity "Hail Hitler" down to its essentials, some saying "Hitler," but mostly its "ller."

BOMBS KILL TWO AT GENEVA

Eighteen Others Injured When Unidentified Bombers Drop Five Bombs—Two Others Killed at Renens

Geneva, June 12.—(AP)— The Swiss counted four dead, including two women, and eighteen injured today in bombings of cities and villages by foreign planes. The identity of the bombers was unknown.

At least 18 persons suffered serious wounds in Geneva, where five bombs were dropped in a residential district, killing two persons.

Five bombs were dropped on a railroad station in nearby hotel in Renens, north of Lausanne. A woman in the station was killed, and her husband's foot was torn off, and a young girl was killed in the hotel, was fatally injured.

The plane or planes that dropped the bombs drew the fire of both French and Swiss anti-aircraft batteries. A raider, roared over the towering Salève Cliff just across the border in France, came over Swiss territory as it released its bombs.

Swiss expressed an unofficial belief that the bombs were dropped by German warplanes, but a communique some hours later did not state its nationality.

BATTLE AT REIMS GRAVELY SERIOUS

Germans Have Launched Heavy Attacks With Two Armored Divisions in Drive on Paris

London, June 13—(CP)—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Paris declared a French military spokesman as saying that the battle for Reims is now fifty miles following a French withdrawal north of the city.

The situation remains one of extreme difficulty," the spokesman was quoted as saying. "The Germans are staking everything on this battle."

In London British military circles said that now "everything depends on the ability of the French Army to hold the superior forces of the German mechanized cavalry of France.

There has been "no slackening" of the German attack, it was said.

"The situation is grave and of extreme difficulty," one observer said. "The Germans are staking everything on it."

"The most serious thing is the development of the battle of Reims where heavy attacks have been launched with German armored troops of which there are two divisions."

As to the possibility of Italian operations from Ethiopia against British Somaliland and returned railway outlet from Ethiopia, the observer said, there is no confirmation that the Italians are attacking Somaliland.

He noted however that the Italians have always had the railway and may hope for some quick success for reasons of morale.

Little damage was done by the Italian bombing of the British Mediterranean base at Malta yesterday, the commentator said.

GARDENS IN THE CITY

Many gardens are being worked this year under the urge of increased production for war purposes.

This occupation is one of the attractions of life in a city of the size of Belleville where there are many gardens in which large amounts of produce can be grown.

This effort this year means larger production so that families may have a larger income or less expenditure, and that more produce may be available for export. The extra food produce grown on a lot in the city is considerable and means a big help to a family. Of especial appeal it is for those who have not much employment for by this means they are able to replenish the larder.

Another advantage is the air of health which working in the soil brings. Work with plants, vegetables and garden produce is good for the body and it restores the mind.

In war days it is felt that everyone should be doing something to help achieve victory for the Allies. Every factor that adds to the wealth and strength of the nation must be utilized to the full to add to the assurance of certain victory.

FASCISM IS UNMASKED

Mussolini's background is such as to show that his development into the present and his entry into the war are just what might have been expected of such a career. After a short time as teacher he became a journalist and social agitator in Switzerland. In 1904 he left that country upon pressure from the government and went to Austria but he also expelled from that country in 1909. When he went back to Italy he was put in prison because of his opposition to the Tripolitan expedition. He edited a Socialist daily 'Avanti' from 1912 to 1914, and on the outbreak of war he left advocacy of socialistic doctrines to fight for Italy.

Like his fellow dictator he evinced a pro-war spirit in 1915 and served until 1917 when he was discharged because of wounds. By that time he was in control. 'After the war he resumed his violent type of journalism and founded a body of veteran group, the Fasci di Combattimenti in 1919. In three years this group was a politically strong and in October of 1922 there took place "the March on Rome" before the intimidated constituted government fell. Mussolini formed a cabinet at the request of the King and started the Fascist state. There with ruthless policy and not without opposition he drove Italy towards dictatorship, wiping out the last vestige of parliamentary government four years ago. The world knows of the invasion of Ethiopia and the later seizure on a Good Friday of Albania. These two sinister events happened under Fascist auspices and are signs of the trend. They were in line with the Nazi seizures of the demilitarized Rhine area, the conquest of Austria, the destruction of Czecho-lovakia and the rape of Poland and also the recent invasion of two Scandinavian kingdoms and of the two Lowland Countries.

When some day the history of this era threatened with dictatorships will be written the future world may be amazed that such things could have been. To most people a few years ago many things which are happening would have been thought impossible. Few could have foresees states like Germany and Italy adopting such policies of evil import as those of Hitlerism and Mussolinism.

LAST QUARTER OF AN HOUR'

Commander-in-chief Weygand said to his troops a few days ago, "the enemy has suffered heavy losses. Soon he will come to the end of his effort. We have reached the last quarter of an hour. Hold tight."

For days the grim terrific battle has been raging in northern France with the enemy throwing far over a million men into the attack on the front. The enemy has been extending the line of the attack.

General Weygand is fighting an action to wear down the German offensive. It is his opinion that this terrific drive must spend itself out of sheer exhaustion the propelling power will have to let up. Very heavy losses have been suffered by the enemy, who has thrown his tanks, infantry, guns and aeroplanes into the battle with wanton abandon, trusting to weight and force to win a decision.

France has seen an enemy at her gates before. The French people have the strength which comes from centuries upon centuries of defending this very land. They saw the dark days before the coming of the Maid of Orleans. They saw the Germans only a few miles from Paris in the last war.

New British troops have been sent into France and the British Prime Minister has said that Britain is sending every possible assistance.

In this Battle of France, the Allied Command is using the plan of "resistance in depth" to stop the Nazi drive.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Democracy and Universal Service

New York, June 12— The idea of universal service in the defense forces of the nation goes back to the French Revolution. Far from being an undemocratic idea it is the idea which began with the idea of personal freedom, and logically it is the idea of the life of freedom unless he is prepared to defend it with his own body.

The decay of democracy began with the concept that it consisted of the enjoyment of rights attended by no complementary responsibilities. The result of such a concept is anarchy and the result of anarchy is despotism and slavery.

x x x

Actually, the old form of military defense that is not a menace to democracy is that built upon universal service. The oldest and, for its size, the strongest democracy in the world today is the Swiss. Like our own it was founded on the principle of the citizen in arms: it came into being with an oath—the oath to be free and to defend freedom. It has also been a democracy in which every citizen is a soldier and every soldier a citizen. And it has thus remained free, while being, for its size, so strong that its powerful neighbors prefer to touch her frontiers rather than the sharp porcupine of Switzerland.

Under such a system universal service cannot become a State Church, because the boundaries of the democratic citizen and the democratic army are coincident with the frontiers of the State, and the democratic citizens is a democratic army.

x x x

When the Treaty of Versailles, which was to keep Germany militarily weak, prohibited universal service it made sure that the construction of the German Republic.

Adolf Hitler was a creation of the German Army. This is matter of history. The German Army created, the German Army was not created by Hitler. The old army had been the army of the Hohenzollern Reich, a semi-absolutist State, based upon a rigid class system and a bureaucratic paternalistic State socialism. The army permitted by Versailles was limited to 100,000 men, and was reconstructed by the officers of the Hohenzollern tradition. It was treaty required twelve years' service for every soldier, which meant that the army became a professional body. It conceived itself as protector of Germany, and therefore identified itself with Germany, and became a State within a State. Its aim was to throw off the Treaty of Versailles and retrieve its own power.

Adolf Hitler was given his first platform by that army; he was employed by it as a speaker, his newspaper received its first subsidy from that army. On the shoulders of that army he was raised, with its aid he overthrew the Republic, and he then introduced universal military service and strengthened the regime he had created.

Had the German Republic had its own army—drawn as of all her citizens, organized to defend the Republic, the democratic spirit of a free and co-operative Europe in the German Republic would be there today, and the voice of destruction would not be howling down the wind.

An army must be of the composition of the form of State it serves, otherwise it will rule that State. A democratic army cannot be served by a democratic army—as France is served and as Switzerland is served. If a State today has no army it perishes. If it has an army rooted by universal service in the unwritten philosophy of the State it will serve that philosophy of life.

Therefore, for the defense of unwritten virtue, as well as without, we must insist on universal service.

Pleas to Leopold Revealed by Aides

The vacancy of the Belgian throne could not be announced at the meeting of members of the Belgian Parliament at Limoges Friday because the premier's chair was lacking. The Belgian Minister, Carton de Wiart, explained today that both Chambers of Parliament would make a decision as soon as they were able to assemble.

A full report of Foreign Minister Paul Reynaud's statement to account at the Limoges meeting of events preceding the capitulation of the Belgian army follows:

In the course of a conversation with the Belgian Minister of State in Brussels, Premier Hubert Pierlot argued that if the Belgian Army were forced to surrender, the King should try to escape and not fall into the hands of the Germans.

Leopold asked: "What is Queen Wilhelmina doing? The Netherlands doing in London?"

M. Pierlot replied: "Carrying on the war."

"Do you think she is right?" Leopold asked Pierlot.

On May 17 the Government left Brussels and Premier Hubert Pierlot, M. Spaak and Lieut. Gen. Henri Denis, Defense Minister, by trains used all means of propulsion, beseeched and warned the King, using the strongest language, that if he could not for immortality, at least in the ephemeral columns of daily newspapers.

This Professor has many real duties to fulfil. He is, as Professor, say, a brilliant teacher and student. But he is also a man of action, and with the renown that will now be his. "Gosh hand it", said the small boy standing by, when he saw the triumphant return of the angler, "what's the use of going to college?" Well, heck, it don't matter, Professor, I'll bet you know anything he'll ever profess the rest of his life!"

So really as it can be gathered by conscientious reporter what really happened is this:

The Professor and his guide paddled their canoe ashore at a sharply dipping sand bank where the water of the lake, from being shallow, quickly suddenly became as deep and as cold as the innermost ring of hell. They had trolled all the day and had caught nothing.

Suddenly the Professor felt a pull on his line and, I gather, nearly went out of the boat. He realized at once", he stated, "that I had hooked a monster. The way it tows in the narration of the tale a fish is a fish, indistinct in the astounding skrill of the Professor as he tells it, but I knew that this monster is given full credit: his line would only take a 30-pound test, but I knew that it was much a 20-pound pull was necessary now, but the fact his line did not break is evidence either that he did know or that his fish could pull no harder.

With consummate daring the Professor played them at one time deftly reeling in line, at another permitting the monster to reel in line out. Slowly he shortened his line and gradually down through the shimmering, translucent waters of the lake he could dimly see the vast amorphous shape, fighting, fighting to the last.

"So help me", he said. "I swear to you he looked like a fish 12 feet long."

The Professor's hands and wrists were sore and aching. His shoulder-blades were pierced by agonizing pains, but nothing, by God, he'll quit! Not the Professor! He admits that after two hours of this he was very nearly handed the rod over to the guide, but he didn't, somehow, him said, "Don't quit, you so-and-so. Stay with it!" And he stuck.

The fish, I gather, was hooked shortly after lunch-time. But the evening mists were curling up over the surface of the lake, the sun had gone down, the shadows were growing long when the climatic moment arrived. I was prepared for any conclusion, and I was hoping the Professor was a sword-fish which impaled the guide with a gaff with a lifeless lunge, leaving the Professor to finish him off with a knife. The end, however, was less dramatic.

At long last the fish was drawn to the surface and exhausted by the art of the canoe. They had no gaff, but the Professor, completely exhausted but indomitable grip, gave the fish a final shake, and with one stifled and tremendous stroke of his paddle killed the fish. They hauled it in between them and the Professor sank back exhausted and swelebrated. He continued to lift his head and pour brandy through his clenched, courageous teeth. There was, unfortunately, no brandy.

There was, however, a large number of admiring spectators when they got to the dock and displayed the trophy. For a time, the Professor said, nobody paid any notice, they all solemnly shook his hand.

Five Destroyers Still Afloat

There are five small ships in the British navy the Germans have failed to sink or damage. They are still afloat.

One of them is the 1,300-ton $1,500,000 destroyer Eclipse, which has been attacked by bombers and submarines without success. Here is the reason for this contradiction on the Eclipse, which is now safe in port, slightly damaged by the attacks of the enemy.

Since the war began the Eclipse has sunk five U-boats and helped to sink another.

Most of the Eclipse's crew are R.N.V.R. men from Glasgow who have been operating in the North Sea and Atlantic since the war began. They after time their depth charges have thundered around U-boats found their periscopes and cycle detector apparatus.

The Eclipse's men are sure of the 5½ U-boats. They suspect there may have been several more.

Now they have the Nazis hate have just come home safely—submariners are their worst foes, paying the communications of Hitler's navy.

The Truant, for instance, which sank the cruiser Karlsruhe after a hazardous chase, is another of the ships which sailed expectantly. Then, as the smell of the submarines' exhaust became more apparent, three cheers rang across the harbour.

Other ships took up the cheering until the echoes rang across the water. The destroyers moved out of hatches, Lieut.-Commander "Ben" Bryant, Swallow's commander, leaning them. Waiting for many of the men on the quayside were their wives and sweethearts. The thrilling that many of the men waited to know what was happening ashore in Norway.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Sort of Hard Work Destroyers Are Doing

Seventy tons or eighteen-hundred tons—they are all destroyers. Whether they work the official patrols, hurtling and pirouetting at 35 miles an hour in the cockade-ball of a motor driven boat or whether they work into harrow waters in the face of a withering, concentrated fire from trapped enemy ships, they are all destroyers.

Only rarely do we hear the name of one of them. Maybe the occasion for the lifting of the official secrecy is that tragic news for which the formula is "regret to announce . . ." Maybe the name slips out, on a semi-official sidewind so to speak, as when we learned, no one quite knows how, that it was the Antelope which had sunk two U-boats in the war. Just now and again it does come with full official formality, as in the case of the Basilisk and the Vivix.

The destroyers have been mighty hard worked for the past nine months. But that is not the point that matter, and the urgent calls for more destroyer Help from every quarter have not been met by tenders on the officers and men (and on the materials of every description). To the layman it must sound as though Britain can command destroyer ship convoy. On the way they must be ready for anything—for after interchange of recognition signals and some sweet talk, made by signal flag or shot fired, made the signal "Good luck and a safe landfall", the convoy has hardly been set when it is made, for the submarine was the greatest menace in the early days recorded as lost with all hands.

Then there was the North Sea gale to contend with. The gun's crew of the foremost gun were washed away. The No. 3 gun crouched together for warmth and found that its shield provided.

Everybody was worn out. Men coming off watch were too tired to clamber into a hammock to sleep. They flung themselves into the mess deck of the mess decks and fell asleep where they lay.

One dawn during the passage the convoy sailed between the Main Fleet and saw the great mastadons, looking in the dawn mist like the ghostly phantoms of an old time navy. And then as they had been told they would convoy into harbor and had spent two days there had to come out to further rush further north to form part of the escorts for the Jrane Force in Norway.

They were given the course to steer and then the ship's company peeled. It was in the dawn as they climbed down the destroyer's side a rendezvous. There were great masses of oiled fuel floating about on the surface of the sea. Purple, impenetrable masses of blackness. Destroyers were in hand when the transports—but where?

Then they saw the captain, officers, and took-outs peered into the darkness. Where was the convoy? Then suddenly the clouds broke and ahead they saw a destroyer and a transport circling round. One of the destroyers they recognized as the famous world record holder at Dartmouth of the 1914-18 war. She had been saved from the newcomer to the circling destroyer.

"Have you got hold of there?"

Word flashed the answer from the winking signal lamp:

"Yes, we've got her."

That is the spirit in which the men go at their job.

Through tumbling, troubled seas the destroyers plowed, keeping contact with the trouble for the soldiers in the transports. And then came the days of rest, men and equipment, without losing a touch of the cartridge.

Why French's destroyer turned back home. They were there some 22 days at sea and the only cause they had was two hours for the officers and ratings and they all grew beards—more or less successful beards—and were given time to shave. My friend's eyes were twinkling like those of a man for whom healthy sleep had long been unknown.

I had no complaint. He made no grouse for himself. But he thought of the destroyers and of the Chief Yeoman of Signals who for 13 days had averaged more than 10 minutes snatched sleep at one time.—By H. C. Perrsly in the New York Times.

First major Allied blows at Italy will likely come from the air, from the powerful Franco-British fleet in the eastern Mediterranean.

Just where they will be struck depends on Italy, for Italian entry into the war by no means brings to an end the political and diplomatic manoeuvring of the belligerents for support from the smaller nations of Southern Europe.

Italy has professed a desire not to bring other states into the conflict. Control of the action is confined to British and French territory, the Allies will move according-ly. If, however, Italy seeks to strengthen her position by moving on Greece or any other state the war will spread.

Already the Allied navies have given a taste of what Italian ships from the seas. The next few days may see many small naval fights perhaps leading to a full-scale war between the Allied and Italian battle fleets.

Allied strategy against Italy may call for either an attempted knockout blow or for defensive warfare designed to exhaust the enemy while resources are accumulated for a later offensive.

Fish Story as Told By a Professor

This is the unvarnished but thrilling story of the Battle of Bissett Lake—not the Big Bissett Lake, but Little Bussard Lake. It is a story that should not be told longer. He told me the story of the fish and I am setting down professor sentences. He told it with gestures and with a fine sense of dramatic structure and form I never knew he possessed. He does not belong to the stage. Perhaps that is where he will end up.

At first, as he began his story, I thought that he had been attacked in Little Bussard Lake by a man-eating shark and that at the last he had turned and murdered overboard and tackled the monster with a jack-knife. Even the Professor, however, decided to go as far, but the story of the big fish he caught should be recorded if not for immortality, at least in the ephemeral columns of a daily newspaper.

This Professor has many real duties to fulfil. He is, as Professor, say, a brilliant teacher and student. But he is also a man of action, and with the renown that will now be his. U. S. Liner Washington Stopped By an Unidentified Submarine

Washington, June 12 — (AP) — The United States State Department announced that the United States liner Washington with 1,020 persons en route from Europe safely early Tuesday morning was stopped briefly Tuesday morning by an unidentified submarine which first ordered the lights out of the ship but later allowed it to proceed.

The liner was on its way from Lisbon to Galway, Eire, to pick up additional Americans.

The State Department released the exchange of messages between the Washington and the submarine in which the submarine ordered "leave ship."

The exchange of messages between the Washington and the submarine by Morse signal in the early dawn follows:—

Submarine: "Stop ship. Ease-to ship. Torpedo ship."

Washington: "American ship."

Submarine: "Leave ship."

Washington: "American ship."

Submarine: "10 minutes."

Washington: "American ship. American ship."

Submarine: "no answer from submarine.

Washington: "American ship. American ship."

Submarine: "Thought you were another ship. Please go on. Go on."

The State Department said that upon the order "to leave ship" the passengers and crew, the latter numbering 370, were ordered to the lifeboats and some of the boats were actually being lowered when the order came from the submarine to "please go on."

The Washington proceeded and soon afterward sighted a second submarine but without any interference.

Britain Again Fighting For the Magna Charta

To The Editor,
Sir:—

Seven hundred and twenty-five years ago this month, the British people fought for the principles of liberty and freedom enshrined in the Magna Charta and struck a blow at dictatorship. We are again fighting the same battle against the Germans who are seeking to overthrow the principles of the Magna Charta. This document is the most important secular document in the history of the world. The considerations and conditions of the forty-eight provisions was commenced on the 15th of June, and completed on the 19th and is the foundation of our liberties and freedom in the British Commonwealth of Nations in the United States of America and other freeing countries.

At this juncture it would be especially important to have some reference made in all schools during this month in all schools and churches. Lest we forget.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma looked at me and reminded me that of something, saying, Benny, did you stop at the shoemakers after school as you were supposse to and bring home my velvet slippers.

I was going to, I said.

Meaning no, and ma said to pop, now really, William, I mean really, you're boys always like that?

Not on my side of the family, pop said. Personly, I was the exact opposite, so I know he couldn't of inherited it from me. Whenever I was sent an errand I was off and back again before anyone had realized I was gone. Everybody used to call me Pronto the Prompt, and what's more I was actually glad to run errands. I found pleasure in helping older people, instead of being actuated by a mere sense of duty or a selfish love of reward. Pop called me Willing Will. And furthermore when I had a communication to perform I kept my mind glued on divers places talked to his people in times past" and from Romans 15-4:- "Whatsoever things were written in times past." (1). Christ is coming to redeem." (2). Christ is coming to judge, and in between He comes by history, and in divers ways worship, in divers ways to kindle and keep alive the hope of eternal life."

The National Anthem was sung and prayers for the forces of the Empire and for peace were said. The processional hymn was "All people that on earth do dwell." Other hymns used during the service were: "God is as I am, Thine own to be". "Come Holy Ghost, our hearts inspire", and "Our loved Dominion bless" as a recessional. The altar flowers were,sprays and purple honeysuckle.

Seven candidates were received into the church: Mrs. D. Poole, Mrs. J. Danford, Mrs. Chiddle, Stella Chiddle, Mary Alice Danes, Jean Aylesworth and Doris Lough.

Take It From Grandma

By HELEN FOLLETT

Hair ornaments are ravishing and sure, if you wouldn't make a real sensation go digging into grandma's treasure chest and a look out some of her precious items. The quainter the better. Those old time barrettes are coming back. Hold the curls open at the nape with one. Combs—never heard of such a thing?—is doing a come-back. Shades you never knew what is for, look at a picture of the Empress Josephine; she wore one. Those millinery bows, those cockades that have been stowed away in the endless hatbox for years, are unique and distinctive decorations. This generation has no idea of the possibilities of beautiful things that belong to a past period.

Maybe you find some ear-rings or bracelets. Your friends will envy you. Look sharp at some her beads; amber is fashionable. Looks adorable on the blonde, in shades and the,, copper-topped girl.

If grandma won't relinquish her family "jewels" you can find gorgeous hair ornaments in the shops. They're made of shells, flowers, jewels. I received ribbon flowers even laces. Be wise when making a selection. If you're a fluffy girl you can wear any of them, but if you're the tailored type—some girls have been tailored — don't add a thing to your ambrosial locks. Simple, severe, is the proper fashion dish.

When putting on make-up there is one beauty law that must not be broken; take your time. Apply powder lightly; addition is better than subtraction. Don't grind it in endless layers. Be sure to rouge with rouge. It is the lipstick that gives emphasis. Do not draw lines on the under lip than you use on the upper one. A tricky remedy for making lips broadens the lower part of the fkce, makes it look heavy.

Never use black eye shadow for tinting the eyebrows; dark brown is better. Don't run the dark line touch of rouge to the chin tip and the ear lobes. That's all for this lesson.

Lovely hair ornaments of a past era are coming back to lend fresh glamour for today's moderns. Be quaint, is the slogan.

Good Little Bad Boy

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Some time ago I received a letter by a teacher about a fifth grade boy in a class of 48 pupils described by her as "noisy, rude, discourteous, saucy, irreverent, disobedient, defiant, rebellious and antagonistic." She said: "I have tried to handle the case, as described in several books I have, along behavior problems and child guidance. While I see the 'why,' I haven't found the 'how.'" It's a farewell this teacher in a personal letter quite at length. Recently I received the following second letter from her:

"Dear Dr. Myers: As you will recall, I wrote you some time ago about a boy in my class. I received a very helpful and encouraging reply which I should have acknowledged earlier, but I waited for the term to close to make a final report, I suppose, so that you don't appreciated your interest and aid.

Fine Improvement

"As for my boy, I am very happy to say that he has made great improvement since I wrote you last two months. He has emerged from his rebellious and defiant attitude and as his annoying habits failed to bring him satisfaction, he has also overcome them. I think my greatest pleasure came when his friendship developed and which I know that I have won.

"His made a fine record in all final marks and when he was ready to rate with other pupils honestly hated to give him over to another teacher. I think if he could have had another year, we could have helped him greatly. I intend to keep in touch with him and will probably write you about him again."

A Pal of Dad

"He invited me to spend an afternoon with his grandmother when school closed. She is his mother's mother and the one person he thinks most of. She's a darling friend. He is fond of her and it was amusing how he tried to bring it to her. I know from this that he considers me a friend.

"His father drove over and his dad and I could see a growing spirit of companionship between the boy and the father. His attitude toward parents, I believe, has definitely changed, as it has toward other discipline. (You know, the father used to whip him occasionally.)

"Your articles continue to be helpful and interesting. I hope you will stress more and more the fact that extreme discipline is the extent of using the rod. This held the mirror up to my own disciplinary efforts, as nothing else would have done, the lady wrote me. I hoped I might get a letter from the husband, but haven't.

I'm afraid the worm in the peach is that the wife lets herself feel superior. The obvious suggestion is the lady must conquer this attitude, even if she writes splendid club papers and her ancestors came over in the Mayflower. I'm reasonably sure the trouble is she hasn't confessed in what the superiority consists, and why her ruthless band resents her for having it.

I hope if this reaches the husband's eye, he'll send me his side of the story, for these days of bitter economic struggle a man who pays all the household expenses and adequately supports his wife strikes me as having a good deal of superiority on his side of

Wife Claims Unhappiness Lies In Husband's Resentment of Her Superiority

Sometimes when letters come to this column, I would give a good deal to know the other side of the case. Writing does only a spur of what they regard as just anger, persons state only one side of the case and state it sometimes all too well. What would the other fellow have to say in his behalf?

Here is a lady writing to me that her husband is "mean" to her for no reason at all but that he bows down to "superior" men, ever, as this man pays all the household expenses and buys her pretty clothes as well, and doesn't object when her mother and other relatives come to visit. It seems to me that he's a pretty good sort of husband.

The lady doesn't tell me in what her superiority consists—whether she has done original research work, written books painted pictures which have been exhibited, or whether some of her forebears were ever on the Mayflower. But as it may, she has a conviction that it was this superiority which made them quarrel during their two-year engagement.

She would get so angry she would return his ring, and after a few weeks he'd come crawling back with it. She'd return it again. Back and forth it would go, like a ball over a tennis net. Once the diamond actually fell out, but that was when, in a rage, she threw it at him and it went through the open window. They spent the rest of the evening hunting for it. Incorrect Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please advise me if it is correct for wedding announcements to read as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Go and So

Announce the wedding

of their daughter

I have had some announcements printed as above, but I have been wondering if "announce the marriage" is not more correct. Please let me know as I am anxious to have the announcements correct.

A. B.

1. It is definitely not correct to "announce the wedding." The word "marriage" should be used. The point is that the announcements bring the news that the marriage ceremony has been performed.

Hence the announcements are the news that the marriage ceremony has been performed. Since announcements should be mailed as soon as possible after the ceremony, they are sent in any gracious manner after the ceremony. Relatives and friends who live in the same place in which the announcements are mailed are supposed to receive these announcements the day after the wedding.

Announcement Doesn't Call for Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I intend to send announcements of my marriage to relatives and friends. This does not obligate them to sending a gift, does it?

Dorothy

An announcement does not call for a gift. We needn't send a gift, although, of course, it is correct to send one if we wish. Also, although it is not necessary to acknowledge the marriage announcement in any way, gracious people usually at least write a note of good wishes.

Family Difficulty

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The bride is planning to have a church wedding, and she is to wear a white satin dress and bridal veil. She will have only one attendant, a maid of honor. Her father refuses to give her in marriage. She has a younger brother, and an uncle. Would it be correct for either of these to give her in marriage?

Grace

Yes, if the bride's brother isn't too young (she should consult about this with the minister who is to perform the ceremony), it would be correct to have him give her in marriage. Otherwise, I think she could correctly have her uncle present her in marriage.

If she prefers and especially if she thinks that this would avoid unpleasant family complications, she might have her young brother or her uncle walk up the aisle with her, and then have her mother give her in marriage. This means that, at the proper time in the ceremony, her mother steps from her place in the first pew on the left of the aisle, and gives her in marriage.

Fashion Flashes

FOR YOU if you have a slim, tall figure, is the bare-midriff swim or play suit. A pink white-and-blue dotted piqua dress has a suit that has a brief bra bodice and a short, full skirt.

UP TO TOWN and looking smart in a black and white printed silk dress with full-length jacket is the bride. Hers with black velvet flaps on its four pockets.

DRESS UP your pompadour hair-do with a bandeau. A charm is of navy blue taffeta smocked in red and white blue dots.

STILL TOPS for smartness is the casual shirtwaist-type dinner dress. A nice resort model has deep sleeve slits on the crepe, with a gilt fob ornament dangling from the breast pocket. A casual touch is the neck. The high-waisted skirt is tightly gathered.

A GOOD FRIEND for daytime wardrobes is a silk jersey frock in white, black or blue. A smart model has a deep V neck, is gathered in front and has very short sleeves.

A LONG TRIP means clothes that will stand up well, and a good choice would be a collarless jacket suit of unbleachable brown linen piped in white.

TRY A LIQUID SEASONING
For Your Next MEAT LOAF
WHEN making your next meat loaf we suggest that you try this new recipe given to us by another noted for her cooking. She uses minced beef, bread crumbs, a little grated onion, some salt and pepper and a teaspoonful of H. P. Sauce. "In my opinion," says this lady, "it is the H. P. Sauce that gives this meat loaf such unusually delicious flavour." That's why H. P. Sauce may be called a liquid seasoning for meat loaves, meat pies, soups, stews, ragouts, macaroni and many other dishes.
This thick, fruity sauce has great flavouring strength. Only a little is required in cooking or when served with meat, fish, fowl, salads, sandwiches and so on. H. P. is the Empire's Appetizer from Old England.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

The Five Year Old

Continuing the discussion of the growth of average children:

Your five-year-old is leaving babyhood behind. He is expanding in every direction: properly fed and cared for, he is growing himself more expertly; putting on rubbers and coat before going outside; eating only the delights he has been taught are safe; he isn't putting articles in his mouth; he doesn't giggle at you from dirty containers. Usually he will wash his hands before every meal with only occasional reminders. He is willing to and can run errands. He can be trusted to go to the store, if he doesn't have to cross dangerous streets. (But he should NOT be allowed to play in the street, for any child is apt to forget about automobiles and trucks in the excitement of play).

Your five-year-old now uses careful sounds of speech. His sentences are full and he usually doesn't stutter in the subject or essential details in his hearer's imagination.

By the time he is five, that connection between reality and imagination that was the fun for your old should be moderating considerably. That is he should be less inclined to have wild flights of imagination or believe what he considers the truth. However I have known children who were slow developing this sense of distinction between truth and fiction.

Don't be surprised if the child of five begins to ask questions about sex and about the origin of babies. I have had parents come in the very darkest hour after a child showed interest in these subjects at such an age. I usually tell them that I would be concerned if the child didn't show curiosity in these matters. Any child of reasonable mental development will begin wondering about these things by the sixth year. The answers should be simple truth. Don't stimulate his curiosity unduly by attempting to tell him more than his curiosity demands. But on the other hand, don't whet his curiosity by avoiding his questions or being mysterious about them.

During this age period, the average child will begin his school life in the kindergarten. His daily routine will have to be adapted to this change. When he starts school in the morning, his rising time should be set so he can dress unhurriedly and have his breakfast slowly, so he the time he does, it will be a habit with him. If he sleeps too late, has to rush through his toilet and dressing and gulp down his breakfast, his school will become more of a strain. The excitement of action that will confront the child have an earlier bedtime, so that he should be less tired and be regularly observed.

Ten hours of sleep hours sleep is the usual requirement at this age. But don't go by the clock, gather. See that he sleeps enough every night so that he is ready to get up at 7 o'clock. See to it that he isn't still sleepy and too tired to eat a healthy breakfast.

Greek Fruit Store Mistaken For Italian Raided at Kingston

When 300 soldiers stationed at Kingston set out in demonstration against the entry of Italy into the war Monday night they neglected to get their bearings straight before planning their campaign, states a report by Whig-Standard. Consequently the first store to be picked was Zakos Fruit Store, operated by a family of naturalized Greeks.

The soldiers lined up around the store under the orders of a sergeant-major. "Take everything there apart." But the Greek-Canadian manager of the store, Knight as Zakos, was standing outside the shop, a somewhat bewildered spectator. When he saw what was about to happen, he climbed up on a box and announced that he and his family are Greeks.

The announcement came too late to save one plate glass window. The store was wrecked, the soldiers then wheeled around and headed off down Princess Street.

Chased from Greece in 1914 from near Athens. The family came over in 1915 and all became naturalized Canadians.

"Setting so many much with the Allies, and that the Greeks and Italians are natural enemies, it was a mistake," was the word of Thomas Zakos today.

From early morning there were signs that the soldiers were intent on something. A group was present at various points on Princess Street and many were heard asking the whereabouts of the Italians living in the city. Finally about nine o'clock, a group of almost 300 soldiers, led by a sergeant who carried a drum, left camp and marched up to the Zakos store.

The men then marched down to the fruit store of Thomas Macedonio, between Clergy and Sydenham Streets, and lined up in front. While the soldier in charge went into the store in search of loot, a visit was heard in remark made by one soldier as he left the store, "Remember, $15 for the Red Cross by Saturday, or we're coming back!"

No parade formed up again and proceeded down the street. By that time hundreds of citizens had gathered, motor traffic was parked disrupted and a Kingston police appeared on the scene. The soldiers took no notice of the constables, but stopped at the Callas Cafe. No damage is done to Callas Cafe, a Greek.

Proceeding down Princess Street the soldiers stopped at the corner of King Street. A few minutes later accompanying officers were announced the arrival of a contingent of soldiers, under command of several officers of the R.C.A. The special picket line on King Street and the demonstrating soldiers were dispersed, most of them mingling with the crowd of civilians.

PREPAREDNESS BILLS

The Allies took the initiative today in the fight against Italy while the battle before Paris raged along a new front on the south bank of the Marne where the Germans were hurled back twice in the first Great War when they believed they were about to take Paris.

The German attack appeared also to have slackened but there were growing signs that it might do so at any moment. Chief of these signs was discovery by the French that the Nazis were straining for their victory beyond the measure that they had sent training tanks into the fray.

Royal Air Force and Royal South African Air Force bombers raided Italian airdromes in Africa, damaging the fields, hangars and stores and destroying one plane engaged out on the ground. Italian planes had been hit by raiding Malta where they caused five casualties, did little damage and failed even to alarm the public.

The development of most apparent significance occurred Tuesday night when an unidentified plane flew across the suburbs of Geneva, Switzerland, dropping bombs which killed four persons. French and Swiss batteries fired at it. It was the first pilot who was lost and believed himself over belligerent territory.

Turkey Undecided

The attitude of Turkey remained for the moment one of benevolent neutrality towards the Allies. Turkey appears to wait until Russia's attitude toward the conflict is clear. Her ultimate intervention it would be suicidal to enter the war on the Allied side if it meant having fight Russia as well as Italy.

The Anglo-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact remains in effect, this eventuality by saying that Turkey would not be required to fight on with the Allies if such action involved "Soviet hostility."

Nevertheless the Turks continued warlike preparations, mobilizing further troops and constructing additional air raid shelters.

TRIAL BY JUDGE

Jubbulpore, India (CP)— When assessors (magistrates' advisers) declared seven rioters "not guilty," Judge Ram Lal N. Sachdeva disagreed and gave the accused men sentences of six months' rigorous imprisonment.

Detroit Tigers in Loop Race Up to Their Necks and May Be Team to Beat for the Flag

Now in Second Place Due to Splendid Win Over New York Yankees

WALTERS BEATEN

Cincinnati Loses to Phillies and Drops Further Away from Leading Dodgers

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

Detroit Tigers are in the American League's fierce flag fight up to their necks today and show every sign of staying there.

The Tigers squeezed into second place yesterday by overwhelming the World Champion New York Yankees 6-1 while Boston Red Sox disposed of the threatening Cleveland Indians 5-2.

The Tigers have been a strong club right along and were second third since the first week of the season. Yet they never have won more than four games in a row or been regarded as serious pennant contenders by other than their followers.

Tommy Bridges never had his curve breaking any better than yesterday when he held the Yanks to five scattered hits. He would have had a shutout except for an error by Rudy York. And his teammates gave him the help of 11 hits, including three home runs.

The Red Sox made seven hits off Bob Feller in five innings and presented him with his fourth defeat of the season. Jack Wilson kept seven hits by the Indians scattered and had the help of the big bats of Joe Cronin and Ted Williams, each of whom hit home runs with men on base.

Feller wasn't the only wonder pitcher to fall into the pit.

Walters Beaten Again

Bucky Walters, who won nine games before he was beaten, was pounced upon by the Phillies 4-1 for his second straight setback. Boom Boom Beck held the usually rugged Reds to seven hits. The defeat widened the distance between Cincinnati and the pace-making Brooklyn Dodgers, who were rained out.

One of the day's happiest occurrences was a four-hit pitching performance by Paul Dean in accounting for one half of New York Giants' double triumph over Chicago Cubs. While the Windy City still was talking about brother Dizzy's withdrawal from the major League scene, Paul came up with a heart-stirring show for his first National League victory in two years, 3-1.

His successful start followed close upon a five-hit shutout Bill Lohrman pitched to beat the Cubs 4-0 in the first game. The twin killing lifted the Giants to a game and a half behind the Reds.

Chicago White Sox kept Washington from dropping to the cellar by edging out Philadelphia Athletics 6-4 in a night game.

Paul Dean Scores First Big League Win in Two Years

Chicago, June 12 (AP)—A lot can happen in six years, and usually does, especially if you're a baseball player.

It was just six years ago that a 22-year-old fireballer, Schoolboy Rowe, was pitching the Detroit Tigers to their first American League pennant in 25 years. That was 1934 when the year's pair of Arkansas farm boys, 23-year-old Dizzy Dean and his brother, Paul, were pitching the St. Louis Cards in the world series.

This spectacular trio won a total of 79 games and lost only 26 that year. Three years later, blighted by sore arms and worried over their diminishing stamina, the same threesome could show only 14 victories as against 79.

Now all three are on the long, hard road known as the comeback trail. All three, as well as dozens of other ball players, will tell you few attain success after they have hit the skids.

Rowe and Paul Dean have shown signs this season of making the grade all over again. What's in store for Dizz, no one knows, especially since he dropped into the minors only last week to give his arm a thorough test as a sidearm pitcher.

Paul Dean, now 25, gave the first hopeful sign that he isn't through yesterday when he chalked up his victory, allowing the Chicago Cubs only four hits in his first start of the season with the New York Giants. Manager Bill Terry picked him for the assignment after Dean from Columbus of the American Association. Paul's first big league victory in two years.

Now you know something like his old self, having four victories and no losses so far this season.

BISONS COMING

Break Jersey City's Six-Run Winning Streak by 10-5 Victory

By the Associated Press

When the Buffalo ball club visited Baltimore recently, Tommy Thomas, whose third-place Orioles were lucky to get an even break in the series, declared the Bisons had improved 20 per cent since the early part of the season. It appears that Tommy knew what he was talking about.

The Bisons are such pretty deeply fixed ball players that International League but they're giving the second division clubs fits themselves these days. And what's more to the point, they're doing it without the services of Ollie Carnegie and Joe Martin, two of their most reliable cloutsters.

They were good enough last night to whip Jersey Glants' six game winning streak by beating the Jersey Giants 10-5. Manager Clifford started in the first inning after Hal Wagg rookie right hander, had spotted the Jerseys two runs. Johnny Wittig faced seven Bisons and retired only two as five runs came in. Hal Feldman was the victim of the next blast, going out in the fifth under a four-run attack just after the Little Giants had tied the score. Lee Fleming accounted for three of these tallies with his 11th home run.

Red Wings Hammer Orioles

The league-leading Rochester Red Wings, hammered out a 10-5 decision over Baltimore. Buffalo again gained a full game margin over Syracuse Chiefs, who dropped a 3-2 decision to Toronto. The first Newark-Montreal battle for fourth place was rained out.

Like the Bisons, Rochester put on two big innings with a 16-hit attack on three Orioles flingers. Italo Chelini was blasted out with five runs in the third and Ken Trinkle gave four in the fifth.

John (Pretzels) Pesullo pitched Toronto's cellar-dwelling Leafs out of their six-game losing streak when he limited Syracuse to seven hits. Each scored two runs in the seventh, Toronto on a homer by Buddy Baker. Singles by Eric Tipton and Dario Lodigiani and Latshaw's double gave the Leafs their winning run in the eighth.

Grads Retire as Undefeated Champions

So great they had to quit—that's the Edmonton Commercial Grads, the mightiest women's basketball team in the history of the game. They dominated women's basketball for 25 years. Dominated it to such an extent that the fans lost interest in watching them Win by lopsided scores and that loss of fan interest forced the Grads to retire—still undefeated and champions of the world.

During the 26 years of organized basketball that the Grads participated in, they played 348 games, winning 536 of them. They travelled more than 100,000 miles on basketball tours, attended four Olympic games where they marched off with top honors every time, and met 87 of the top ranking teams from the United States. Only one of the 87 teams managed to win a series. During their campaigning Grads scored 20,000 points against their opponents, while only 8,924 points scored against them. Their record is without parallel in the history of sportdom.

"It is not easy for us to quit, but it seems that there must be an end to all good things and this is our finale," declared Coach Percy Page, RIGHT, as the Grads announced their retirement.

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Old-time baseball fans will remember Freddy Hofmann, former New York Yankee catcher, who played for the world's champions when they were known as the "Highlanders." Freddy is now coaching the St. Louis Browns and frequently acts as batting practice pitcher even today. It was recently recalled that Hofmann, in a Yankee uniform, sang up, drew a St. Louis pitcher out of the league by striking out. The pitcher was Desperate Dave Danforth, who was suffering from the jeering of the ball when nobody was looking. Desperate Dave had been warned officially, but this was a desperate situation and he took a chance. He was an extra-inning game between the Yanks and the Browns, in St. Louis, and Hofmann went up as a pinch-hitter with the bases filled and one out.

Blindfold, poor Dave two called strikes and Freddy took a vain swing and wasn't even close to it for his third strike. He was just starting for the bench when the late Miller Huggins screeched to him to make the umpire look at the ball. Freddy dropped the bat, smacked the ball into the catcher's hands and gave it to the umpire, who put it into Owens. Mr. Owens took one look at it and, horrified, he pointed a thick finger toward Desperate Dave Danforth and bellowed:

"You're outta the game!"

Danforth was not only out of the game, but out of the league. After that infraction he never was allowed to pitch again under the big top. The odd point was that, in the squabble that followed the Owens decision, nobody on the Yankee side thought to remind the umpire that, inasmuch as it was an illegal pitch, Freddy Hofmann had another strike coming to him.

He still has it coming to him. It has been owed to him for seven-teen or eighteen years.

"Don't remind him," begged Letty Vernon Gomez recently when he heard of the yarn. "If you do Hofmann might ask for that strike some day when I'm pitching and he'd just be mean enough to pick a time when there'd be three down," cautioned Gomez.

We see where Jack Moon has switched his softball affiliations. Jack, former Offer second baseman, received his release from Coach Bawden Monday and immediately signed with Corbys A. Or where he is heading down the intire way, moving Harold Reid back to his accustomed spot at third base corner. As Corbys and the Oilers are the only intermediate "A" entries from Brantford into the O.A.S.A. don't be at all surprised if there are some interesting maneuvered between these two clubs. Actually it has been suggested that the best local softball clubs might do worse than amalgamate thereby giving Belleville non strong entry into the O.A.S.A. Harderman. The softballers are having a tough struggle financially, simply because the town has no big league city for the city and O.A.S.A. rights will see practically all of the present teams in action along in July. In the meantime they are virtually starving through the lack of gate receipts.

Do you remember when Ralph Guldahl, Chicago professional golfer, blazed over the Oakland Hills course at Birmingham, Mich., in a world-record aggregate to win the United States Open Golf championship three years ago today? The Texas-born giant whipped par by seven strokes later to post a 281-mark, one better than the score run up by Tony Manero in 1936.

Bob Cobb, Hollywood vice-president, lost $15 after a recent double-bill with Lee Angeles. He scored 3-1 odds to his wife, Actress Gail Patrick, that she couldn't throw a ball from first to second base. To his astonishment, she then proceeded to simle one all the way to left field.

The largest crowd of the softball season and plenty of spirited-pasting when "Stub" Barrett's K-Nine walloped the Mets 17 to 17 last night. Both pitchers were hit hard, so much so that Sheridan Hall of the Mets sustained a slight attack of nervous epic after being struck with a hard drive from the bat of Wilma Clark, Barrett's All Star fielder. Incidentally Marge Orr, the league's leading batter, made merry with the willow bat night, having a perfect batting average of six hits in as many official tries at bat. Marge clipped the old pumpkin for a home run, double and four good solid base blows. The girls are running bases in a more prolific manner these days, which accounts for the mounting of the scores. The cellar position will be occupied by the loser of Thursday night's Viking - Big Nickel store games at the Armories, in the league's only softball tournament and sports day may be staged in honor of all of the Red Crew or some other patriotic organization. Watch this week-end for last night and more news will follow.

Secretary Harry Knott of the City Softball League, announced today that the postponed Shell-Sunday Diploma game of May 26th would be played next Monday here. Tonight the "Cementmen" battle the Diplomas for first place, while on Friday Corbys go to Picton and the Uptown play Shell Belleville.

Tomorrow is the King's birthday, but it will only be recognized as a legal holiday in the city. The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club is holding a district match tomorrow afternoon in aid of the Red Cross and sport fans could assist the cause by attending either in the afternoon or evening.

SPORT SPICE — Reg Dover, former Napanee boy-sensation, is pitching for Hollingue this year in the Northern Canadian loop.... In the Montreal Senior Baseball League, has disbanded for the remainder of the war at least.... After winning nine straight, Cleveland Indians' streak was extended to two when the lowly Phillies beat him yesterday.... That veteran Charlie Gehringer hit a homer as the Tigers beat the Yankees yesterday.... While brother Dizzy is languishing down in Texas, Paul Dean hurled a four-hitter against the Cubs yesterday as the Giants won 6-0.... Robert Feller lost his fourth game of the season yesterday and there were only ten games difference between the two aces and the top-rung pitchers in the American League today, while there are 15 games difference between the same two National loop clubs.

The Air Ministry statement:

"A Spitfire (British fighter) pilot dived more than 11,000 feet to make a first attack on a Heinkel 111 which was shot down off the East coast thority after 8 a.m. (3 a.m. EST).

"After firing the whole of his ammunition he saw the Heinkel dive into a cloud with black smoke pouring from the port engine.

"A second Spitfire took up the chase and was followed closely by two more. They could see the Heinkel staggering low over the water with its tail splashing the surface repeatedly as the pilot tried in vain to continue his flight.

"Finally the Heinkel came to rest on the sea and two members of the crew were seen to climb out into a dinghy. They were picked up and now are in a hospital in a Kent coastal town."

K-NINES DOWN METS BY 27-17

Winners Move Into Second Place in Ladies Mercantile Softball League

With a barrage of extra base hits the K-Nines downed the Mets 27 to 17 in an abbreviated seven-inning Ladies' Mercantile Softball League at the Armouries last evening. In batting, Coach Harrett's champs moved into sole possession of second place in the league standing, deposing the losers.

Scoring 13 runs in the second frame the K-Ntnes literally coasted in to victory, as they cinched the game with an additional half-dozen counters in the sixth. Although the Mets scored runs in every frame, except the last, Coach Ronnie Steele's charges were potent batters for the winners. Alexander, Hall, Muir and Cook carried the bulk of the Mets' attack, Cook getting a circuit blow for the losers. The K-Ninne had five left on bases while the Mets left seven stranded on the runways.

Jean Muir, the losing hurler, struck out three and walked five, while Mary Lickfold whiffed three in six innings and walked four. Richardson hurling the last frame for the K-Nines struck out one and had a put out to her pitching effort. Thursday night at the Armouries the Vikings (3 & 10 Yr.) battle it out with the loser dropping into the league cellar position.

The line-ups: K-Nines—Clark, lf.; Richardson ss.; Reing 2b; Brown, rf.; Orr, cf.; F. Thompson, c.; H. Thompson, 1b; Daly and Conrad, 3b.; Graham 2b; Lickfold, p. and ss.

PARIS BOMBED, NBC REPORTS

Correspondents State Fires Burning in Some Parts of City

New York, June 12 (AP) — National Broadcasting Company correspondents in Europe reported Tues. that waves of German bombers were flying over Paris and that part of the city itself was burning this morning.

Fred Bate, N.B.C. correspondent in London, said that the French embassy there, still in communication with Paris, had confirmed reports that parts of the capital were aflame.

(The Associated Press reported a strange, acrid smoke pall over Paris this morning, believed to be from fire on the outskirts.)

Damage in the suburbs is great, the N.B.C. correspondent reported, and casualties also are believed to be heavy.

Many fires, he said, were caused by incendiary bombs.

The report said roads leading away from Paris were thronged with refugees.

Text of War Report

By CLEMENT ATTLEE

London, June 12 (AP)—Following is a partial text of the war report, delivered to the House of Commons today by Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal:

Because of the pressure of war on other fronts the Allied forces have been withdrawn from Norway.

The Norwegian forces in northern Norway have laid down their arms. In order to save Norwegian territory from further destruction by Germany and to watch over Norwegian interests during the war, the Norwegian king and government have left Norway and come to this country. It is with deep regret that the government have taken a decision to abandon the campaign in northern Norway at a moment when, by a turn in our favor, Narvik had fallen into our hands.

King Haakon Mainstay

Throughout this time, the example of the King has been the mainstay of Norwegian resistance. The Norwegians have decided to continue the struggle against Germany on other fronts. The Norwegian government remain the legal authority proclamation of June 10th. The Norwegian government will now use all their resources to help the Allies in the war against Germany.

This decision, for which the Allied governments are deeply grateful, is evidence of the conviction of the Norwegian people that their only hope for the future lies in an allied victory and that the Allied cause with which they are now more than ever identified will surely prevail.

(Mr. Attlee then informed the House of the presumed loss of the British aircraft carrier Glorious, two destroyers, an oil tanker and a transport in the withdrawal from Norway, saying no further particulars were available.)

GERMAN LOSSES ARE TREMENDOUS

Harold Nicolson States War of Movement and Static Warfare Very Different

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 12 (CP, Cable) — A warning that it is "still too early to say that the French will not be able to redeem the situation" was issued by Harold Nicolson, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Information, in an address to the English-speaking union.

Pointing out that the great mass of the French armies still are intact and retain their power of manoeuvre, Mr. Nicolson said it would be an error to compare the present war of movement with the static strategy of the last war.

"People are a little too ready to regard the rapid spear thrusts at the heart of France as something more decisive and lethal than they in fact may be," he declared.

Stating that German losses in men and materials have been tremendous, Mr. Nicolson said: "We must never forget that it was General Weygand who, by a few master strokes of strategy, plucked victory from the Polish defeat in 1920 and drove the Russians in confusion from the very gates of Warsaw."

UNMOBILIZED FRENCH ARE ASKED TO LEAVE PARIS

Paris, June 12 (AP)—The military governor of Paris, Tues, asked all young, unmobilized Frenchmen from the age of 17 and up to leave Paris.

The request applies to part of the class of 1940 not yet called and to three other uncalled classes —1941, 1942 and 1943.

No reason was stated. (Presumably, however, the French do not want youths of these ages to fall into German hands for use in labor battalions.)

Reports of Semi-Mass Production of U-Boats Arouse the Allies

Washington, June 12 (AP)—Reports that Germany was turning out submarines on a semi-mass production basis stirred Allied interest today in the possibility of obtaining destroyers from the United States.

In view of this construction it was learned, the British government would like to buy any destroyers the United States navy believes it can spare.

Canada, too, is believed to be interested in naval equipment.

The United States navy has 35 old destroyers which have been out of active service since the middle 1920's. Officials estimate that it would require an average of two months to get them ready for use.

Present law provides that such vessels cannot be sold until they have been stricken from the navy list of useful ships. Congress, however, could authorize direct sale of any naval craft by the Allies.

MINE WAS CLOSE IN

London (CP)—The steward of a British ship told his captain he'd "better come on deck." They were in harbor, and between the boat and the quay was an unexploded mine. Naval men were summoned, they towed the mine to sea and exploded it in target practice.

Top-Grade Eggs Improve 1-2 Cent

Toronto, June 13—Better demand and lighter receipts imparted a firmer tone to eggs on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, Ontario Department of Agriculture reports.

Demand was good for all grades but C's on the egg market, and this grade was raised 1 cent per dozen as the two top grades improved ½ cent in the graded section. The retail division showed no change. Storage packed and Government inspected shipments retained the ½ cent per dozen premium.

Stock and Government figures did not influence the butter market either way. Trading maintained a steady pace and prices remained still negligible. Small sales of No. 1 Ontario creamery solids were recorded at the unchanged price of 22¼c per pound.

Hastings County To Contribute $4,500 to War Effort

Evidence of Hastings County's willingness to co-operate with the country's war effort in the form of contributing to war service organizations, was seen here on Wednesday when a delegation from the County Council in June session received a recommendation from the Patriotic and Public Property Committee, whereby a one-quarter mill on the county assessment be levied, the proceeds to be set aside for patriotic purposes.

With the total assessment of the county approximated at eighteen millions and dollars, the amount thus raised through a quarter-mill levy will be in the neighborhood of $4,500. This amount will be divided among the various city and provincial war charities organizations, whose applications for funds are already in the hands of the Finance Committee.

The recommendation, read to the Council on Wednesday, evinced no discussion and was promptly forwarded to the Public Property Board for final ratification. This will, in all likelihood be given on Friday of this week.

It was understood that all moneys collected for patriotic purposes must receive the approval of the Provincial Treasurer before disbursements for patriotic purposes can be made.

GRACIE FIELDS SINGS TO TROOPS

Wins Her Way Into Heart of Rambling City of Wartime Canvas

Valcartier Camp, Que., June 12 (CP)—The collaboration of gifts and gestures of equally-rollicking Gracie Fields were a gay memory today for the khaki-clad residents of this rambling city of war-time canvas.

Bringing along all the charm which has made her the long standing favorite of the Empire's darling men, Miss Fields sang her way into the camp's heart last night to the first concert of her trans-Canada tour for the troops.

ITALIAN TROOPS

Thierry and to Meaux, Meaux is only 27 miles east of the heart of the capital and but 15 miles from the nearest suburb.

West of the Capital, a spokesman said, the French armies are now destroying German units which had escaped the Belloy-en-Santerre pocket.

Approximately 32 miles north of the capital, the hard-pressed Poilu are fought desperately to beat off persistent German attacks in the region of Soissons.

Chateau Thierry, where the 25 French formed their new defence lines, marks the farthest point reached by the Germans in their great offensive of May 27, 1918.

It was also south of this same general region that the French under Joffre halted the Germans in their first drive on Paris in 1914.

No Action Reported

No action was reported from the Alps front, although the Italians have moved up heavy forces of men and material. Rome, London announced that British planes had bombed military objectives in Italy (since last night).

Italy's determination to keep their main forces between the Germans and Paris was made in the declaration of the military Governor of Paris that the capital's defence would not consist "strategically isolated operation" but would rejoin with the defence of the entire sector of the entire French forces.

German bombers backed French airfields and communications in an effort to keep reinforcements from moving up to aid the battle-front (the half-emptied capital, which already was being evacuated, was safe from the northwest.

The French replied with bombing expeditions extending "deep" into the German interior, the French spokesman said.

In the first conference at Tours, the French provisional capital, the spokesman said the Germans used the smoke screen to blanket the operations of throwing pontoon bridges and the river in various points, notably in the Vernon and Rouen region, northwest of Paris.

He said the Germans even were throwing their training lands into the battle and concentrating at such points of the general battlefront that they were "not unfortunately" ed and had to fall back.

No decisive victory has been gained, however, by the invaders, he emphasized.

Fight Off Attacks

The spokesman said the French were fighting off German counter-attacks in the region of Senlis, north of Paris in the Oise valley. Senlis itself is 32 miles from Paris.

The Germans also are applying terrific pressure in the region of Soissons and Reims, northeast of the capital. The fate of Soissons still hold Reims, he added, although the Germans are driving toward it in two directions, from west to east and from north to south.

Although the Italians have brought up very considerable much material, the spokesman said they had not yet attacked the main French front on the French-Italian border.

He declared that the Italians have "not yet shown any great military activity."

He denied that the Fascists had attacked Tunis but he said they had well defended as also are Nice and the Alps regions, the latter with specially trained troops used to mountain troops.

Reports from the northwestern part of Paris reported last night that they could hear the roar of the big guns and hear their roar.

Fear Is Gone

As the battle for Paris appeared to be increasing in intensity daily with the invaders apparently pouring ing new men into the fight, the capital itself was not alarmed.

Normal activity was at a standstill, and only a few isolated cases on the streets were refugees from the north passing through Paris for regions of safety behind the battle.

The armies defending Paris were said to be fighting today under supplies of ammunition limited only due to the weather, partly because of the French high command's decision, announced last night to fall back to the Marne on the east.

The heat wave which had favored the Reichsmen's planes and tanks was broken. Rains fell yesterday on the steaming plains and flaming forests served as the battlefields. Although the rains ceased last night before enough had come to bog down the tanks, the skies remained overcast, hampering aviation.

JEWISH ARMY

Training Camp in Canada

The new Zionist leader foresaw a large training camp in Canada, to which the Jewish youth would flock into force. To Canada would flock Jewish volunteers from the United States, South America and Canada itself.

The two men said an army of 100,000 men was a most conservative estimate.

The reservoirs of manpower which the planned army would tap included Palestine, where there are 100,000 men of military age "practically enlisted;" the Jewish elements in the "no-man's lands"—refugees whose habitat is continually shifting but concentrated mostly in the Danubian States and in France — and volunteers from neutral countries.

Jabotinsky said the Jews are ready to forgot for the duration of the war all political differences among themselves and the British government.

R.A.F. RAIDS

where "air craft were destroyed on the ground, fires started and a petrol dump set ablaze," and on air bases near Asmara in Eritrea, Italian East Africa, where "several direct hits were obtained on hangars."

The announcement said "we caught the enemy napping last night."

2. Royal South African Air Force bombers successfully and heavily bombed "Italian Moyale, on the Kenya-Abyssinia frontier, and Italian positions and the British colony of Kenya.

3. The R.A.F. swooped down on German naval units in Trondheim and Stavanger, Norway, and scored bomb hits on two cruisers and a transport.

4. Italian planes staged eight raids on Malta from dawn to 11 p.m. yesterday but the British said "little damage appeared to have been done and casualties were few."

5. British planes continued pounding at Italian communications and supply bases behind the German front in Belgium. An additional communique said at least five German planes were destroyed and seven British planes were missing after fights over northern France. Weather conditions sometimes 10 times our strength."

6. The Royal Navy went into action early today off a southeast British coast port and a ship believed to be German was seen to dive after sharp firing.

Reprisals

In Cairo, Seifino Mussolini, Italian Minister of Finance, declared that the British attacks from Egyptian territory were "piratical reprisals," after Mussolini, in announcing Italian entry into the war, had said Egypt would not be attacked if she maintained neutrality.

Cyprus, however, reported severing diplomatic and trade relations with Italy.

In the field of naval operations, the British announced the sinking of a merchant marine in the Red Sea and Gibraltar reported the sinking of 50,000 tons of Italian merchant shipping were reported in British hands or destroyed in the Mediterranean.

Naval observers believed the Allied armada in the Mediterranean might clash with the Italian fleet between Sicily and the Italian-held Dodecanese Islands of Turkey.

The admiralty announced that British warships had been driven off after attacking unsuccessfully a British convoy in the Straits of Dover of England Sunday night. "It is now believed that whether there was intention on the enemy," the announcement said.

PREMIER HEPBURN

Issues Strong Appeal

"I cannot make this appeal too strong, for the need is urgent, in my opinion," he said.

He said the Dominion Government's mechanized equipment estimated that Bund agitators were training in Detroit for an attack against Canada and that the East Scottish Regiment "out of Windsor, where it was mobilized, was in readiness to go into camp at Camp Borden."

"Canada's defence against home guards would "enlist the support and advice of retired army officers," Premier Hepburn declared. The premier mentioned "Col. Harry Price, Windsor, who was instrumental in raising the civil guard in Sault Ste. Marie."

"There would be no limit set on the number of home guards in the province. The more the better," the premier said.

A Danger of Invasion.

"The more men we have trained and ready for action, with the units already mobilized, the less danger there will be of an invasion. We are considering the advisability of arming the guards, and we are prepared to give police instruction and the full-est co-operation possible.

"The guards will be registered and supplied with identifying armbands by the Ontario Government. There will be a central committee of officers in charge of each unit, to be selected and named by the municipal council, and not by any political or like department.

"Recruiting, in the first instance, is up to the municipality.

Not the Time to Panic

"I am not an alarmist, but I am a realist," said Premier Hepburn. "We have to face facts. Holland has become realists with me and see the danger. Even the Government of the United States, where undoubtedly there are many sympathizers with Nazi and Fascist sympathizers . . .

I fear that the Dominion Government got ready to act the damage would be done."

The Ontario Government have furnished us with definite information that there are Nazi and Fascist sympathizers are training in Canada, that they are organized and in some instances they are well armed," the Premier said.

"They are only waiting for orders from across the Atlantic to act; so sweep in Canada as they have to our beautiful land. . . .

"I have no confidence in the Dominion Government, judged by its past record. I have no confidence in the Dominion Government of being of help to us in case of invasion or invasion of our fair province. I fear that by the time the Dominion Government got ready to act, the damage would be done."

Dominion Reply

Toronto, June 12 (CP).—Attorney-General Gordon Conant said today that Premier Hepburn's views are all the highest and most efficient strength in their history and are prepared to meet every situation from enemies within and without."

He said the total strength of volunteer civic guards, in addition to the police, is expected to reach 70,000 with corps in every city. Police organizations would be extended throughout the province "to the utmost of our power".

Ottawa had been asked to provide side arms and possibly machine guns for the mobile equipment of the guards could be used as flying columns sent into any district where trouble developed.

Funeral Service For Hon. N. Rogers In Hall of Fame

Ottawa, June 13—(CP)—A brief funeral service for the late Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, will be held in the Hall of Fame in the Parliament Buildings this afternoon, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced to the House of Commons Tuesday.

The body of the minister arrived in Ottawa on Tuesday and was taken to the family residence in Rockcliffe, where an "entirely private" service will be held at the immediate family.

Because of the desire of members generally to honor Mr. Rogers and because of his association with the House of Parliament, the remains will be brought to the Parliament Buildings for the short service.

The body later will be sent to Winnipeg, Mr. Rogers' home city.

Rev. Elmer Prices of the First Baptist Church will officiate at the public service in the Hall of Fame.

The Governor-General's Foot Guards will form an escort in the procession from the Parliament Buildings to the station.

The Prime Minister, members of the cabinet, the Royal Canadian Navy, National Defence Headquarters Staff, Royal Air Force and civic officials met the body on its arrival here.

28,000,000th Ford Visits Belleville

Destined for immortality in the Edison Institute Museum at Dearborn, Mich., the 28,000,000th Ford car to come from the assembly lines of the veteran motorcar manufacturer, visited Belleville today. The car, a 1940 Ford, bore the signatures of Acting-Mayor Thomas J. Armstrong and other civic officials.

Entering the city under the escort of Traffic Officer Sam Irvine the car drew up in front of Victoria Park at 11.15 a.m. shortly after 12.00 o'clock, Displayed on the automobile's rear window was a sign every state and province the car had visited since it was produced at the Ford plant in Ridgewater, N.J., on April 8th, it had been driven 28,000,000 miles by the United States, Mexico and Canada, Accompanying the car was a jeep to Ottawa, where the Federal Government's capital since it was presented to the top-book, and eventually to Dearborn where it will be placed in a museum.

At Ottawa, Hon. J. A. Mackinnon, Dominion Minister of Commerce, will hand a letter to the driver to be delivered to the Canadian Trade Commissioner in New York. The car was driven from Windsor by Jim Rooney and Charlie Sodaquist. They were greeted on their arrival in Belleville by a brass band and a large crowd of local dealer for Ford Motors.

Ford of England has already twice visited Canada, crossing the international boundary first at Chief Mountain, Waterton Park, Alberta, and visiting cities in the Prairie and Eastern provinces. Later it visited Sault Ste. Marie and Toronto, Canada's greatest automobile centre.

PRINCESS JULIANA

She wore a blue dress with a white-trimmed hat and a white-garbed nurse carried Irene, the youngest of the royal children. Little Princess Beatrix was led down the gangplank by her mother, no one was allowed on the pier, where the war vessels are moored, and the party left at once for Ottawa by special train.

The ships bearing the royal passengers arrived in port yesterday. The Princess Juliana came off the first a few minutes last night when she left her suite and entered the waiting vessel.

She then walked along the seawall, followed by a white-uniformed nurse carrying Princess Irene. The Princess Juliana kissed her little mother's hand.

Immediately aboard the escort vessel manned ship as the Princess and her party stepped aboard. Princess Juliana was wearing a simple dress of white flowered material.

Brief Visit On Deck.

Before she came ashore today the Princess took a brief stroll about her warship's quarter-deck with Baroness De Van Stein Wijk. Then she left the ship and, with the whole ship's company except a few men on duty, waved ashore to her mother. Princess' farewell message.

The Princess spoke from notes, with young Beatrix running about the deck and tugging at officers' trousers as her mother talked. Princess Juliana talked quickly and vigorously, frequently referring to writing her notes for emphasis.

She concluded with a call for three cheers for Canada and the seamen responded lustily, waving their hats. The Princess' cheers with them. Then the men gave three cheers for Princess Juliana, Princess Wilhelmina and Prince Bernhard.

Princess Wilhelmina Greeted Forlorn

An officer said later she had wished the men good luck for themselves and for their families, back in beleaguered Holland. Then she expressed a wish that all might have a happy reunion in their motherland.

The royal party's baggage had been taken ashore first. That list contained about fifty small pieces of luggage. It was brought down the gangplank on a special platform by a group of containers for carrying the princess-children—one large enough to hold both Princess and the infant.

Several gas masks were carried ashore and placed aboard the special train, a diplomatic pouch was brought out, too. All went ashore without any inspection by customs officers.

Officers Cheer Juliana.

On coming ashore Princess Juliana chatted for a few minutes with the captain of the second warship in her squadron, and then an officer led her and young Beatrix to the ship's side, where the sailors gave them another three cheers.

Once the royal party was aboard the train, the whole ship's crew dashed down the gangplank and ran out in front of the train, ranging themselves in a hundred yards along its route. They gave the princess a final salvo of Dutch cheers as the train rolled slowly out.

FIGHT FOR LOVE

By Silvia Tor...

INSTALMENT 7.

Mamie's unusually quiet manner made it easier to talk of this important matter than Star had expected.

"Mrs. Lambert would like for you to come to dinner next Monday," she said. "Bob wants to meet you and I want you to meet him."

How false those words sounded, but strangely enough they seemed to please Mamie who replied, "I told you Mrs. Lambert was a real lady. Naturally she would want us to get together since I'm the mother of the bride. But what am I going to wear?"

"You needn't worry about that. I'm going to buy you a dress this afternoon.

Mamie's excitement was pitiful. She became as tractable as a child as she accompanied Star downtown and permitted her to choose a dress.

"I'd like something with a little color in it better," Mamie admitted. "but since you're going to pay for it I'll take your advice."

Star would have nothing but black, selecting a plain one of sheer material, with long line and graceful sleeves.

When they had returned to the apartment, she said anxiously, "just one thing, mother, I wish you'd do for me."

"Oh, sure." Mamie replied good-naturedly, "it's the least I won't embarrass you."

"I want to be proud of you," Star said honestly.

Mamie waved her hand.

"I understand how you feel and it's only natural when you're planning to marry such a nice young man. You can depend on me."

It was the nearest to an affection-ate understanding they had ever achieved. Star was so grateful she threw her arms about her mother's neck and kissed her—a gesture she hadn't made for years — crying, "Thank you so much. It means such a lot to me."

For one moment she felt as if Mamie really loved her as she patted her on the shoulder and promised she would be good.

"I know how to act," she boasted. "You wait and I'll show you."

As Monday approached, Star became conscious of a sense of strain which was almost unbearable. Even Bob, blithely unconscious of the real-ism, complained that she was not herself.

"Something is worrying you, Star! Why won't you tell me what it is?"

She denied it, protesting finally that she was tired. Too much excitement in the three short weeks since Bob's return. But certainly she had never had less work to do. Nina professed herself in no mood to write.

"I'll feel as if I'm taking money on false pretenses if you don't get busy," Star said.

"I'm much too interested in a real love story to write about an imaginary one," Nina assured her.

"But what about that serial you promised to start? The editor telephoned about it yesterday when you were out."

"Tomorrow," Nina cried gayly. "Or next week. Or maybe not until you are married."

"But, Mrs. Lambert, I'll be gone then."

Nina laughed.

"And I shall have a new secretary, a plain one with no appeal for my boy friends." She spoke lightly, but a sombre note ran like a black thread through her brightly colored words. Star sensed it, at the same time reproaching herself for being so sensitive, Nina hadn't minded in the least when her friends tried to flirt with Star. She remembered the girl that her own daughter couldn't have acted better. "I mustn't take everything so seriously," she thought, reminding herself of the many kind things Nina had done. "Look at her attitude about her son's engagement. Could anything be more generous or a truer indication of affection?"

On Monday morning Star telephoned her mother, finding her excited but in a good humor.

"Everything is okay," Mamie assured her.

When Star suggested going over to help her dress, Mamie insisted it wouldn't be necessary.

"But I want to," Star protested. "Then we'll take a taxi and afterward Bob and I will take you home."

It sounded foolproof, Star thought, telling him her plan.

"Why don't you let Bob come for you?" Nina suggested.

"It's rather hard to find," Star evaded. "Easier just to take a taxi if you don't mind."

Nina replied cheerfully, "Suit yourself, my dear! But be sure to be here not later than seven."

Star wore one of the simple pale blue dresses Nina had urged her to buy earlier in the summer. She reached her mother's early in the afternoon. Mamie had kept her promise and at Star's suggestion had had her hair washed. Then Star gave her a manicure, using a light rose polish.

"It's too light," Mamie complained, holding out her hands.

"You'll like it," Star insisted. "You have such nice nails, mother, if you'd take care of them."

Mamie shrugged but she looked pleased.

"Nobody can have nice nails and be doing dishes and housework."

"Mrs. Epperson does," Star said unwisely. "She keeps her nails perfectly and she works a lot harder than you do."

"Don't mention that name to me!" Mamie snorted. "It's going to be a real treat to sit at the table and have her wait on me."

There was nothing wrong with her mother's appearance, Star admitted, feeling some of her apprehension disappear. The dress fitted perfectly and its long flowing lines gave Mamie a dignity which softened the harshness of her features and made her look ten years younger.

"You are simply perfect!" Star cried with rare emotion. "I wish you could look like this all the time."

"Maybe I could if I didn't have anything else to do," Mamie said shrewdly. "Maybe I will if I ever have a nice little income of my own."

This was the first hint she had made to Star's future responsibility in the matter of helping her, but Star refused to be upset by it. To-night should not be marred by arguments. So she did not reply but ordered the taxi and, because it was so warm, told Mamie that she need not wear a coat. She could see that there was a definite resemblance between them as they gave themselves a final glance in the living-room mirror. Mamie saw it too.

"Any one could certainly tell you are my daughter," Mamie remarked.

The comforting thing about her attitude was that she actually seemed to be impressed by the importance of the occasion. She had assumed an air of quiet refinement which surprised Star and made her believe in Mamie's oft repeated statement that she used to "be somebody".

For the first time since Nina had suggested the family dinner party Star began to feel lonely. Surely nothing would be apt to happen now. The dinner would be simple and after an hour's chat Bob and Star would take her mother home.

Nina herself opened the door, sparing Mamie the ordeal of recalling the other time when it had been done by Mrs. Epperson.

No one could have been more gracious than Nina who cried, "How do you do, Mrs. Bright. How nice of you to come."

"My name is Delevan," Mamie corrected.

"Oh, yes, of course! Star told me that. May I present my son, Mrs. Delevan? Bob, darling, this is Star's mother."

Nothing could have been more proper than Mamie's greeting to her prospective son-in-law. If there was any triumph in the blue eyes so like her daughter's the swiftly lowered eyelashes concealed it. Nothing could have been more circumspect than her behavior during the ensuing conversation which Nina, according to her custom, limited to topics her guest would understand. She referred happily to their children's engagement and their plan to live in New York. She related jokes on herself. Star had never seen Nina more friendly or more charming than she was during dinner. Mamie was eating sparingly and letting the others do most of the talking.

"We really should have champagne to celebrate this occasion properly," Nina announced.

It evidently had already been ordered as Mrs. Epperson appeared with it iced and ready to serve. No doubt Nina had given to be that Mrs. Star felt that she was really overdoing it as the writer, becoming more cordial every moment, urged Mamie to drink glass after glass. Star herself did not touch it. She watched anxiously as Mamie, reassured by the good fellowship and warmth of the wine, became the life of the party.

INSTALMENT 8.

Star listened with horror as her mother cried, "Isn't it funny, I told Star the first time I was here that she ought to get her cap for Bob? You two ought to make a match of it, I said. Sometimes I'm psychic like that. My first husband, Star's father, used to tell me I'd make a good fortune teller if I ever had to make my own living. And I guess I could at that. Say, Nina, have you got a deck of cards handy?"

Nina answered, "Of course! But let's go into the living-room. Bring one of those decks out of the hall table, will you, Bob?"

Bob looked cross. Was he annoyed with Nina for encouraging Star's mother or disgusted with Mamie?

She flipped through the cards with an experienced hand.

"I'll take these smaller ones out. They don't count. Now shuffle them good, cut three times and make a wish."

Nina's attitude was one of amused tolerance as she followed instructions.

"There's certainly plenty of men in your life," laughed Mamie. "But only one who has ever really mattered. Looks like it don't do you much good though. He's already married."

Nina smiled but she looked rather startled as if the casual shot had told.

"There may be a divorce." Mamie murmured consolingly. "So don't give up hope. And here's a coast trip coming up soon now. Looks like it might be right away. Were you thinking of going somewhere after the children are married?"

"Why, it's an idea." Nina admitted. "Maybe I will."

"Maybe you will," Mamie said. "How I'll tell yours," he refused.

Nina's pale hair caught faint lights in such things to make a good subject," he said.

"Don't be bashful!" urged Mamie. "I'll bet you've just afraid to have me know about your past. The cards tell all, you know. As Joe says, Joe is my present husband, the cards and liquor never lie."

The silence which followed this remark was so significant that Star could bear no more. Rising she said, "I think it's time for us to go."

But Mamie waved her away.

"What's the idea?" I'm having a swell time. You know, Nina, Star had me scared to come here tonight. She was afraid I'd do or the wrong thing but I told her the first time I met you that you were a real lady and that still goes."

Star glanced at her in despair and quickly looked away.

"You know that daughter of mine is ashamed of me," Mamie confided. "She's always had big ideas. Well, Bob, here's hoping you can carry them out. I've tried to be a good mother to her. No one knows the sacrifices I've made but sometimes I wonder if there is such a thing as gratitude."

Star sat as if turned to stone. Her heart seemed to have stopped beating until Bob came to her rescue by suggesting that they go for a ride. In the car she sat beside him without speaking except to tell Mamie good night. As they drove from the apartment house where her mother lived, Bob said gruffly, "It was Nina's fault, Star. She did it deliberately."

"Mother isn't used to drinking," she explained sadly.

"It doesn't matter," he comforted. "I love you just the same."

But Star knew that nothing could ever be the same again. She could not marry him without Nina's approval, and after tonight she could no longer believe in Nina's affection. One of the reasons she had loved Bob was because of his mother and all that Nina had done for her.

When they reached the house they found that the writer had disappeared.

"Let's not talk about it any more tonight." Bob suggested. "Get a good night's sleep and things won't look so black to you. And remember, nothing that happened tonight can change our feelings for each other."

Star pressed his hand gratefully, closed the door of her room and began to undress. But before she had finished there was a tap at her door, and without waiting for permission Nina entered. She was wearing an elaborately embroidered Chinese robe which seemed to give her additional authority.

"Why didn't you tell me you didn't want us to get married?" Star asked.

"Because Bob wouldn't have listened to me. I had to make him see it for himself," Nina admitted.

"He says it doesn't make any difference," Star told his mother with forlorn pride.

Nina looked alarmed.

"You needn't worry about it, Mrs. Lambert. I won't marry him without your consent: I couldn't after all you've done for me."

"The older woman said unhappily, "I'm sorry, my dear! I know I am to blame for making you think such a marriage would be possible. But I have had such different plans for Bob. He's infatuated with you but I honestly don't think it's love. It wouldn't last. You're too old for him. I don't mean in years," she explained as Star looked at her in surprise. "The circumstances of your life have made you old for your age. What you need is an older man."

For Nina to attempt to define Star's needs at this moment would have been amusing if it had not been so disheartening.

"I'll go away in the morning," she promised. "I'll never see him again."

"Oh, you mustn't do that," Nina said, but she was obviously relieved. "It will be better for me to take him to Europe for six weeks, but I'll find you another position before we leave."

Nina didn't really care in the least what happened to her, Star thought decisively. Nina's theories hadn't been worth a thing when applied to the acid test of her own flesh and blood. The shock of her employer's desertion made the girl realize that Nina's opinion concerned her more than Bob's. Star had been overwhelmed and flattered by his attentions; had loved him because of the resemblance to his mother whom she adored. But her idol was shattered. She could not marry him against Nina's will and no doubt Nina was right. It had happened too quickly to be real. A few weeks of travel, Bob's unsuccessful love and meeting the kind of people Nina would be apt to attract would erase all memory of Star. His loyalty would not permit him to give her up on account of her mother but he could never feel the same about her again. Sooner or later he would represent the difference in background. He would be grateful in the end that Nina had spared a marriage so obviously unsuitable.

Nina had just been talking when she said Star could associate with any one. She was thinking of ways to be against her. It wasn't true then that you could rise above your environment no matter what it had been. It could reach out any time to clutch you, drag you down. But hers shouldn't, Star said grimly. She would break with Nina. Have nothing to do with her. Why should the fact that she was Star's mother mean anything to her when it meant so little to Mamie?

Star lay by the window staring into the moon-flooded garden throughout the night making her plans, but none had the feel of finality. Never had she known such bitterness as now swept over her. Only one thing remained to her. That was the pride she carried like a banner over her heart. She would not give Nina a chance to find her a position. Never again would she be a source of friction between her former employer and her son. When they came downstairs the next morning, Star would not be there and she would leave no single clue for Bob to follow in case he tried.

Mrs. Epperson rose at seven but it was only six when Star slipped through the house with her suitcase in one hand, leaving a brief note. Her only fear was that some one would hear her before she reached the door. Once outside, she cast a hurried glance over her shoulder and fled to the street car line. Fortunately she knew the city so well that she had no difficulty in reaching the section she had in mind. It was composed of small shops and rooming houses for block upon block. At one of these she would find a room in which she could hide until she found work.

It had seemed quite simple thinking about it the night before. In reality it proved to be much more difficult. In the first place she had only a few dollars left after buying Mamie's dress and she soon found that any place she went—no matter how unpretentious—cost at least a week's payment in advance. Utterly inexperienced in such matters Star had not counted on this. The rooms in comparison with the one she had occupied at Nina's seemed even worse than her old one at Mamie's. Many of them were not clean.

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile flows freely, your food does not decay. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blocks up your stomach. You get constipated. Poisons instead of passing on into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't relieve you. You need the kind of laxative that works on the liver as well. It takes these good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. PARIS "OPEN CITY"

Capital Proper Will Not be Defended Says Spokesman — Italians Have Not Yet Attacked France, French Exacting Terrific Toll

Paris, June 13—(AP)—The defence line in the battle for France is holding, a military spokesman declared today, despite the most powerful heavy strain of new German divisions which have been combined with the old to make a total of 120 (about 1,800,000 men) striving to crush France.

The spokesman said that while the French would continue in their defence around Paris — where a fire-mile gain by counter-attack was reported earlier—they would not defend the city itself.

Paris "Open City"

Paris was declared an "open city" to spare it the added devastation of total war.

The French army has no intention of fighting in Paris itself.

North American correspondents, diplomats, military officers, spokesman said, has been proved, helped considerably in holding the German offensive.

Everywhere along the northern front, from the channel coast and the valley of the Somme to Montmedy, northern anchor of the Maginot Line, the situation is "very tense," the spokesman said, but he added that the line, though badly battered, holds.

At several points small units have made counter-attacks.

More Aid Needed

Arrival of new planes, tanks and other armament would have an extremely important effect on the outcome of the battle, the spokesman declared, referring to the need for munitions from North America.

The spokesman said that the French line as a whole had held despite the fact that some units have not been relieved since the first southward German offensive on the Somme two days ago. German units, he said, have been relieved from time to time.

Nation at War Celebrates by Work On Official Birthday of King George

His Majesty Spends Busy Day at Buckingham Palace

NO CEREMONIES

A nation at war, Canada today observed without ceremony the official birthday of King George VI.

It was a holiday for school children. Flags waved proudly from public buildings. Banks and stock markets as well as the Winnipeg Grain Exchange were closed. Canadians generally, however, carried out their usual work. Parliament was scheduled to meet and the wheels of wartime industry maintained their rhythmic pace.

This was in sharp conbrast to Canada's celebration last year when the King himself and Queen Elizabeth were in the Dominion on the Royal tour. Then the celebration May 20 was designated as the King's official birthday and their Majesties attended the time-honored ceremony of trooping the color at Ottawa.

There on the spacious lawn in front of the parliament buildings two regiments of Canadian Guards snapped through the colorful pageant while the King and Queen watched from a window of the Government-House.

The King's actual birthdate is Dec. 14 and he is 44. He spent a busy day at Buckingham Palace and there was no observance of the day in Great Britain where all such ceremonies have been cancelled for the war's duration. The "official" date is designated to provide a holiday in summer, rather than in December.

London, June 13 (CP).—George VI's "official" birthday passed without celebration today, in accordance with the cancellation of such ceremonies announced on May 25. The King was 44 years old last Dec. 14.

The King spent a busy day at Buckingham Palace, receiving in audience, among others, Air Marshal Sir William Mitchell and Sir Robert Kindersley, president of the Canadian Association.

Although there was no trooping of the colour, Buckingham Palace and there were hundreds of congratulatory telegrams.

Vatican Newspaper Suspended For War

Rome, June 13 (AP)—Both Italian and German papers could today halt publication of Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, had been suspended for duration of the war.

They explained that the action resulted from Italian objections to Osservatore's insistence on publishing French and British war communiques as well as those of Italy and Germany.

Since publication of Allied war bulletins now would have meant keeping the banner of Italian territory informed sources said the editors decided to suspend.

The pro Illustrated Sunday Religious supplements will be published, but Vatican announcements will continue to be issued to foreign correspondents, in typewritten form, through Osservatore.

BOMBS EXPLODE ON BRITISH SHIP AT BUENOS AIRES

Bombs Had Been Placed With Intent to Sink Ship at Sea

POLICE GUARD SHIPS

Buenos Aires, June 13 —(AP)— Special guards of Maritime Police today were assigned to all ships of belligerent nations in Buenos Aires harbor as a result of the explosion of two time bombs last night aboard the British Royal Mail freighter Gascony, which killed an Argentine stevedore and injured five others.

The bombs apparently had been placed to sink the ship at sea. The first, in the centre hold, smashed a hole and the second blasted a hole in the 4,716-ton freighter's side, while the second explosion occurred in another hold. The ship probably will have to go into drydock. The ship arrived with a cargo of tinned meat.

Maritime officials halted loading operations on other British ships until they could be searched and broadcast warnings to British ships at sea to hunt for bombs they might have been placed on them.

All British planes returned safely from the raid.

U. S. CITIES SEEK MUNITIONS PLANTS

Steps Taken to Prevent Preparations from Being Overwhelmed by Applications

Washington, June 13 — (AP) The United States War Department took steps today to prevent the quickened defence preparations from being overwhelmed by a flood of applications from cities seeking war aircraft and munitions plants.

Armed with an order from Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson, Major-General Charles M. Wesson, Chief of Ordnance, and other key officials refused to receive civic delegations. They were directed to devote their full energies to defence matters.

Johnson estimated that 450 applications for government-financed plants had been received by the staff from individuals or groups outside the War Department in person, and that about 200 had been forwarded by members of Congress.

The new National Defence Commission headquarters has about 2,000 visitors daily. A large proportion of them are delegations to present the claims of their cities for the new plants.

Defence estimates include $322,000,000 specifically for new plants or added facilities to make powder, high explosives, chemicals, guns of various types and other ordnance materials, and also aircraft and engines if they are deemed necessary.

Published estimates do not provide specifically for any government-financed plants devoted to tank manufacture, but authorities said they planned to step up production chiefly by turning manufacturers from commercial jobs.

Secret Session On Home Defence Will be Held

London, June 13 (CP).—A secret session of the House of Commons on home defence will be held next Thursday, Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, announced today.

The session originally was set for June 20, but this was postponed. It will be the second secret meeting of the Commons of the war.

Mr. Attlee told the House he could not say when Prime Minister Churchill would make his next general statement of the war.

It had been expected Mr. Churchill might make a statement today.

FRENCH GUNS POUR SHELLS AT NAZIS OPPOSITE ISTEIN

Nazi Forts Across Rhine Silent — Observers Do Not Expect Offensive Here

VILLAGES IN RUINS

Basel, Switzerland, June 13 (AP), — The French resumed today their daily shelling of German forts along the Rhine river north of Basel. It continued throughout the early morning, but the Nazis maintained silence.

Baden villages in the strategic corner north and northeast of Basel lay smouldering in ruins from the daily assault, and foreign observers wondered why the Germans, with occasional exception, had replied only with infrequent light bursts of fire from the big guns of the powerful Basel Rock fortress in the last few days.

Military experts said that apparent reluctance of the Nazis both the German and French sides of the Rhine in the last 24 hours indicated neither planned to launch an offensive soon.

However, German troops remained in the Black Forest, north of the Baden front, where they were concentrated just before Italy's entrance into the war.

The birthday of the King is being celebrated throughout the Empire today although the actual anniversary is December 14th.

IL DUCE'S OFFER REJECTED BY TURKISH GOV'T

Co-operation Reaffirms Mutual Assistance Pacts With Great Britain and France

PRESS ATTACKS ITALY

Istanbul (AP)—Turkey today reaffirmed her mutual assistance pacts with Britain and France and dismissed Mussolini's offer to respect her neutrality as worthless.

The government, however, awaited developments before making any definite move toward entering the war.

The officially controlled Turkish press, which since Italy's entry into the war has been extremely cautious, loosed a violent attack on Italy. There were indications that these attacks were inspired and reflected the government's attitude.

6,000 BRITISH, FRENCH TROOPS TAKEN BY NAZIS

Were Running Out of Ammunition and Food While High Cliffs Prevented Reembarkation

AT ST. VALERY

London, June 13—(CP)—Military circles said today that about 6,000 British and French troops were captured by the Germans at St. Valery, on the French coast, when high cliffs and heavy fog prevented the evacuation of more than a "comparatively small number" of Allied forces surrounded there.

The troops were running out of ammunition and food, these informants said.

Troops that were reembarked have been re-landed in France and "fresh reinforcements are in line with the enemy."

France Will Continue the Fight As Long as She Has a Province or A Possession Left Says Reynaud

Tours, France, June 13 (AP)—An appeal by Premier Reynaud to President Roosevelt for a public declaration that the United States would give all aid to the Allies save an expeditionary force and to send the help "before it is too late" was disclosed today.

The premier declared that the Allies possessed, if need be, algo themselves up in one of their provinces, or go to North Africa or even to possessions in America to carry on the fight against Germany.

Text Is Released.

The appeal was conveyed in a message to Mr. Roosevelt, dated June 10—the day Italy declared war on France and Great Britain and the day that the President, in his Charlottesville, Va. speech, promised material aid for the Allies.

The text of the message was issued here and in the United States by agreement between the Premier and the President, an official announcement said. Tours is one of the present seats of the French government.

The Premier recalled the Roosevelt statement of Oct. 5, 1937, in which the President said that "by liberty, peace and security of 90 per cent. of the world were imperiled by the other 10 per cent.

The Premier thanked the President for "generous aid in arms and aviation" and for the fact that he had "generously replied" to an appeal by the Premier some days before.

"We are struggling in front of Paris, we are struggling behind Paris and we will shut ourselves up in one of our provinces and, if we are rejected, we will go to North Africa and, if need be, to our possessions in America," Reynaud declared.

"The government already has left Paris. I myself am going to the armies. It will be to intensify the struggle with all the forces we command and not to abandon it.

"Can I ask you, Mr. President, to explain all that yourself to your people, in all United States citizens, telling them we are resolved to sacrifice ourselves in the struggle we are leading for all free men."

The Premier pictured the pressure of Germany's superior numbers and material on France, saying that "for six days and six nights our divisions have been fighting without an hour of rest. The enemy is today almost at the gates of Paris."

Washington, June 13 (AP).—The White House said today that President Roosevelt's address of last Monday, promising the Allies the material resources of the United States, stood as a "complete and Reynaud of France for all assistance except an expeditionary force.

Stephen Early, Presidential Secretary, said Reynaud's appeal had been delivered to the State Department after Mr. Roosevelt returned from Charlottesville, Va., where he made the address. That was only a "coincidence". Early said, that the address was so completely to the point.

Possessions Small Over Here.

A Berne, Switzerland (CP). — This tiny island possession of France off the coast of Newfoundland wondered today whether Premier Reynaud was thinking of his country's only North American possession when he told President Roosevelt the French people would withdraw "if need be, to the possessions in America to continue the war against Germany."

Reynaud made the statement in a message to the United States President from Tours, France.

St. Pierre et Miquelon, together with numerous small islands — all told in the Atlantic ten miles south of the Newfoundland coast — from France's only outpost on this continent. They have a total area of only 93 square miles and have a population of about 5,000. Most residents are fishermen.

France has also the American possessions of French Guiana and numerous small islands including the Devil's Island prison colony.

EGYPT PLEDGES ALL RESOURCES TO GREAT BRITAIN

Ally Pledged "Greatest Possible Assistance" in War Against Italy

'DEFENSIVE STATE'

Egypt Will Not Send Expeditionary Force to British Into Libya or Other Italian Colonies

Alexandria, Egypt, June 13 (AP)—Egypt placed all her communication systems, air and naval bases and ports at the disposal of Great Britain today and pledged her Ally the "greatest possible assistance" in the war against Italy.

Premier Aly Maher Pasha declared the nation "will fulfill all her obligations under the Anglo-Egyptian treaty of friendship" but intended to refrain from any offensive action against Italy, although diplomatic relations had been severed.

A government source said that Egypt's present attitude was that of a "defensive state" and declared that the country would declare war if Italy attacked Egyptian military or civilian objectives.

The Premier's statement stated that the United States was keeping charge of Egyptian interests in Italy, and that Switzerland was looking after Italian interests in Egypt.

NAZI TORPEDOBOAT LOST AT BOULOGNE

British Fleet Air Arm Attacks Enemy Vessels in Harbor Successfully

London, June 13—(CP) — The fleet air arm bombed Boulogne harbor yesterday, destroying one motor torpedo boat.

An Admiralty statement said that planes of the coastal command bombed German supply ships in our Bergen and runways and barracks at Vyerlis airdrome, both in Norway.

The statement said:

"During yesterday aircraft of the fleet air arm, in cooperation with coastal command aircraft carried out successful attacks upon enemy vessels in Boulogne harbor.

"A motor speedboat was blown up and many bombs were seen to burst. Other craft of this type and among ammunition barges, were damaged.

"The land service military objectives ashore were also successfully attacked.

"Last night aircraft of the coastal command carried out a successful attack on the enemy airdrome at Vernes, Norway. Hits were made on the runways and bombs were seen upon enemy aircraft assembled on the airdrome. Enemy supply ships were also bombed near Bergen."

Minefield Laid From Sicily to Tunisia, Claim

Italian Report is Not Confirmed in Allied Circles — Such a Plan Would be Aimed at Cutting Mediterranean in Two

LITTLE ACTIVITY

If Minefield Exists Possibility of Major Naval Battle Developing is Foreseen

By GUY ROHDEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Battle of Paris stormed on today without much change in the West Front situation, but developments occurred in the Mediterranean which may cause the Allies some trouble.

The Italians claimed they had laid a minefield across the narrowest part of that inland sea, from southwestern Sicily to their island possession of Pantelleria and thence to the coast of French Tunisia.

The move was not confirmed in Allied sources but if it actually was carried out the motive was pretty plain to put the Mediterranean in two and seek to minimize the Allies' initial advantage through control of the outlets at Gibraltar in the west and Aden in the east.

If the minefield really exists it will have to be swept out or the Allies will be forced to take supplies to their far eastern forces a long way round Africa or exclusively from the east.

Naval Battle Might Ensue

If the mines actually exist a major naval battle might develop between Allied and Italian fleets.

LIBYA, ETHIOPIA AIR BASES HIT

R.A.F. Planes Roar South and West from Egyptian Bases to Inflict Losses on Italy

Cairo, June 13—(CP)— Roaring south and west from Egyptian bases, the Royal Air Force smashed new blows today at Italian airdromes in Libya and Ethiopia and at the Red Sea ports of Eritrea.

Air Marshal Arthur Longmore said the continued air attacks are delivering a crippling blow" on the strongholds from which Egypt might be threatened.

The R.A.F. did extensive damage yesterday to military objectives in Ethiopia as well as raiding Asmara, Eritrea. Airdromes were bombed at Asmara and Gura, where hangars were demolished.

TANK FUND OVER THE TOP

Kitchener, Ont. June 13 — (CP) — The Kitchener-Waterloo "Buy-a-tank - for - the - Allies" campaign soared beyond its $25,000 objective today with a subscription of a new total of $26,572.

Officials said they expect $30,000 by the time the fund closes tomorrow night.

To date donations large and small have been pouring in, including several from United States residents.

'NOW IS OUR GOLDEN CHANCE'

Jerusalem, June 13 — (AP)— Fiawari Berou, newly-appointed Commander-in-Chief of Haile Selassie's forces in Ethiopia, is leaving Jerusalem by air today to take the field against Italy in Ethiopia.

Berou, former minister of war under the Negus, declared in an interview that "now is our golden chance."

While he was preparing to go, special prayers for his success were offered in Ethiopian churches in Jerusalem and Aksoho.

(A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Cairo said the Ethiopian tribes are preparing in revolt and that shortly before Rome declared war on the Allies an entire Italian division was routed. The Ethiopians are well armed, the report from the Sudan said.)

"We could not battle modern Italian forces alone," Berou declared. "But with Allied support we will return to our homeland and march with the Negus at our head and the Lion of Judah will reign again."

Berou fought through the Ethiopian campaign. He was wounded twice and came to Palestine when the Italians took Addis Ababa. He has been there since.

The commander said he was convinced "we could rally thousands of fighting men to turn on the Italians and "annihilate them."

Load After Load of Bombs Dumped on Nazi Positions

All Bridges Along a 60-Mile Front from Rouen to Mantes Destroyed

SET FOREST AFIRE

By GODFREY ANDERSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the R.A.F. in France, June 11 (AP)—(Delayed)—Load after load of bombers of the advanced air striking force streaked through the smoke palls overhanging the Seine Valley west of Paris today and struck blow after blow to aid General Weygand's battling armies in the battle of the Somme sector.

Load after load of bombs have been dumped on the German positions throughout the past twenty-four hours.

One pilot told me that all the bridges along a 60-mile stretch of the river from Rouen to Mantes had been destroyed.

A forest where German troops and supplies were believed to be concentrated was fired with incendiary bombs and machine-gunned during the night, these returning aviators, laid in long sticks of eight, soon sent a sheet of flame crackling through the forest, a perfect undergrowth of summer. Trees blazed and fell.

Mechanized units, convoys and pontoon bridges were relentlessly attacked. Dive-bombing attacks were made at Laon where columns of vehicles were moving up to support the left flank of the German push.

Particular attention was paid to a pontoon bridge in the region of Les Andelys, but the smoke from the town, which was burning, partly obscured the target from British bombers.

All along the northern bank of the Seine, aerodromes, too, were particularly heavy. But the R.A.F. was not the only single machine. Three were slightly damaged.

BOAT BUILT TOO LARGE FOR THE DOORWAY

A pair of Campbellford youths, who were intent on getting the most of the joys provided by the Trent River, decided last fall that they would build a boat for this summer's enjoyment on the water. After much discussion they began a few weeks ago to construct a square-end skiff in the cellar of one of the boy's homes. After getting the boat all completed only one thing prevented them from launching it early in the week after a busy week-end in which the finishing touches were added—and that was the cellar doorway. What they had couldn't get past the censor, but the craft is understood to be now being demolished and will be re-assembled on the lawn.

SALVATION ARMY CARRIES ON FINE WORK OVERSEAS

Evidence of the fine work being done by the Salvation Army overseas and in Canada was brought home today in a communication received by Major Alderman of the local corps.

To the end of March, 37,297 Canadians were on the overseas mobile canteens operating under the Red Shield Division. Religious services were held; 37 concerts and sing-songs were arranged and entertained by 27,500 persons. Motion pictures were provided for 34,300 men, while 20,000 books and 300,000 sheets of notepaper were distributed free grats. Equipment for many games and phases of athletics were also provided the troops.

The communication states that eleven large cases of comforts for the troops of the First Division arrived in England during the month of March. These included 5,381 articles in the form were socks, scarves, sweaters, mitts, pyjamas, etc. In addition a very many comforts have been provided for troops in Canadian camps.

Non-Naturalized Italians in County Struck Off Relief

Members of Hastings County Council placed themselves on record as approval on a communication received from the Ontario Director of Unemployment Relief to the effect that from this date non-naturalized Italians or their dependents in receipt or relief will no longer receive provincial contributions.

However, council was warned, some foreigners born relief recipients now naturalized still retain considerable sympathy for the cause of the enemy now at war with His Majesty the King.

Therefore, the communication stated, it is imperative that all municipalities scan their municipal relief rolls carefully and track down any subversive statements detrimental to the Allied cause.

Council was further warned that all vital information in respect to subversive elements should be supplied to officers of the Ontario Provincial Police or the Royal Canadian Mounted Police without delay.

Until further notice, it was pointed out, any relief assistance continued to proven "agitators" or "sympathizers" is a matter entirely at the discretion of the local authorities.

As a matter of policy, it was stressed, careful scrutiny should be maintained of such cases, through more frequent relief investigations in the home.

R. C. M. P. SEIZE ARMS, LITERATURE NEAR BANCROFT

Those Found in Possession of Firearms and Literature Not Placed in Custody

GUNS CONFISCATED

Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers seized two rifles, which were found in the possession of alleged enemy aliens near Bancroft yesterday. A quantity of Communistic literature was also confiscated, it was officially learned in Belleville today. Those found in possession of the literature and fire arms were not taken into custody as yet, however.

Constable William Beatty of the Belleville Detachment of the R.C.M.P., assisted by Provincial Constable Allan Palmer of Bancroft, entered the home of an alleged enemy alien and found the rifles. The owner was turned the fire arms over to the police without hesitation. Claimed they were used solely for hunting purposes in North Hastings. Firearms confiscated under the recent order of the Federal Government pertaining to the seizure of all fire arms found in the possession of enemy aliens.

At another home near Bancroft several copies of the Communistic publication "Clarion" were found in the home of a resident of that district. Other copies of publications issuing Communistic propaganda were also found in the district and seized. The issues were all of a date prior to the Government cancellation of such publications in Canada. The information will be forwarded to Ottawa and the names of the owners of the literature, the police, given to the Department of National Defence under the Defence of Canada Regulations. Police announced that it is unlawful to have such publications in possession.

Bay of Quinte Clerical Union Meets at Christ Church Rectory, Tyen.

The Oldest Anglican Clerical Organization of Its Kind in the Empire

A meeting of the Bay of Quinte Clerical Union, the oldest Anglican clerical organization of its kind in the British Empire, was held at Christ Church Rectory, Tyendinaga on the Mohawk Reserve on Tuesday afternoon, June 11th. Members present were Rev. C. O. Wright, Belleville, President, Rev. H. Pringle, Secretary, Ygerville and Tyendinaga, Rev. Canon Radcliffe, Rev. Canon Bedford-Jones, Rev. Arthur Jones, Rev. C. P. Heaven, Rev. F. U. Beaser and Rev. H. Jones.

In the year 1792 Queen Ann presented a Silver Communion set to the congregation of Her Majesty's Chapel of the Mohawks. Some eight of these have ministered in this parish during the past 150 years of its colorful history.

King George III presented the Royal Coat of Arms, this gift was burned in a fire which partly destroyed the church, and the late King George V gave a new Coat of Arms.

In the Great War 34 Mohawks gave their lives and 64 came back; their names are memorialized on a bronze tablet.

In 1784 a little Mohawk Church stood below the rectory and part of this latter building where the recent meeting was held is over 150 years old.

In 1844 Bishop Strachan first bishop of Toronto consecrated the new Christ Church, following the request of the Bay of Quinte Clerical Union.

The Lectern Bible now in use is 98 years old. The cross on the altar is adorned with costly jewels was brought from Canada by Mrs. Johnson, daughter of Dr. Oronhyatekha, who was the founder of the Independent Order of Foresters.

The heavy wind storm of last autumn damaged the belfry part of Christ Church and also the All Saints Mohawk Church, the repairs will be completed at a cost of $4,500.

Confirmation Service on Sunday

On Sunday morning Bishop Lyons will hold a confirmation service at All Saints Church on the Reserve. At the recent meeting in the Mohawk rectory the Rev. G. O. Wright read a paper on Christianity, and agnosticism, which was read on "The Theology of the English Poets" by the Rev. C. P. Heaven of Shannonville.

Luncheon was served to the clergy in the old rectory during recess by Mrs. Pringle and Mrs. Brant.

The next meeting will be at ancient and historic Bay of Quinte Clerical Union will be held on October at St. John's Mission, Herchimer Ave., Belleville.

Members of County Council Loud in Praise of Hospital After Tour of Institution

Modern Equipment and Facilities for Handling the Sick, a Revelation to Many

KITCHEN A SURPRISE

"Proud to live in a county, that has such an institution to look after the health of its population," was the comment of options of members of Hastings County Council following a conducted tour of the new private wing of Belleville General Hospital.

Post-tour comment revealed the new addition to the county institution to be a source of pleasure able surprise to those members of the body, previous to the tour, had not seen the modern building, equipment of options and facilities that comprise the new wing.

"I had no idea the new wing embodied such equipment and modern facilities such as I have seen today," a northern municipality reeve stated, while others added that the tour was a "revelation in modern medical science, and facilities for hospitalization" while yet another in his tribute said "the new wing was something that the greater majority of people here have not been in the hospital for the past two years, should see as soon as possible."

Southern Reeves Corroborate

Southern reeves likewise paid tribute in similar vein. "The new addition is one and 'twas the best word in hospital equipment and buildings, the staff, as I have found them today, and I see no reason why they should be different at any other time, are courteous to a degree, obliging and expert in their duties. It has been a distinct pleasure and a surprise for me to visit the new wing today."

"I am proud to belong to a county that has such an institution to look after the health of its population," yet another stated, and the body echoed this sentiment. "We should go back to our municipalities," he added, "and tell the people just what kind of a hospital Belleville and Hastings County possesses."

"The modern operating rooms, every accessory, kitchens and other facilities I have seen today, have opened my eyes, I must confess", was the comment of another reeve. "Such an institution should be a source of pride to every resident of this county, and deserving of every kind of support they can give it."

Officially Welcomed

Arriving at the new wing shortly after three o'clock, members of the council were officially welcomed by Administrator Gordon Friesen, and divided into two groups, were taken on the inspection tour under the guidance of administrator, Director of Nursing Miss Ruth Thompson, and Nurse Mabel Peacock.

Explaining every "gadget", as one reeve put it, and appliance these highly efficient members of the hospital staff, guided the county fathers along the various floors and through the many departments of the wing. Reeves shared in genuine surprise as the up-to-date equipment and beautiful furnishings of the private and semi-private rooms were shown them.

In the modern operating rooms with their powerful lights and gleaming instruments, the visitors were shown, while kitchens, supply rooms, laundry, dining rooms for staff and sub-staff, nurses' rest-rooms, diet kitchens were in turn subjected to the keen scrutiny of the visitors.

The mystery of the X-ray department was explained in detail by the technician in charge, while the up-to-date dispensary where upwards of 8,000 prescriptions have been "made up" since the inception of this important phase of hospitalization, opened a new vista for the county fathers.

The laboratory, which will be in charge of an experienced pathologist during the next few weeks was also included in the itinerary as was the sterilizing departments emergency wards and rooms and the new circular driveway for the facilitation of admission of emergency and other cases.

Pastors Explained

Many features of the wing not visible to the eye were explained by the administrator and his staff of options, Method of construction of the modern building, and the many up-to-date features it embraces were fully explained.

A special feature that caught the eye of several of the visitors was the preparation of the meals in the well-kept kitchen on the basement floor. Here, under the direction of Chief Dietitian Netty Burke and her assistant Elizabeth Ketcheson, were sent out the hundreds of meals, that are served daily to patients in the hospital proper and the new wing.

The tour concluded with a visit to the isolation ward of the hospital, situated in the southern part of the hospital proper, and which awaits further completion.

At this point the Administrator expressed his appreciation of the visit of the council, who in turn voiced their expressions to the hospital and staff for the many courtesies shown during the inspection.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Rashes

Many children are prone to develop skin rashes and pimples. Some are contagious and some are not, but a great many cases if you leave things alone they will clear up in a few days. But some persons just have to be putting things on such skin eruptions and sometimes the things they put on only aggravate the trouble.

I had this brought to my attention the other day. A mother came up from Toronto with her little girl to see the Quintuplets and then to call on me. It seems that the child had had a rash on her face and neck for quite some time. The mother had given the child various treatments and had tried a number of salves. A few days before an old patient of mine who now lives in Toronto, told the mother that I had cured a child of hers of a somewhat similar disease. So the mother brought the youngster in to see me.

I have seldom seen a child as bright or well developed. Her general appearance and actions indicated she was in the best of health and that the rash she had wasn't due to ill health. An examination made me certain that it was the stuff her mother had been plastering on the rash that was only aggravating it. Something in the salves and ointments I was reading on the child so that she had a mild eczema.

I advised the mother that in my opinion she should put nothing on the rash except olive oil. I warned her against salves and ointments and cold creams. Some of them contain harsh irritants. I also suggested that as a good precaution she watch the child's bowels, and see that she got plenty of water to drink.

In a few days, I got a telephone call from the mother telling me that her child's skin trouble was clearing up. The little girl herself talked to me over the telephone to let me know how glad she was about losing that nasty rash.

I think we all have a tendency to do as this woman did and overdo treatment. I know in my own practice I have often to check myself to keep from giving too much treatment. We should remember that it is nature that really does the healing and the repairing. Sometimes we have to do something to help her, but when we do we should be absolutely sure that we aren't doing more than we need to. If we are, then we are hindering the recovery, rather than helping it.

"Whose the Buffalo Roam"

Tex Ritter, star of Monogram's "Where the Buffalo Roam" now at the Capitol Theatre, bought a brand new trailer just before the beginning of his picture, but he hasn't got it now, and is just as glad.

The trailer, it seems, was a jinx. The thing for some strange reason always broke loose and rolled down a hill into a creek just as everyone was preparing for an important scene.

Three times in the week, once in a lake and once it got a flat tire and wrecked Tex's car in the desert on the way to location.

But the day before the picture finished, the trailer met its match. Somebody left open the gate to the cattle corral and when a thunder storm startled the animals the poor trailer got in the way of three hundred stampeding steers, and all one could find after the scramble was a few smashed tires and an axle, which was bent.

"Where the Buffalo Roam," is the second in a series of eight musical westerns that Tex Ritter is making for Monogram. It is the story of the buffalo scouts, who saved the last frontier for the United States.

Outstanding in the cast are Snub Pollard, Horace Murphy, Charles King, Dorothy Short and Karl Hackett.

"Where the Buffalo Roam" is an Edward Finney production.

The added feature on the same programme brings to the screen "Counterfeit Lady," starring Ralph Bellamy and Joan Perry, a drama full of action, mystery and suspense.

The News of the World and the 8th chapter of the thrilling serial, "The Phantom Creeps" complete the bill.

AT THE BELLE

"FLORIAN"

Tracing the fall of the Austrian Empire in the highly background for the love story of a boy, a girl and a horse, "Florian," spectacular filmisation of the novel by Petts Hulbert in the celluloid now playing at the Belle Theatre.

The story starts with Austria at its most opulent period and proceeds to the World War, revolution and fall of the Hapsburg dynasty' and a magnificent Lipizzan stallion property of Emperor Franz Josef. There are spectacular Imperial social affairs, festivals, the review of the Imperial horses in the Spanish Riding School of Vienna, contrasted with the stark drama of world cataclysm.

Robert Young, who triumphed in "Northwest Passage" adds another notable role to his list, and Heinz Gilbert is presumately dramatic as Florian. Irina Baronova, ballet dancer of the Ballet Russe, is exotic and compelling as the fiery sweetheart of an archduke, enacted by dashing Lee Bowman, Charley Coburn, Harold Owen and Lynde Watson handle important roles skillfully.

Last but not least is "Florian," Imperial stallion, presented to Opera Star Maria Jeritza by the Austrian government, in the title role. The shared in genuine praise as the lovable. He and other Lipizzans, including the only five in his country and others filmed in Austria, are celestial figures in the story.

"The Jones Family", Rotors

Here is the cone, America's first screen family, the Joneses, in the seventeenth of the 20th Century-Fox series, "On Their Own", which is announced as the second laugh hit on the same program.

Their pockets are empty, but their hearts are full of fun as they storm California in an attempt to overcome the string of bad luck that has tied up Pa Jones, and taken their home.

They have a trailer and the family car, and that's all—but when they get through, they have a bungalow count full of amusing tenants including a troupe of trained dogs, eight fascinating bambinos, and invention and an ex-actress, who never stops acting.

There's a stirring climax in "On Their Own" and it includes what what has been called the merriest set all their pictures.

"The Phillipines" is the subject treated in the all-new edition of the March of Time.

CANADA AS A HAVEN

Princess Juliana and her two children left The Hague with a small retinue and will remain here during the duration of the war. They will be the guests of Lord Athlone and the Princess Alice at Government House, Ottawa.

Canada is happy to be the land which offers a haven to leaders, dispossessed for the present of lands until the turn in the tide which will sweep Adolf Hitler and his addition, Benito Mussolini, into the dust of the defeated and crushed.

Once again the security which the British Empire offers is evidenced in the welcoming of the heiress to the Netherlands throne and her children.

How yearningly many must look from the war-torn Europe to the broad expanse of the Dominion of Canada and the United States, which know not the terrible problems which weigh upon Europe and see hope for security here! Britain too has always been the haven of safety.

MR. ROOSEVELT SPEAKS

How truly the heart of the United States beats in rhythm with the democracies of the world at war has long been evidenced in increasingly apparent. President Roosevelt's statement the other evening indicates the United States definitely out of strict neutrality, for he pledged every material resource of the United States to the cause of the Allies. He has made it clear that industry in the United States will be speeded to its maximum to provide the necessary equipment and war materials. Democracy and hatred of tyranny spoke in these words of Mr. Roosevelt's address this day of June, 1940, the hand that held the dagger has struck it in the back of its neighbor. On this tenth day of June, 1940, . . . we send forth our prayers and our hopes to those beyond the seas who are maintaining with magnificent valor their battle for freedom. We say again to you: "We will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation and, at the same time, we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that we ourselves in the Americas may have equipment and training equal to the task of any emergency and every defence."

"All roads leading to the accomplishment of these objectives must be kept clear of obstructions. We will not slow down or detour. Signs and signals call for speed — full speed ahead.

"The love of freedom is still fierce, still 'steady in the nation today."

Mr. Roosevelt has been one of the great exponents of liberty and security ever since the monster of dictatorship raised its head. He has been warning the dictators but they have madly rushed on in war.

Reflections from all parts of the United States show that Mr. Roosevelt has the support of his people.

Mr. Roosevelt has declared himself an ally of the best type, his words must have shaken the assurance of the Italian and the German dictators, gambling on a desperate throw to rend the world.

Mr. Roosevelt, when history is written, will shine as one of the great men of this age and of all ages in his struggle for the maintenance of liberty and democracy. How this kindly man appealed to the two enemies of liberty and was rebuffed by them in common knowledge. He made the plea of humanity. How his assurance of aid to the limit for the Allies will be a blow that the Hun and the Italian will understand.

British newspapers praise his stand. The London Times interpreted United States opinion as approving President Roosevelt's Virginia speech and said this meant the Americans see the war as a "struggle for the preservation of that own civilization in which they have as urgent a part, though not of so present a same part, as we."

"They are prepared," the paper continued, "to organize their national economy just as Great Britain and France have done, in order that every man and every dollar may be most effectively used to produce that which will sustain the fighting forces of liberty and at least destroy the tyrants.

"They will do this, not as friends of Great Britain and France, though we are proud to believe that we have their friendship, but as fellow fighters for a cause greater even than Britain, France or the United States. That spirit must prevail."

The Daily Mail said: "Britain's fight is the fight for free men everywhere" and commented "this battle has been called the battle of France and London. American people now are realizing that it is the battle of New York as well."

DUCE REFUSES WARNING OF MACHIAVELLI

"A prince ought to take care never to make an alliance with one more powerful than himself for the purpose of attacking others."

Those are the words of Niccolo .. Machiavelli.. Florentine, who is the model of Mussolini. Machiavelli was a statesman who believed in ruthlessness and defined his principles in "The Prince," a manual, written five hundred years ago, for statesmen. This book, the bible of the findings of an Italian who believed in any means, fair or foul, to gain his ends, demanded nothing if not a powerful state. It may be stated that Mussolini himself, a practical statesman though he was, was not wanted and went into exile where he wrote his book. Even Machiavelli could not make it "work."

But Machiavelli was wise for all that. He warned against just such a thing as Mussolini has done—joining with a more powerful dictator for the purpose of attacking the Allies. Mussolini for all his knowledge of "The Prince" has made that very mistake and the allied world realizes he made another—when he picked Hitler to win.

Mussolini has pestered Britain and France and been the dog-in-the-manger of Europe for many years. Now he is in the grip of a ruthless fellow named Hitler who will use him and misuse him and treat him as he would treat anything he did not regard with anything but disgust. What do the Nazis think of this last-minute Fascists? They will use them of course, and throw them to the slaughter if need be. Mussolini would have been well-informed to keep his distance from the Fuehrer who does not forget that duty did to Austria in 1915-18. Hitler will not stand hat in hand before Mussolini. He will give orders and Mussolini will obey them.

Mussolini, the civilized world realizes, has played the selfish fool and shown the brutality of his political conceptions. The egoist, the believer in himself, will find that his very confidence in himself has led him into a trap. It is so with Hitler. He followed evil until evil became his master. This brace of dictators will go down the road together to destruction and humanity will appeal to the two enemies of liberty and was rebuffed by them in common knowledge. He made the plea of humanity. How his assurance of aid to the limit for the Allies will be a blow that the Hun and the Italian will understand.

The egoist, the believer in himself, will find that his very confidence in himself has led him into a trap. It is so with Hitler. He followed evil until evil became his master. This brace of dictators will go down the road together to destruction and humanity will forget Italian history which tells all through the ages of German armies marching down into Italy and keeping it in a state of weakness, with German princelings ruling in Milan, Florence, Venice and other cities. But it was Britain that, it possible for Italy to become united. But the revolutionist Mussolini has shown that. Fascism "thinks it smells carrion," to use the fine words of the writer in the New York Times but it will be disastrer it will meet.

Mussolini looks upon himself as a second Julius Caesar but he is a pigmy as compared with the great Julius. Caesar was a man of the people, though of noble family and he was politically shrewd. He was a man of the world, possessed of one of the best minds and was commander, writer, orator, statesman and dictator. But even Caesar had his foibles and weakness, it is said, that showed the signs of weakness and too great love of show and his overweening vanity for power caused the revolution which brought his assassination. Even Julius, in many ways, tried to emulate that brilliant younger leader of Macedon, Alexander the Great, whom he admired above all men.

But Mussolini is nothing of this calibre. He is driven by Hitler and he is but a revolutionist and violent egoist. Mussolini has long upon the long past Roman Empire must have a sickening feeling for he cannot but realize that while neither he nor Hitler can revive the glories that once were Rome's, for Mussolini is not even intellectually and Hitler is thinking not of old Rome or of new Rome but of Germanism. Ancient Rome could not exist in the modern world. Julius Caesar would not sign a long pact with the Germans.

Hitler will but make every possible use of the Italians including their dictator and squeeze them for all they are worth.

But no Roman nor other Italian nor German was present at the meeting of the Senate of Rome when Julius Caesar was stabbed to death, something that cannot be said for the Nazis and Fascist leaders. It is Britain and France that are strong in the righteousness of their cause, not Italy, dictators have an axis under which to crush the human race, if they could only have their way. This pair are trying to roll civilization back to the era of savagery, a colossal attempt which the Allies are confident will end in collapse of Germany and Italy.

the plane was one of the world's flying miracles. "I shouldn't hold together in the air".

Hohsel Also Reassured.

Not far away from this plane is a Heinkel-111, which had recently made the acquaintance of a Cobber Kane. The Heinkel was downed a few days ago in a four-second duel. Characteristic of the attacking plane's work was a large patch of bullet holes, virtually in one place, in the Heinkel.

Structurally intact, it had been stripped of its instruments. Both engines will be removed, the Hurricane who captured the crew and took them eight miles single-handed by gendarmerie headquarters said all the plane's machine-gun shells had been exploded in a panoramic one-two.

He showed the writer a spot of light paint on his uniform—which he had picked up when he entered the cockpit of the Heinkel in search of wet paint and glue.—N.Y. Times.

The Flying Submarine

For a year now the Japanese shipbuilding yards have been busily working on a new type of machine which has proved to be very effective in spite of its hasty construction. It is the pocket submarine. Although it is only six or seven yards long, it is a remarkable success at torpedoing and, being very light, is much easier to handle than larger submarines.

Japan now possesses about ten of these little submarines, which could destroy a whole squadron.

Recently fifteen experts and three reporters were invited to watch the last run of a submarine which is very similar to the pocket submarine. The boat, after gliding a short distance on the surface, take off into the air and fly like a seaplane.

C. E. Yseonuma, the engineer-inventor of the submarine, demonstrated it himself. The flish-shaped body, about nine or ten yards long, plunged and disappeared completely, so do all good submarines.

After about ten minutes' manoeuvring with the periscope showing, the submarine rose to the surface. Then from the horizontal upper surface, first two, then three, and finally four boats were seen to edge out from each side, giving the machine a wing span of eighteen to twenty yards. Then it seemed to rise, while from the point of the boat two propeller blades emerged from sunken slots, angled back and automatically began turning an air screw which began to turn. Exactly six minutes after the submarine had reached the surface it flew off.

This "flying fish", can, without danger, go fifteen to twenty miles under water; when unloaded it has a range of more than six hundred miles. Its flight, and, even when carrying freight, it has a range of three hundred miles. It can be taken to pieces and carried in the under water or in the air.

The "flying fish", equipped with three sixty-horse-power engines, is made almost entirely of wood. Its wheels and gear are of silk, of a special weave.

The construction of these machines requires quantities of aluminum that in the present circumstances the deposits of bauxite could afford. Thus Germany could never take advantage of this weapon since France and Britain have almost a world monopoly of the indispensable material.—From Journal de Roubaix, Paris, condensed in Magazine Digest.

Nazi Planes Frail

Among the twenty-five German planes brought down during a raid on Paris recently was that of the colonel commanding the flight, it was disclosed. He was taken prisoner. He failed to set fire to his plane, and it is reported that he prevented his crew from doing so.

Your correspondent examined the plane—a Junkers-88 four-seat twin-engined bomber—and found it relatively undamaged, except for the landing gear and the engines. The officer who was piloting it, presumably had sufficient fuel to reach the German lines, and both engines were still in working order.

Witnesses from a near-by anti-aircraft battery, which did not enter the action owing to the presence of French chasers, said that after an eighteen-second dog-fight the colonel's plane dived out of the fray, swung around and landed in a level wheatfield.

Ditch Takes Wheat Off

The wheat, about two feet high, hid a small irrigation ditch running diagonally across the field. The wheels of the plane dipped into the ditch and one was ripped off. The plane slewed flat on its belly and slid to a halt. The only person injured was a bomber sitting just behind the observer's seat. He had a broken foot and a bullet wound in the arm. All present he left in an army hospital where he is said to be recovering rapidly.

The plane's instrument panel, which is intact, has caused some speculation among experts who are, incidentally, still looking for a possible time bomb intended to destroy the plane. The panel is a disconcerting array of German-made instruments, American instruments and some purely German gadgets, the purpose of which is not apparent. (Here four lines were censored.)

There is a complete absence of rubber in the plane—bakelite is used for insulation—except on the tires. Magnesium is employed on essential controls by an ingenious use of longitudinal grooves in steel.

The cockpit and the rest of the plane is showed signs of hasty construction. Bolts have been driven in out of line, and the economy of girders and struts inside drew the remark that

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

A wide extension of aerial warfare was the first direct consequence of Italy's entry into hostilities at the side of Germany.

British aircraft bombed military objectives in northern Italy, in Lybia and Italian East Africa South Africa can attest, participating in hostilities for the first time, attacked Ethiopia and the Italians showered bombs on the British island of Malta.

Thus the exposed position of Italy and her African possessions brings the grim facts of war home to the Italian people more quickly and more forcefully than it has yet been brought home to the German people.

Meantime the position on the western front shows little indication of emerging from the Allied point of view. The pressure of the powerful German attack on the Somme and Aisne is unrelenting. The French are still resisting and have nowhere broken their line under his terrific punishing.

The enemy's encircling movement, directed at Paris, however, continued to progress. Despite the efforts of the British and French air forces in bombing transports, supplies and roads behind the German lines the mechanized divisions of the German army are able to get the fuel and the equipment to enable them to move on.

France is Fighting First Battle in a Long War

If the Germans occupy Paris and the French government moves to Nantes, Bordeaux or any of the half dozen places considered when this eventuality seemed fantastic to most Parisians, the French army will not have won the war, writes Anne O'Hare McCormick in the New York Times. This is going to be a struggle to exhaustion, in the course of which defeats will not insure a victory. It will be fought in many forms for many years and on as many fronts that what's happening today will look like an episode in a panoramic one-act test. For a comparable upheaval, one has to go back to the time of the Wars, the barbarian invasions, the crusades, the spread of Islam by the sword, the Reformation, the Renaissance—and even then the comparison fails because all these great actions took place within the limits imposed by the size of the world at the time and the remoteness of one continent from another.

On the wall of a downtown office hangs a framed copy of The London Times containing the account of the Battle of Waterloo, printed days after the event. The story managed to make the range, but only to a small extent of a couple of sticks at bottom of a column. Although the armies locked in the greatest slaughter France, Waterloo was a mere decisive than the battle for Paris; yet the space accorded the report of the victory suggests that it excited less interest in England than the local and personal affairs of the Little Smaller World.

Perhaps awareness of the events affecting human destiny is a fairly modern phenomenon, fostered by the means around the world were not heard for a long time. Today they are heard instantly; the news of exploding in Helsinki reverberated over the air to people in Cape Town or New York as we feel the pounding of the armies closing in as soon as Paris.

Today everything is universal. If any doubt remains of the terrible oneness of the world wherein the human race is corralled by the forces of the means of communication, Hitler himself dispels it. He started the war in Europe, and when his first aim was to smash the nucleus of an international system and drive it from human into a realm apart. No sooner had he annexed the Sudeten-lands and the Austrian territory, than he discovered that Germans could live without other peoples. Ever since, the Mohammed of nationalism has done nothing but hunt for Christians and Christianities. The prophet of autarchy has physically raided eight nations and put the screws on eight others to obtain supplies.

With all this foreign loot Germany is as far from self-sufficiency as it was. With all these fertile territories the unit is not yet big enough. Hitler is now out to fortify himself in a scale and character beyond the wildest dreams of Napoleon. He is out to unify all Europe by fire and sword.

He is trying to control a trend in world affairs that he cannot stop. The wonder is that he ever started to predict, even in this dark hour, that the attempt to master a continent must in the end defeat the conqueror against the conqueror. Hitler may, in fact, be the instrument used to re-establish the broken unity of Europe; he may be the flail and the scourge that will drive all the nationalists from the council chambers of nations and force the world to be big age and to accept the inexorable

The Poor Pedestrian

The American Automobile Association, after a three-year study, has discovered that two out of three pedestrians killed by automobiles are over 40; that seven out of ten are killed on streets and that 4 out of 5 fatalities occur at places other than crossings; that two out of five are killed at night. The association concluded that "some way must be found to curb the pedestrian. Some way must be found, but we have not yet scratched the surface."

The best way to "curb" the pedestrian is to keep him in the road just as the best way to solve the speed problem is to keep all vehicles off the street. By keeping the pedestrian in the house, you subject him to the terrifying monotony of household accidents which, we are told, kill more people than do automobiles.—Detroit News.

The bride's mother, was gowned in dusky rose sheer with white accessories and corsage of red roses and white carnations. DUFFIN — MUNRO

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Munro, Norwood, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, Wednesday afternoon, June 12th., when their eldest daughter, Anna Jean, became the bride of George Jay Duffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Duffin, Stirling. Rev. E. W. Rowland, of Mark Street United Church, Peterborough, a former friend of the young couple while at Stirling, officiated and the wedding music was played by Mrs. Rowland. Seasonable flowers formed a most appropriate setting for the happy occasion.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace over white taffeta, with sweetheart neckline and basque waist. The flowing skirt was lined with pink, petite lace and rosebuds. Her finger-tip veil was caught in a tiara of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of Briarcliff roses and white bouvardia.

Miss Olive Munro was her sister's bridesmaid, and was gowned in Alice blue embroidered marquisette, with white baku straw hat, and carried a nosegay of rosebuds and sweet peas.

Mr. Harold Baker, of Belleville, was groomsman and Mr. John Munro, brother of the bride, and David Puffin, brother of the groom, acted as ushers. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Walter Morrow, Frankford, sang very sweetly "The Sunshine of Your Smile."

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, which was gowned in dusky rose sheer with white accessories and corsage of red roses and white carnations. The groom's mother wore powder blue sheer with matching accessories and corsage of roses.

Father's Day—An Anniversary of Love and Respect

The days that are set aside to pay tribute to human relationships touch deep springs of feeling and affection in our hearts. Father's Day is one of these blessed and inspiring days, the day when we hang out the banners of our hearts to salute the nobility and reality of the love of a son for his father, the love of a daughter for her father.

It has been said that each person, while dressing his or her father's picture, draws his or her own picture too. Certainly this is true of the founder of Father's Day, Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, of Spokane, Washington. Mrs. Dodd revealed her high quality of mind and heart when she started the movement to set aside the third Sunday of June as a tribute to the "attitude of soul" of Mrs. Dodd's father, William J. Smart, a C.A.R. veteran, who had "reared his motherless group of sons and daughters alone."

Early in 1910 Mrs. Dodd launched her idea in a petition she sent to the Ministerial Association of Spokane, urging that a speak from the pulpit on the third Sunday in June, on the importance of a father's place in the home and on the importance of the protection of children.

The National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association joined with the Ministerial Association in enthusiastically backing Mrs. Dodd's idea.

The governors of three-quarters of the States in the Union now officially proclaim the third Sunday of June as Father's Day. And now the National Council for the Promotion of Father's Day is cooperating with the National Father's Day Committee, an honorary group of eminent men and women, to boost Father's Day.

You may, if you choose to "say it with flowers" this day, scoff at the suggestion of observing Father's Day or Mother's Day or any other such anniversary. You may prate about the fact that there are already too many holidays. Or you may, in an effort to be facetiously intimate that father's main duty in life is to pay the bills. These are all cheap pictures that you can, if you wish, draw of yourself.

But everlastingly above these unworthy points of view shines the glory of the handing on of the aspirational torch from father to daughter.

Father's Day is a day for good thoughts of remembered days and remembered ways. Today's world needs these anniversaries of affection and honor.

Chins Up, Gals, For Loveliness

Eleanor Powell . . .

BY HELEN FOLLETT

Chins should be beautifully contoured, firm and pretty. No woman realizes that fact quite so much as the poor darling whose chin carries a double, as Pilgrim carried his burden. Perhaps she's being punished for not counting her calories. Perhaps she has dipped too often and too deeply into the bonbon box.

Two classic cures be rolled into a state of single blessedness, but the presto-change act can't be accomplished in a few treatments. In one month or six weeks, the victim of chinny contours will emerge the fresh, roll it between thumb and finger, she'll find that she's superficial one is gradually doing a fade-away. After the massage the skin should be freshened with ice, then treated with an astringent. Flabbiness is worn down by bulk, and must be avoided.

While giving this treatment, smooth the neck from collar bones upward, forcing as much cream into the flesh as you can. Neckslip from the ear to the chin and then to the sides of the throat. Repeat this movement with the cream, and finish with a pat-pat-pat.

Have you been working in your garden to get hand - me - down hands that don't seem to belong to you? Poor little Cinderella, they are.

Get out the yellow cornmeal. Whip up some soap suds in your hands, add the cornmeal, give the knuckles a scrubbing old cleaning. Every bit of grime will disappear. Rinse and dry gently.

Anoint the palms with cocoa-butter, massage from wrists to finger tips, thumbing the flesh around the finger nails. Take plenty of time for this treatment. While the cocoabutter remains on, apply borated talcum in the pack. In ten minutes wipe it away with a tissue!

Then there hardly is better way to develop concentration habit in the baby or young child than by reading to him. The child that is at home from early babyhood will have learned to listen well to the directions, he later, will get at school.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Father Is Not "The Forgotten Man"

Father's Day comes only once a year, and we have, most of us, much in the way of oversight to make up to him. It isn't that he is the "forgotten man", as some are never since.

Families have a way of forgetting—even good, devoted families. Mother has her husband duties; there is so much more to be done each day than she realizes when the day begins. The children are distracted by school duties, or perhaps their first youthful dates.

The older children may have just married, and the new bonds cause the old ones to slacken just a little. So the thoughts of the young husband, or young wife, run along this groove: "This is Father's Day. We'll call him up, or something. That good Agnostic there's so little time."

Do it now! You may not always be able to call father up and tell him how much you care and how much you appreciate all that he has done for you.

While you're about it, don't you think it would be well to get him a little gift? Something he has been wanting but grudges spending money on. Time is galloping. Write the letter, phone the affectionate message, send the gift while father is here to be made happy. Don't let father be the "forgotten man."

There are many young men and women who have a natural feeling of love for their fathers, but they're often so surprised at the previous paragraph, a little shy or lockjawed about telling him so. In almost every family father has never been as close to the children as mother has been. It seems easier that children should show their love for mother more plainly. They don't understand that dad is love-hungry—that he needs spontaneous affection to make him feel he isn't a failure.

Remember that while dad may not have amassed a six figure fortune, he has been a success in one of the family going, and as a family there have been some stormy hour times under the parental roof. He doesn't feel he's been a "peculiar" husband. He's been human and lovable.

Here's to Father on Father's Day.

PAINTER SUSTAINS ONLY SLIGHT INJURIES IN FALL OFF LADDER

Falling from the top of a forty-foot ladder, Alex Hamilton, painting at the Bellevue Apartments on Campbell Street yesterday afternoon, a painter whose home could not be obtained, was slightly injured. Only the fact that the man's fall to the pavement was broken by a shrub, which grew in a bed window which projected from the building proper, did he escape serious injury. The man was said to have either lost his balance at the top of the ladder or that the ladder in some manner slipped, precipitating the man to the earth. About fifteen feet below before rolling off to light on his feet on the pavement.

FIGHT FOR LOVE

By Sylvia Taylor

INSTALMENT 9.

Star spent the entire morning and part of the afternoon searching before she found a room she could afford. It was on the basement floor of a large old building with pipes running through from the furnace, but for the moment it offered the protection she needed.

She fancied the landlady was looking at her with suspicion but eventually the money was accepted and Star was alone. Without unpacking or taking time enough to remove her dress, she flung her tired young body across the bed and fell asleep.

It was dark when she wakened. At first the unfamiliar surroundings frightened her, then she remembered where she was and that confidence in herself which had never entirely deserted her came to her rescue. It was better this way, at least she was sailing under no false colors.

Star put on her hat and went to a drug store where she ordered a sandwich and glass of milk. Men stared at her. Even in her simple dress and plain hat her beauty was compelling. But she was unconscious of it. She was so absorbed in her problem that she had no time to think about how she might affect others. The thought of Bob she put firmly out of her mind, just as she had known she had surrendered all hope of seeing Leslie Reed again. They belonged to a past she was trying to forget. Stepping alone to an agency she was determined to make.

On the way home she bought a paper but there were few help wanted ads. It might be better to register at an employment agency. It did not enter her mind that she would be unable to find anything to do. Nevertheless this proved to be the case. Every single lead she followed was a disappointment. The agency assured her they could place her in time but her small fund was rapidly disappearing.

It did not seem possible that a girl with her ability and the experience she had had with Nina could not find a job. Every night she told herself that tomorrow she would certainly find something but the answer was always the same. Perhaps, later. They neither knew nor cared that in case after case she couldn't wait. Something had to happen soon.

It was the end of the week after her landlady had reminded her that another payment was due when she met Leslie Reed again. He was coming from a hotel with a group of friends just as Star passed by. She knew several of them and they spoke to her carelessly, but Leslie excused himself and ran after her as she walked rapidly in the opposite direction.

"I'd like to see you again," he said in his friendly fashion.

She glanced at him murmuring.

"Yes!" but she did not stop.

"I telephoned you several times," he told her, "but your mother said you were not at home."

"Didn't she tell you where I was?"

"No, she always said she didn't know."

"I'm not living at home any more," she told him soberly.

Leslie said approvingly, "Swell! How about a date?"

Star looked at him wistfully. He represented so much for which she longed, but she knew now that she was not yet ready to associate with anyone. The Leslie, sooner or later his parents would interfere. She remembered how the Judge Bennet had looked the night of Sheila's party for the high school graduates. Such a curious, speculative look, as if he were surprised and not altogether approving. No, there was no use deceiving herself. Nina had taught her a lesson she could not forget.

"It's nice of you to ask me," she said, "but I can't."

"Why not?" he asked surprised. "You're not working at night, are you?"

Star shook her head.

"Then what's the matter?"

"I just can't," she insisted.

Leslie looked at her puzzled.

"You mean there is somebody else?"

Well, he had better think that than to know the real reason—that life was coming.

Star remained silent so long that Leslie said, "You look unhappy. Is there anything I can do for you?"

Proudly she lifted her head.

"Nothing, thank you. That's my car coming. I'll have to run."

Star watched Leslie walking away from her, and there were tears in her eyes. Pride is expensive when a girl has only a dime in her purse. She had not eaten since the night before and was faint with hunger and weak.

Something would have to be done. She could no longer wait on fate. But while she had been talking to Leslie she had decided to go to Mamie and ask her for a small loan. At least, she thought bitterly, her mother would give her something to eat.

She was so tired that the three flights of stairs seemed longer and steeper than it was. The door was locked so she had to ring. Mamie answered and Star saw that she was in one of those unpleasant moods which always followed a quarrel with her husband.

"Well, what do you want?" Mamie demanded.

Star pushed past her into the living-room.

"I'm hungry," she said.

"It serves you right, Star. What do you mean running up a bill and disappearing? To say nothing of a chance to marry a man like Bob Lambert?"

"If I were you, I wouldn't say any more about him," Star replied in a low voice.

"If you're trying to imply that it's my fault, you're wrong," Mamie flared. "Bob came to see me himself and insisted that that night made no difference to him."

"Mother," Star said suddenly, feeling as if she would faint, "can't we talk about it later? I have to have something to eat."

Mamie led the way into the kitchen but did not stop talking.

"Fix yourself a sandwich," she said ungraciously. "There's cold meat in the ice-box."

She watched with sullen eyes as the girl buttered bread and poured herself a glass of milk.

"Bob told me he still wanted you to marry him. What do you mean running off like that?"

"Mrs. Lambert was opposed to it from the start," Star said wearily. "But she was too clever to say so."

"Nina can't keep you from getting married," her mother reminded her.

Star put down the glass from which she had been drinking.

"There's no use discussing it, mother. I'm not going to marry Bob now. His mother is taking him to Europe."

"He left word with me that he would see you when he comes back," Mamie reported eagerly. "There's no use you being stubborn about it. Men like Bob Lambert don't grow on trees. It isn't too late to get in touch with him. They aren't going until the end of this week. You can telephone him."

"No. I promised not to see him again and I am going to keep my promise. I don't even want to marry him now."

"Then you're a fool," raged Mamie. "Where are you going to live? What are you going to do?"

"I'll work. I've had my application in with an agency for a week and they feel sure they can get something for me soon. It may still lend me a little money until then. Just a little, mother. It won't take much. You can spare it from the grocery money, can't you? I'll pay you back."

"No you won't," her mother retorted. "Because there won't be anything to pay back. You don't have to starve. You know what you can do."

"But I can't call Bob, I tell you. I promised Mrs. Lambert."

"Pooh! sniffed Mamie. "What's a promise in a case like this? Don't you ever consider what's best for yourself? How about me? Where's the money you promised to give me every week?"

The girl stared at her with sombre eyes.

"I'll give it to you just as soon as I'm working. I can't help me until then."

"I've spent all I'm going to on you," Mamie flared, entirely forgetting or disregarding the fact that Star had given her more than she could spare from the small salary Nina had paid her.

INSTALMENT 10.

Mamie had worked herself into one of her ullisel moods.

French's Prepared Mustard gives a distinctive flavour to all foods with which it is used.

"Look at the money I threw away trifling you to be a fool," she scolded. "I'm ashamed. "And what did I get for it? Right now, if you really wanted a job, Joe could get one for you. But no, you're too high-hat to work for any of his friends. You're going to be a lady. All right, be one! But don't expect me to help."

Star's face was paler even than usual as she asked, "Would you let me go and here with only a dime in my pocketbook?"

"You can stay here if you'll take Joe's advice. He can help you get a job."

"No thank you!" Star declared passionately.

"Then call Bob. He'll help you even if you don't want to marry him. You've got your nerve," Mamie said raising her voice in the pitch Star knew preceded an outburst. "to come here begging for money."

Without another word Star turned toward the door. Mamie's voice pursued her.

"There are plenty of things you could do, but you're just too proud to do any of them. After you've gone hungry once, maybe you'll appreciate a man who is crazy to marry you."

As the door closed behind her Star found that she was shaking from head to foot. In spite of all the trouble they had had the arguments and scoldings, she had not believed that Mamie would really let her walk out of the apartment with no money. She had always told herself that in a crisis her mother would help her. She knew better now. She had no one. No single person to whom she could turn. Bob belonged to a past she was determined to forget. She had promised Nina not to get in touch with him and she would keep that promise no matter what the cost.

Her room rent was overdue. She cared not spent the last dime she had her street car fare. Blind with despair, she walked aimlessly, neither seeing nor caring where she was going. She had thought when she left Nina's that she had reached bottom. But until you were left out money or the hope of making any you didn't know what real trouble was. She would save the time for breakfast—but then what? The landlady had told her she would have to give up her room before noon the next day.

"I'm not running a charitable institution," she had reminded her. "And I can rent that room for as much as you're paying any time. If I wanted to I could put your clothes for the two days over your week but I won't do that. You can have your things but you'll have to get out."

Star didn't blame her. It wasn't the landlady's fault that she was down on her luck. But what shall I do?" the girl thought. She had already telephoned the lawyer who had recommended her to Nina but he was on his vacation. Maybe it had been foolish of her not to let Joe get her a job if he could at one of those mysterious night clubs Mamie was always talking about, but with every instinct in her Star feared anything connected with Joe. She had suspected for years that his business—whatever it was—was not legitimate. To continue in the sordid atmosphere of her home was worse than death.

Was death so terrible, she wondered, thinking of her mother's face with its look of weariness and discontent. Perhaps after all she had been wrong to think she could take fate into her own hands. Perhaps from the beginning she had been meant to suffer.

Completely absorbed in her thoughts, Star had paid no attention to where she was going. It had been late in the afternoon when she left her mother's apartment. Suddenly she realized that twilight had faded into dusk. Lights were shining on in the houses across from the park's harbor where she had been walking. She used to come here as an adolescent girl to watch the little vessels being overhauled and renovated. It had given her a feeling of adventure to see them. Sometimes people would be on deck. Such carefree happy people they seemed to inhabit a different world. A world unmarred by angry words and evil scarred faces like that of her stepfather.

Had she sought it now unconsciously in her need for reassurance that there still was such a place and such people, for a moment the latter reason? The waters of the bay lapped against the wooden piers. How much courage would it take to jump? And be carried away? Was it worth it to go on fighting?

Star had never been able to understand how a girl could commit suicide. When she read about such things in the paper she always felt as if they had wrongly thought have changed for them. If you pushed on through the blackness there was sure to be light ahead. It had been a comforting theory, but for the first time in her life she felt doubting it. Wasn't it just one of those sayings people had committed to memory? But the time for deceiving herself was past.

"I had a dime in my pocketbook," she thought. "Just a dime. A thin dime, which would say. After I have spent it for breakfast tomorrow I will call at the agency. They will say, as they have every day. 'Sorry, Miss Bright. Perhaps to-morrow.' But I can't wait until to-morrow. I can't listen to that again knowing that twenty-four hours must pass with nothing to eat. And tomorrow I have to give up my room."

Suppose I did break my promise to Mrs. Lambert and call Bob? He hasn't any money except what she gives him. Until he goes to work in October he is completely dependent on her. Or suppose I go home and Joe gets me involved in some of his crooked schemes? I'd rather die than that. Drowning probably isn't so bad but it would be terrible if I should change my mind after I had jumped. And I might change it. Life even without a home is better than being dead. Just being able to breathe . . . I haven't any money or any place to go, but I'm not beaten yet because I don't want to die."

This conclusion surprised her. How could life still be so important stripped of everything ordinarily considered essential? But it was. Just the fact of her heart pumping the blood into her veins, her lungs filling with the moist, cool air.

Star had walked to the end of the deserted pier and stood looking down into the dark water but no longer afraid. The will to live had refused to surrender although she was trembling with reaction. Her face felt drained of color. Tears blurred her vision. It was one way out but she would not take it. She would go on living at any cost.

Suddenly she had the feeling that some one was behind her. Wheeling, she saw a man in sweater and slacks. His features in the dark ness were not plain but he had a nice voice.

"What are you doing out here?" he asked.

Ordinarily she would have walked away without replying. She knew how to protect herself against the advances of strange men, but the moment before had been the most despairing of her entire life. Any human being would have been welcome inside the awful vacuum into which she had fallen.

"I was just looking at the water," she said.

"No idea of jumping, I hope. I hate getting soaked."

"Do you mean you would have rescued me 10 f had?"

"I'd have tried but I trust you won't put me to the test."

Star felt as if the veil which had been tightening about her heart, suddenly snapped. She smiled uncertainly.

"That's funny because I have just decided I wasn't going to. But if I had decided the other way you would have dragged me out of the water you would have punished me in either case."

"Which proves you weren't meant to die yet."

Star said slowly, "I guess you're right. I don't want to die."

"Good girl," he approved. "Now that we've settled that, how about walking back to that cruiser over there and having a bite to eat?"

Following the direction he was indicating, Star saw a snug little craft riding lightly on the water.

"Do you work on it?" she asked hesitantly.

"I certainly do. Sundays and holidays and any other time I can squeeze in."

"Oh, you mean it's yours?"

"Yes. I've just returned from a week's vacation so there's plenty of food aboard."

Something about this man seemed vaguely familiar. She was sure she had seen him before. Perhaps that was why she trusted him.

Estimates of Expenditures And Receipts Given Council

Suggestion of Warden That One-Quarter Mill for War Services be Added on Equalization Not Adopted

LITTLE DISCUSSION

Drastic readjustment of the estimates for the County of Hastings for the year 1940 which featured the inclusion of a one-quarter mill levy amounting to $4,570.70 to be used for patriotic purposes, and the increase of expenditures for Children's Aid Societies and Industrial Schools from $1,500 in 1939 to $20,000 for the current year, featured the Estimates Committee report adopted yesterday by the County Council. The rate level was 19½ mills.

A suggestion by Warden J. I. Churchill, that the one-quarter mill for war services organizations be added to the rate of 19½ mills on the assessment of equalization of $18,282,800.00 which is the same rate as 1939, instead of being included in the rate and absorbed by reason of increase in estimates, failed to meet the approval of council.

The readjustment of expenditures and estimated receipts which included, among other features, the increase in expenditures of schools from $50,000.00 to $52,000.00; the addition of Refuge from $16,000 to $18,000.00; was a most ostiest by succeeded increases in revenue from various sources of revenue.

The total estimated receipts which include the new county levy of $181,960.40 and expenditures amount to $276,039.40 as compared to $276,039.40 in 1939.

There was little or no discussion when the council went into a committee of the whole on estimates in order to save time. The warden's suggestion that the additional 1-4 mill be added to the rate levied, met with little enthusiasm on the part of council and the matter was dropped, when the motion for adoption was carried.

The estimates, it was pointed out by the warden, were but a bit of an actual costs to the county last year. Yet, he added, the figures presented in the report were only estimates, and are subject to changes minus or plus.

Roads and Bridges

The estimated expenditures on the Roads and Bridges system was $78,-000, it was pointed out to council. This amount is $3,500.00 in excess of the amount of $75,000 as was originally approved by the Department of Highways, but information received prior to the special session of the Estimates Committee, advised them that the additional $3,500 had received departmental approval. Previously, the estimates had called for $78,000 as forwarded to the Department for approval, had been reduced by $18,000.00.

Following is the report of the Estimates Committee as adopted by council:-

Not Build New Wing

Recommendation of the report of the Advisory Board of the House of Refuge, which featured a decision of the committee to refrain from the construction of the proposed new men's wing to the institution, was formally adopted after presentation to council.

In the opinion of the Board, world and other conditions at present, do not warrant the construction of the proposed addition. Adoption of the report was made after various opinions of members concurred with the recommendations.

Protest Railway Board

Council also affirmed a recommendation by the Reeve of Deseronto which has been forwarded to the Railway Board, protesting against the proposed discontinuance of operation of a railway line some six miles in length, that operates between the village of Deseronto and the Town of Napanee. Members also concurred in a similar resolution forwarded by the Town Council of Napanee.

In his address to council Reeve Ed. Roche, pointed out that the cutting off of the operations of this stretch of right-of-way would vitally affect farmers of the district as well as business men of his village.

"Our village has bonused this part of the railway to the extent of $35,-000 in the past," he said, "and our people feel that it is an injustice to discontinue the service."

Council concurred with no discussion.

W. C. Mikel in an address to the council, asked that the body purchase fifty books to be published by him in the near future, and which contain a history of Belleville and Hastings County. He pointed out that his publication was a sure way of telling the world of the advantages of Hastings County, and would be instrumental in bringing thousands of people here each year. Council referred the matter to the Ways and Means Committee.

BRITONS DISPLAY CALMNESS UNDER THREAT OF BOMBS

The coolness and courage of the British people with the Hun hordes hammering at the gate of the "tight little isle" and the hope that "we can extricate ourselves and the Empire from the present tangle," is exemplified in a letter received recently by Ex-Mayor Jamieson Bone from a brother, Herbert, at present residing in Dover, England.

The letter follows:-

Dover
24-5-40

Dear Jim:—

Just a note to say how sorry I was that you did not manage Fecamp. Our papers have devoted a deal of space to the election and to dirt on the radio.

The war has come almost to our doors here. Yesterday gunfire on the French coast was shaking our windows. There was much air activity and in the evening the siren sounded the alarm for us to take cover for an hour. We could hear the whirring of planes overhead but there was no gunfire.

This morning everything is peaceful again, our destroyers are lying quietly in the harbor and no bangs are shaking us. Some of the crew of the "Maid of Kent" have just arrived in the office from France. She was a hospital ship and was sunk in Dieppe harbor this week. A train load of wounded had just arrived or be taken across to the Nazis flew low and machine-gunned everyone they could see—nurses, wounded or sailors. Seventeen of the crew were killed—all boys.

You will remember Pilot Macdonald who met you on your arrival in Dover and took us down in his car. He was killed a month ago taking a Dutch ship up to London. A magnetic mine exploded below her and blew her to pieces. His family have just left for Glasgow to live there.

Have just been to the barber who began telling me about a son he left in Vancouver. For two years the boy (now 26) was 7 miles swimming champion of B.C., decided every year on this day. I showed him the enclosed cutting about Robt. Bone. Yes, he knew him—"Old Man Bone." Unfortunately he is so deaf I couldn't ask him any questions.

I trust we can extricate ourselves and our Empire from the present tangle. Our navy has been splendid in mastering the submarine, the magnetic mine and the "Graf Spee." We are all well.

Herbert (Bone)

Japs Concerned Over Report British Troops Are in Dutch E. I.

Tokyo, June 13—(AP)— The Japanese Foreign Office said today it regarded with "extreme gravity" a published report alleging that 2,000 British troops had landed in The Netherlands East Indies after the islands requested protection.

While both Holland's legation and the British Embassy here denied the report, the Foreign Office awaited direct word from its own consular representatives.

The report was published by the large Tokyo newspaper Nichi Nichi in a dispatch from Surabaya, Java, which said a British officer had disclosed accidentally that he was a member of a force sent from Singapore to East Java.

With the government on the alert over the Nichi Nichi dispatch, a second report, also unconfirmed, caused concern in government quarters. This report, received by the Foreign Office, said that a Netherlands naval plane had machine-gunned a Japanese fishing boat off Caspar Island, in the South Pacific just south of the Marshall Islands.

With the Foreign Office said that if this were confirmed a formal protest would be lodged.

An Admiralty spokesman said "similar" incidents had occurred in the past, but that "in view of the present situation they are more important now."

Rumor Denied

London—(CP)—The Netherlands Government in London today denied a rumor that British troops have landed in The Netherlands East Indies.

Mixed With Threats.

Deputy Hussein Djahid Yalchin wrote in the Istanbul newspaper Yeni Sabah that "the reassurance mixed with veiled threats given by Italy to certain states which might side with the Allies and given in belief the states in question would abandon Britain and France are valueless."

He added: "It is superfluous to state that both Germany and Italy have so often misused assurances that it is no longer is possible to put any faith in them."

Yalchin, who is one of Turkey's leading figures, said that "on the contrary they convey the impression of a new trap of chicanery."

"The example of Albania is striking evidence to say nothing of the example already given by Hitler," he continued.

"Italy is waiting her time giving such assurances and it is impossible to suppose that the countries to which they are addressed will either depart from the policy they have adopted or default on engagements taken."

The Istanbul newspaper Akshan said "we have before our eyes the ruins of countries which have fallen for such assurances."

Awaiting Events.

Official circles said that the government is awaiting events in the eastern Mediterranean before taking action. If that area remains quiet—which some expect Turkey will regard as the main outside of the active fighting indefinitely, it was said. But, these quarters added, outbreak of the conflict in the eastern Mediterranean would bring Turkey into the war immediately.

In the meantime, it was said in diplomatic quarters, is satisfactory to Britain and France.

Turkey also is watching Russia closely for she feels she cannot go to the active aid of the Allies if she has a hostile Russia at her back—and she is not required to take action under her treaty with the Allies which might lead her into conflict with Russia.

Russia's attitude remained a mystery here. Some observers expressed belief that today's press attack on Italy might mean that Moscow had drawn Ankara a sign that Russia would not regard Turkey's entry into the war beside the Allies as inimical to the Soviet Union.

Butter Prices Ease On Higher Receipts

Toronto, June 13—Prevailing dull trading, coupled with the seasonal increase in receipts, depressed butter prices during yesterday's session on the Toronto open produce market. Eggs remained firm.

With buying for current needs spotty and storing operations lagging far behind former years, the butter market lifted only from the first grade Ontario product sold in the range of 28 1-2c to 29 1-2c per pound.

Keen demand for the generally light receipts kept the egg market firm. Grade C, however, did not share in the improvement, as in other grades. Prices maintained previous levels in line with reports with Government inspected shipments moving at 1-3c per dozen premium.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, June 13—(CP)— Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

The Canadian section was quiet. Gold and Dominion gained a fraction with the rest unchanged.

Giving ground in the share list were Gulf Oil, Goodrich, Goodyear, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Standard Brands, Westinghouse, General Electric, Western Union, Standard Oil of N.J., and Goodyear.

Livestock

Toronto, June 13 (CP)— Cattle sales were too few to establish prices up to noon today on the Toronto livestock market, today. Veal calves were steady. Dressedweight yesterday was steady to 10 cents higher. Sheep and lambs were steady. Hogs closed steady to 10 cents higher, Sheep and lambs were steady. Hogs closed over from Wednesday was 100 cents. COUNTER-ATTACK

Counter-Offensive Not Yet

A big French counter-offensive is not yet possible although some gains have been made by small counter-attacks, it was declared. But these were reported to have driven the Germans back five miles from the northern suburbs of Paris, in the region of Beaumont-sur-Oise, 15 miles from the centre of the capital and 30 from its centre.

Emphasize Bravery

The spokesman emphasized the bravery with the French have been under from the Germans' superiority in numbers and equipment, especially in bombers and reconnaissance planes. He said the French government, and relayed to the people:

"We do not want to be battled in Paris itself," he said, explaining that the battle for Paris's forces would move back rather than risk destruction of the city. Paris, however, he asserted, would be responsible for instructing the enemy.

No Official Renewal

He added that there would be no official renewal of the Paris population, although thousands had left on their own accord, that the public services, such as gas, light, water and police, are still functioning in the city.

Premier Reynaud, in a message to President Roosevelt, made public at Tours, pledged an undying fight to be carried on by the French from the last corner of France, or from North Africa or other French overseas possessions in America.

French Planes Active

French planes, meanwhile, striving to disrupt the German rearguard, sources of supply and lines of communication, bombed Saarbrucken, Neustadt, Frankford in western Germany.

The French counter-attack in the Beaumont area has been successful in succeeding in stopping the German advance in only one sector of the battle-front south of Paris, French spokesmen declared. That area, below the Seine, which the Germans had attempted to use in an attempt to swing behind the city.

Counter-Attack Success

German penetration to Pacy-Sur-Eure, 45 miles from Paris, was announced yesterday by the French High Command.

The German thrust had sought to go around the city to the south in strong force, while a second drive, in another column pressing on Meaux, some 20 miles northeast of Paris on the Marne.

Further down the Seine the Germans had gained the towns of Pont De L'Arche and Mantes, about 30 miles northwest of Paris, but the Germans in the Seine Valley apparently hoped to cut off Havre off from other channel ports.

The battle line before Paris was split roughly into three parts, with the Seine on the west up through the Beaumont area, to the Marne, hilly forests and the Senlis region on the north, and the Marne to Chateau-Thierry, Vahlis, thence south to Chateau Thierry on the Marne.

The line in the Beaumont region were said to be the closest to Paris, 30 miles as the crow flies.

The French said that the eastern wing of the enemy advance, driving through the Reims region, thence northeast to Juniville to pass Rethel, was meeting with stiff resistance where it joins the Maginot line.

The situation of Reims was now fluid. It was reported that the Germans might be in possession of at least part of the city since fighting is in progress on the Reims highway into the south.

Fighting has developed over night on the French front when the defenders in the Reims region were compelled to fall back eight miles from Rethel south of Juniville in the Aisne region, north of Reims where it was said the Germans appeared to be trying to get behind the Maginot line.

Monmedy, anchor of the Maginot line, is 45 miles east of Reitel.

The German thrust has been aided by more fresh troops into the battle of France, with their strength now estimated at 150 divisions, the British War Ministry spokesman said. This would be an approximate total of 800,000 troops.)

The spokesman said the German force had suffered heavy losses as a result of counter-attacks by fresh and rested units and repeated bombardment by our aviation. Certain of our aerial squadrons have made 4 trips to the battle in the course of a day."

The Air Ministry announced last night that British and French bombers had "operated day and night on the back areas of the enemy, including the Reims region and his manoeuvres.

"Numerous convoys, marshalling yards and places of troop concentration behind the battle area have been attacked by bombs," said a communique, adding that "in addition our heavy bombers have penetrated much more deeply into enemy territory and have attacked numerous concentrations of military objectives, factories and railways."

MINEFIELD LAID

porting the mine sweepers and the Italian squadrons seeking to prevent the landing.

Elsewhere there was little Italian activity beyond an odd bombing raid where the largest number of victims were civilians in suburbs of Valletta, capital.

The Allies, however, continued their relentless striking that plagued Turin, in northern Italy, where Rome radio claimed a number of casualties among civilians.

The military governor of Paris issued a proclamation declaring it "open city" (one free from military operations) indicating the high command acknowledged last night had been reached by the invaders.

He listed the Inner Seine and the Beaumont area as the most critical as the two most delicate thrust against the Paris defences, especially the latter, saying the Germans appeared to be making an attempt to turn the Maginot Line.

Monimedy, western anchor of the Maginot Line, is 45 miles east of Reims.

Italians Have Not Attacked

The British said the spokesman, have not yet attacked France, and that there had been no naval action involving Italy.

The German troops fought before the suburbs, the military Governor declared. Paris, he added, was meaning, French spokesmen said, that the decision to declare it open to defended.

The action was taken in order to avoid destruction of the beautiful city and its historic buildings and boulevards, he declared, in one from which military objectives, defence works, troops and the like have been removed. Their removal is designed to relieve the enemy of the necessity of fighting to reach the city and prompt him therefore to spare it. In actual practice it does not always work as the Germans on frequent occasions both in Belgium and Holland bombed towns and villages with no more military value than that on the first available neutral ship.

Notices Posted

The Military Governor, Gen. Pierre Sterling, left Paris to take charge of operations after posting notices in public that the capital would be defended, and then left in charge.

Both the notices went up this morning, by powerfully-equipped German legions were pressing the capital from the west, north and east, with the defenders backed practically into the suburbs.

The nearest forces at one time were only 30 miles to the north, only 12 miles from the northern suburbs.

This morning's High Command communique, although stating that the battle for the capital continued with "undiminished intensity," said the situation had changed but little overnight. It said German pressure was continuing "in particular" on both sides of the capital.

Heavy Territic Losses

The Germans surged forward, with "heavy losses," however, the losses nearly every foot of the way, from the west along the Seine, from the north along the Oise and the Aurez valleys, and from the east along the Marne.

According to the French High Command in Paris, regions in the centre yesterday were only 40 miles from the heart of Paris, which is the Forest of Compiegne at Beaumont where they were driven back today.

The next nearest invading army was 45 miles out that along the Marne, scene of two great struggles in the First Great War, in 1914 and 1918, in addition to the latest defeats.

Paris Abandoned

The French announced that the Germans had crossed the Marne with the French falling back slightly, but not far, from Chateau-Thierry. Meaux is 20 miles northeast of the centre of Paris, only about 15 miles from some of the outside suburbs.

45 Miles Away on West

The third German force was said to be 45 miles away on the west, about 46 miles west of Paris. There the High Command disclosed that west, the High Command disclosed the Germans were held.

In addition to these three main drives, the Germans were engaged in a number of important thrusts.

One was a drive by part of the German forces from the wing northwest toward Caudebec, about 30 miles from the important French port of Havre.

The second was a great battle for the Seine crossings at Vernon, virtually levelled in the last war, about 40 miles northeast of Paris. There the Germans rushed into the town an entire mechanized army corps of 400 tanks and armoured cars. The French last night said they still held the city.

Communications Bombed

To the northeast of Reims, said the High Command communique, "information from numerous prisoners indicates that the enemy has suffered very heavy losses as a result of continuous attacks by our motorized units and repeated bombardment by our aviation. Certain of our aerial squadrons have made four trips to the battle in the course of a day."

The Air Ministry announced last night that British and French bombers had "operated day and night on the back areas of the enemy, including the Reims region and his manoeuvres.

"Numerous convoys, marshalling yards and places of troop concentration behind the battle area have been attacked by bombs," said a communique, adding that "in addition our heavy bombers have penetrated much more deeply into enemy territory and have attacked numerous concentrations of military objectives, factories and railways."

EGYPT PLEDGES

Italian Minister Leaves

The Italian Minister to Egypt, Serafino Mazzolini, and his staff are leaving for Rome on the Yugoslav on the first available neutral ship.

Since the alliance is purely defensive the country does not intend to send an expeditionary force with the British if Italy or other Italian colonies are invaded, but means to protect herself from attack, a spokesman said.

Alexandria's picturesque thousands of barefoot, white-gowned natives watched the skies apprehensively today, anxiously awaiting the enemy bombers after the first raid warning of the war.

When raiders appeared last night and sirens wailed the people ran excitedly to their homes and air raid shelters, clearing the streets almost instantly. No bombs were dropped, and the "all clear" signal came 15 minutes later.

Only Matter of Days

King Farouk and Queen Farida arrived at Taaeltin Palace shortly before the warning was sounded.

After parliament's vote yesterday to give "all possible aid" to the Allies, foreign observers considered Egypt's entry into the war a matter of days only.

The government has requisitioned ships for war purposes.

Allied naval squadrons blocking the Suez Canal have seized an unidentified number of Italian ships.

Mexico to Throw Out Nazi Propaganda Chief

Mexico City, June 13 —(AP)— Government circles expected the Mexican Interior Ministry to announce officially today that Arthur Dietrich, brother of Adolf Hitler's press chief, Otto Dietrich, propaganda chief of Nazi propaganda in Mexico, had been asked to leave the country.

They said the request was made to the German legation by the Foreign Minister yesterday and that Dietrich's expulsion would be unlikely because of United States interest in the case.

These sources said the action was taken after a painstaking investigation, into Dietrich's activities in which the United States government was said informed, allegedly had revealed that:

1. Dietrich's office served as a relay point for communications from Berlin to German ships at sea and to German agents in North and America on nations.

2. Dietrich organized and directed from his office here, a number of agents in the United States.

3. Dietrich's office was headquarters of a propaganda system which operated in Mexico and other countries.

The Nazi agent had, through his propaganda and "other activities," sought to influence Mexican internal politics, observers said.

Dietrich, who is about 40, married into a resident of Mexico off and on for almost 16 years, declined to confirm or deny the expulsion order when reached at home early this morning. "We are going to see," was his only comment.

Lieut. W. Willson Reported Missing

Toronto, June 13—(CP)—Lieut. Wm. Arthur A. Willson, R., formerly of the Norfolk Regiment now serving with the Royal Canadian Regiment in northern France, was reported missing in the battle of Dunkirk, it was yesterday by his father, Wallace A. Willson.

Lieut. Willson went to London early in 1939 after his marriage to Miss Marion Wilks, Galt, Ont., where his father's training course and at the outbreak of war was attached to the Scots Guards. Later he was seconded to the Norfolks.

He is a grandson of Sir John Willson, former Editor-in-Chief of the Toronto Globe and Canadian correspondent for The Times of London. His father is also an advertising executive, was an overseas correspondent for The Canadian Press in the First Great War.

House Leaders Criticize Hepburn

Ottawa, June 13 (CP).—A warning by Premier Hepburn of Ontario that Nazi sympathizers in the United States might invade Canada was "merely spreading rumors and is not conducive to the public peace," Justice Minister Lapointe said in the House of Commons yesterday.

It was, he added with some heat, "a sample of the kind of co-operation we are receiving in certain quarters." If the Ontario Provincial Police had such information, it was their duty to report it to the R. C. M. P. instead of making "a splash in the press".

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police had been for a long time in direct communication with the United States Secret Service and Police and "know as far as it is possible to know, what is going on," the Justice said. Every necessary safeguard was being established.

Conservative opposition found an extract from a newspaper report published in Toronto saying Nazis were armed and ready to attack Canada from the United States and Premier Hepburn received the word from Hitler.

"This is merely spreading rumors and is not conducive to the public good nor to efficient prosecution of the war," Mr. Lapointe said.

SLAGHT DEMANDS DEATH PENALTY FOR ESPIONAGE

Move on to "Get Tough" With Those Trying to Obstruct Canada's War Effort

LOOK FOR NO MERCY

Ottawa, June 13—(CP)—A move to "get tough" with those likely to try obstructing Canada's war in-dustry effectiveness was on foot in the House of Commons today.

The death penalty for sabotage, espionage and fifth-column activities was the proper way to "get tough" with such people, in language they could understand, Arthur Slaght (Lib, Parry Sound) suggested.

Mr. Slaght demanded the death penalty for enemy actions within Canada and urged that aliens intending to enter Canada for subversive purposes be told that their adventure will end "at the end of a rope."

(Last May 22, the British House of Commons imposed the death penalty for "treachery" and also for certain grave cases of espionage and sabotage. Action in the enemy is aided and British military operations hampered.)

Include Everyone

"We should make it possible to inflict the death penalty upon every person, whether citizen or alien, a naturalized alien or a Canadian-born British subject who betrays them there would be never one—who is caught and convicted of any such offence against the King and country," Mr. Slaght declared.

"Sabotage, espionage and fifth column activities reek with treachery. We are in danger from the vilest form of crime which can be committed by mortal man today.

"Let the Parliament of Canada take such steps as may be necessary in creating this death penalty against any of these hidden, subversive activities that are within our bosom today, and let us put the fear of God into them. Otherwise we can hope to put the fear of God into cowardly, treacherous criminal saboteurs. Let us make it known to criminally minded people that we are ready and that we can look for no mercy.

"If any evil-minded enemy aliens contemplate trips to Canada for the purpose of creating in this country shall use our best efforts to see that they are arrested and at the end of a rope."

Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con., Toronto-Parkdale) said if the government that it had "barely scratched the surface" in Ontario in the way of rounding up aliens. He added there were "hundreds" of them who were waiting the moment to strike.

Provincial authorities had power to act when a crime had been committed but under Defence of Canada Regulations, Provincial authorities could act on suspicion. Both parties are now behind Federal authorities.

PREMIER READS LAST MESSAGE OF DEAD MINISTER

"In the Faith We Will Fight On, We Will Resist, We Will Endure, We Will Take Offensive and We Will Win"

TRIBUTE IS PAID

Ottawa, June 13 (CP)—From the busy halls of parliament silent, where and former, Wednesday carried the body of Hon. Norman Rogers after a brief and simple funeral service.

On Monday Mr. Rogers left the same scene of his labor as Minister of National Defence on a journey which ended in his death in an aeroplane crash pea- Newtonville, Ont., Wednesday he remained, again on the journey which ends in the grave.

At the end of the funeral service, conducted by Rev. Stuart Irvine of the Baptist Church and Bishop H. G. Wells, principal Protestant chaplain of the armed forces, Prime Minister Mackenzie King stepped to the rostrum and delivered the last message from the dead minister.

"In the faith we will fight on, we will resist, we will endure, we will take the offensive and we will win" were the words of the message, Mr. King repeated.

Found on Pad

Mr. King explained they were found on a pad on Mr. Rogers' desk at the Newtonville airport after the plane left on his fatal Monday trip to speak in Toronto. Though not dated they were obviously the concluding words of the speech Mr. Rogers was to have delivered, evidently expressed of a thought which was in his mind.

Dark clouds hung overhead as the funeral cortege left from the steps of the army and air force moved off from the Peacetower on Parliament Hill for the Union Station.

Mr. Rogers' two boys, Roderick and Lawrence, walked behind the coffin, clad in the uniforms of officers and wearing the black ties of mourning.

Ahead marched long columns of the Canadian troops specially selected for battle under Mr. Rogers' portfolio, and behind them members of cabinet ministers, foreign diplomatic representatives and members of senators. Hon. R. J. Manion, former Conservative leader, also attended the service.

Body Lay in State

The funeral service was the first ever held in the parliament building. Members of the Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir, died last month in Bute, Scotland, as the Senate Chamber but was taken to it immediately after his death.

Following a private service at the undertaking parlors the body was brought to the buildings for a short service noon and placed at the end of the floor of the House of Commons door of the old library, the one relic of the 1916 conflagration which left the rest of the family there were no flowers. Nothing detracted from the color provided by the huge Union Jack which covered the coffin.

Cabinet ministers, members, high ranking officers of the armed services, senior civil servants and diplomats filled nearby corridors. The Rogers family, father and mother, Mrs. Rogers and her two sons, stood in the library doorway.

Pall Bearers

Pall-bearers were the senior officers of the three services. The pall bearer party was a composite one, made up of men from all three services.

Red-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Police took the horses which hauled the, body to the station on a gun carriage.

The body will be cremated in Montreal before Mr. Rogers' native Amherst, N.S.

Body Cremated

Montreal, June 13—(CP)—A casket containing the body of Federal Minister Norman Rogers reached here Wednesday from Ottawa and was escorted from the Park Avenue station to the crematorium at Mount Royal cemetery.

The casket was accompanied to Montreal by Mr. Rogers' three brothers and other relatives. The ashes will be taken to the Minister's native Amherst, N.S., for burial.

and fighting under French orders," he said.

Apparently the Germans have "scraped all their available forces" in the battle for Paris which had been declared an open city, it was added.

"There seems no doubt that the German forces have thrown their tanks," these circles said, "but they have no tanks reports of their having been used yet."

Reynaud's visit was one of the B.E.F. divisions were surrounded at St. Valery, it was said, while the British rallied their forces on the French below the Somme. The forces of the French Army, with only partial success to reduce the German forces in the Abbeville area.

South of the Seine, fresh British troops recently arrived from the United Kingdom were said to have taken their place in the line with their French comrades.

Their bearing and discipline were declared to be such as to maintain the morale of the Allied troops who have been fighting day and night to stem the German advance.

SHANNONVILLE BEATS FOXBORO IN LOOP OPENER

Wet Grounds Handicap Efforts of Both Teams and Hurlers Unable to Control Ball

SCORE IS 5-4

Minus the traditional opening ceremonies which usually start off the baseball season, the fourth Hastings League got under way for its eighth consecutive season Wednesday evening at Shannonville when the Foxboro lads visited the eastern village and cadie-home on the small end of a close 5-4 score.

Wet grounds slowed the game up considerably as the pitchers could not control the ball and many walks resulted with practically all the scoring resulting after walks were issued to put men on the runways.

Foxboro lads were held off the score sheet for the first two frames but, in the second for the two winners, keeping things well in hand. In the third however four hits served in Foxboro's first tally to cut down the three-run margin which the homesters had built up in the first and second innings. In the fifth the Foxboro lads went one ahead as they scored three runs on a walk, an error and a hit by Walt and Keswick. Shannonville won the game in their half however as hits by Hamilton and Cook and an error by the first sacker accounted for the runs to give the homesters one ahead.

The Foxboro lads were held to two small singles by Juby who struck out nine batters and walked six. Keswick on the mound for the losers, gave up three hits, one a double by Hill, struck out six and walked five.

The line-ups: Foxboro—Spencer, c.; N. Cook, rf.; Wait, lf.; Keswick, p.; Guay, ss.; Tummon, 1b; Peacock, 2b; Jamieson, cf.; Bird, 3b; and Faulkner, 2b.

Shannonville—Cook, 2b; Reid, 3b; Cook, ss.; Barberstock, 1b; Juby, p.; Hamilton, c.; Maracle, l.f.; Smith, Houston, c.; Maracle, r.f.; and Wannamaker, c.f.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Briet, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 12 (AP)— The war has United States college football in the air. Most of them have next fall's football tickets printed, but are afraid to distribute them until they know if the tax is going to be upped.... The Wolves out in St. Louis have hired no pop bottles at umpires recently. One concessionaire was seen ordered to serve refreshments in paper cups only.

Ivan Upson, Manager of an Arkansas (Texas) team, hitting for five balls to his infielders.... One fly went directly back of Ivan's head, passing over the park and one bird dropped—stone dead.

Sport writers travelling with the Tigers credit Dick Bartell, one of the game's best boller guys, with making the team a combined unit.... Papers around the country are blasting Jack Dempsey's proposed bout with Cowboy Lulinetti, the wrestler, in Atlanta, say it would add exactly nothing to Dempsey's prestige.

Mrs. George Casler, wife of the Athletics' pitcher, was much perturbed over George's failure to stop going.... So when she came over from California last week she brought George one of the other headaches were the cure for — when the Santa Anita Handicap.... P.S.: Caster lost his next start.

Curt Davis, Medwick of Cards Go to Brooklyn Dodgers For Four Players, Bundle of Cash

Dodgers Should Now Have Enough Strength to Win National League Pennant

OUT IN FRONT

Boston Two Full Games Ahead of Indians by Two Straight Wins Over Indians

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Brooklyn Dodgers who already had everything else, now have Joe Medwick. And if they don't have the National League pennant cinched October 1 it will be because there's no water in the Gowanus canal or money in the Brooklyn Trust Company.

The flatbushers are in first place and it's no fluke. They have won nine of their last 13 games and never have been worse than second since the day the season opened.

No great analysis is needed to figure where a club that is strong will go with the addition of the league's outstanding outfielder, who never has hit less than .300 and a pitcher who won 22 games just last season.

Curt Davis, whom the Dodgers obtained yesterday from St. Louis along with Medwick, for a player and cash, may prove as of great value as Medwick. The Cubs were on the verge of a pitching shortage and last night at Pittsburgh relegated Claude Passeau, Manistee as a front-rank starter.

He gave up more hits but hit one batter for three Pittsburgh runs without getting a ticket from Umpire Stewart. Then Whitlow Wyatt took charge and allowed only five hits for the remainder of the game and the Dodgers ultimately triumphed 5-4.

Brooklyn Out in Front

This victory was enough to keep Brooklyn out in front of Cincinnati Reds, who edged out Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 in another night game, Paul Derringer gave up eight hits in the route trip he collected, but he was careful in the pinches.

After routing Bob Feller on Tuesday, Boston's Sox ran yesterday's double-header with Cleveland's league's leading pitcher, with a six-run eighth inning that brought victory 9-5. The sweep of the two-game series put Boston two full games ahead of the Indians and a comfortable distance in front of the second place Detroit Tigers, beaten by the New York Yankees 7-5.

Like the Red Sox, the Yankees came from behind to win. They got their two freshest capables when Charley Keller slashed a three-run homer in the seventh inning.

Philadelphia Athletics took a strange test from Chicago White Sox 3-2. The A's were held to three hits by Thornton Lee, but two of these were home runs by Sam Chapman and Sam Chapman. Washington Senators edged out St. Louis Browns 1-0 on the six-hit pitching of Ken Chase.

TORONTO LEAFS DROP 2 GAMES TO SYRACUSE CHIEFS

Leafs Kick in With Nine Errors in the Two Contests

ROCHESTER WINS

Hitters Continue Regular Pace From Jersey City Closing Fast

By the Associated Press

The old argument as to whether hitting or pitching is more important to a ball club may be settled to a certain extent this season in the International League's race between Rochester Red Wings and Jersey City Giants.

While neither team is totally devoid of strength in any department, it is obviously sickwort that is keeping the Red Wings on the end mound work that keeps the Little Giants close behind.

Red Wing hitters continued at their regular pace through last night's games as Rochester hammered out a 10-4 victory over the Syracuse Chieftains' Orioles for its fourth straight victory and Jersey City conquered Buffalo 1-0 to make it seven triumphs in the last eight starts.

Herschel Lyons went the route for the Red Wings and gained his seventh triumph in the season, but he gave up 11 hits. He won mainly because his teammates concentrated their attack on Pitcher Brandch's six-hit hurling in the second ended in a 3-3 tie after six innings, being called to allow the Bears to catch a train.

Art Jorgens and Ted Kleinhans pitched Syracuse to a double victory over Toronto Leafs, 7-3, and 9-6, with the aid of four errors by the losers. Jones relieved Jack Tising with none out in the first inning and gave up only five hits in the frames. Kleinhans finished with a four-hit shutout. Gene Hasson made three hits for the Chiefs in the opener and Goody Rosen belted three in the nightcap.

UPTOWN JUNIORS WIN 3 IN ROW IN SOFTBALL LEAGUE

Red Townsend's Squad Scores Five in Eighth Frame to Down Point Anne 10-8

HOOK HURLS WELL

Winning Pitcher Strikes Out Two in Ninth to Prevent Rally

Rallying to score five runs in the eighth inning the Uptown Juniors remained undefeated in the City Softball League by downing the Point Anne Cementmen 10 to 8 at Coleman Flats last evening. It was the Juniors' third consecutive league victory in as many starts.

Interspersing lonely hits with the loose playing of the Cementmen in the eighth, Red Townsend's kids capitalized on the fullest measure on their chances and pulled the game out of the fire in a belated last inning rally. After Bunky Gaulin's visitors had scored three runs in the initial frame, the Uptowns came back with four in the third, but Bill Burwash, the Juniors in the fourth gave the Cementmen three more in the fourth. It was after Point Anne had scored one in the seventh and eighth that the Uptowns rallied to push five across and cinch the piece.

The game developed into a sterling pitcher's battle with Steve Hook besting Ding Luffman, as the latter steadier ball as the game progressed and struck out the last two batters to face him in the ninth inning. The Uptown's shortstop, hit for the circuit in the fifth and missed a duplication in the eighth by inches. The latter was wet making under-footing treacherous on the defensive. The Juniors out-hit the losers 11 to 8.

Sword, with a homer and single, Mansfield and Yarrow were the strong Juniors batsmen, while Luffman was the only Point Anne batter to get more than one hit off Hook's deliveries. Sook 2 struck out eight and walked six, while Luffman whitted three and passed two. Ding's defensive leading Uptowns were Shell here Friday as Corbys journey to Picton.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Calling

If present tentative plans already in the making reach the stage of realization, Belleville sport fans may see a softball team composed of professional baseball players, meet a local nine here next month. We wish to point out that the matter is very much in the stage of tentative approach at the present, but the idea is afloat as to stage the game in aid of the Red Cross. Other centres throughout Canada are staging sporting events to help Canada's war efforts and it was with this thought in mind that the Belleville Softball Association quickly tackled the matter of bringing "Dit" Clapper and his professional softball team to Belleville for a game with all receipts to go to the Red Cross. Incidentally the Ladies' Memorials Softball League is working on a similar plan, whereby all can help in the present conflict to aid Canada's war effort. We hope to have more definite news on these proposals before the end of the week.

A clipping from the Sudbury Star reports the week of Keith "Letty" Weeks, in the following comment recently:

Keith Letty working only one and one-third innings, the former Belleville pitcher, Keith (Letty) Weeks, showed possibe the best relief mound. Unedifying with an easy delivery, he fanned two Cub swatsmen in the two innings and extricated the Buzzers from a tough spot by retiring Cub Dan Litzinger in the eighth frame, after Johnson delivered a wild streak across the runways."

Just whether or not the Johnson referred to as "Bad Johnson" we are not in a position to relate, but we do know that the former Belleville infielder was hurling intermittently in the north league season. Weeks was recently given his release from the Buzzers organization and seems to have made a name for himself in northern baseball circles. Here's another case of a Belleville athlete making good on far-away fields.

With the untimely death of the Hon. Norman McLeod Rogers, the Dominion sports editor, William Walshe, published the following eulogy, which we take along in reverence. Bill says:

"The story, sad to relate, can be told now with the death of Hon. Norman Rogers in the plane crash at Montreal Wednesday.

"Last summer when Hoot Gibson, famous movie cowboy, had his children from a submerged car after it plunged over a bank into the Ausable River, Mr. Rogers wrote to this department including a tear jerking bill in the interest of the salvage of the wrecked car. There was not any suggestion or request for publicity. Just the gift of a whole-hearted, generous man who applied to his many duties, took time off to think of others.

"Hoot Gibson used his money to good advantage and in his humble way, sent a letter of thanks to his benefactor.

"That is only one little sample of the man the Empire lost.

"Kingston sports organizations, especially the clubs catering to young boys, could always count on Mr. Rogers' help. He was among every year for boys' baseball, for the C.I.A.U. was and almost every project that was to help clean athletics or make life a little better for others, and his generous acts were not all for political purposes.

"Last summer on a sweltering afternoon Marquis Park was officially opened as a playground for Kingston's underprivileged. And man Rogers was among those present, not for a brief visit and a general hello but for the full hot afternoon. He joined in the work of conducting the games, of events and took a keen delight in the success. Greatest was the pleasure the boy and girl with the most freckles.

"Thousands of words will be written about Hon. Norman Rogers, about his government achievements, his school work, war work and public service, but his efforts to help Kingston boys is written indelibly on the hearts of the young lads, and the older ones.

"One of his many efforts to help Kingston sports was at the Calcarsqui Canoe Club. He helped get the grounds, granted permission for other favors and took a keen interest in the progress of the organization.

"The Empire has lost a leader but Kingston has lost a kind-hearted friend.

Letters From the Troops

Following are letters of appreciation from members of the C.A.S.F. for parcels sent by Mrs. Grills and members of the Women's Institute here:

June 1, 1940

Dear Mrs. Grills:—

I had a letter from my husband Pte. H. Crossen and he asked me to drop you a line or whom else it may concern and thank them of you for the two nice pairs of socks he received. There was one pair of brown ones and a pair of grey ones and he was real pleased with them and said many many thanks. He said he hoped and trusted that he would be spared to return home and thank you himself for all.

So may we remain,

Yours very truly,
Mrs. H. Crossen.

March 11, 1940

Dear Alida and the Ladies of the Institute:—

I just received your parcel and believe me I was sure glad to get it. There are two things a soldier loves to get, that is parcels and mail from Canada, and this day and believe me the parcels and letters come first.

You would realize the sight it is when any of us boys get parcels for everybody crowds around to see what the other fellow has and if it is anything to be shared it goes the rounds. We are all doing fine, drilling every day and once a week we have sports, so take it all around we are getting used pretty good. I guess there is not much more to tell only it is spring time in England. We are on daylight saving time here.

Alida, once more I want to thank you and all the ladies of the Institute for your kindness for it is a wonderful thing for a soldier to know he has friends.

I remain,
Pte. C. L. MacDonald

May 1, 1940

Dear Friends:—

Just a line to thank you for sending me that parcel which I got today. I was thankful to get it. I got a letter from Mrs. Claude Clark too so you see I have to answer it also. Well Mrs. Grills I am more than glad that you people do not forget us here in England. It is a pleasure to hear the news from Canada as we do not get any news from there only by the people writing and getting Canadian papers and we get a lot of them here. We are going out in the trenches for three days I hear, I would not say for sure. I hope not because I want a week-end pass.

Well I hope you receive this letter all right and please write and let me know if you do. There is finds you well as it leaves me, this is my address:

Pte. Henry Rogers No. 48-10

Following is a letter received by William Holmes from his grandson Lieut. Clifford Holmes of the Hastings & and Prince Edward Regiment in Aldershot.

Lieut. Holmes has since returned to Canada and is with the H. & P. E. Regiment at Picton.

Aldershot, England,
May 16, 1940

I expect that you have seen some of the letters that I have sent to the folks so that it will be rather too much like repitition to tell of all our doings but I might mention a few. We have very pleasant barracks here in Aldershot.

Paris Now Half-Empty Shell As Civilians Stream From City

(By Alice Maxwell Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Paris, June 12 (AP)—"Day Paree" was a half-empty shell today, quiet itself as the sound of battle reached its streets.

Instead of the fashionable tourists and other customers usually arriving at this time of year to patronize world-famed dressmakers and millinery, refugees were arriving in droves from battle-torn northern France.

The dressmakers themselves had packed up and left. The government was gone and all but one of the newspapers were gone. Subway trains were running, but in restricted numbers. Taxis were rare. Some food shops were open, but most closed.

Automobiles streamed out of Paris packed with civilians. Others wishing to leave hoped for restoration of train service. Poorer people walked. Most people who had transportation of any sort had gone.

Electricity, water and gas were still available, but not much light burned in the streets at night.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was trying to work his cigar lighter with no luck and experimenting with a hairpin. Finally he said, "Benny, you're full of talk about free speech, Willyum, but where is it, just as you find it, and how do you find it."

I had an idea it was still in a flourishing condition as far as this country is concerned, at least, and so. Of course abolutely free and unfettered free speech might not be such a blessing in every single purpose. When civilization reaches the stage where everybody can say everybody else just what they think of them to their face and with the general temtation to indulge in this sport will probably be the end of speech? he said, and ma said, Mr. Gibbon foretold it.

I'm afraid I dont know her, pop said, and ma said, I ever you don't know because I wish I'd never heard of her too. She's the chairlady of the Dawters of Cleopatters, this afternoon she stood up in all her glory to nominate my friend Mrs. Russell Prentice as her choice to be the new president of the chapter, and every time I tried to calmly interrupt to nominate Mrs. Jim Gibbon she insulted me and wasn't through yet and kept on extolling the virtues of Mrs. Prentice to the point of positive embarrassment although I knew very well, and so did everybody else, that Mrs. Van Dessen is the only logical candidate, for why did she have to hardly go and on and on? ma said.

Because what she was exercising her right to free speech, pop said, and ma said, Dont talk nonsense, what she was really doing was keeping me from exercising the right of free speech, because free speech consists in speaking up for your friends and not for Mrs. Vanessen, and you dont need to laugh behind that paper, either.

Meaning pop, who he kept on warplanes based in Egypt renewed their attack on objectives in Italian Libya, the German feinted at Britain with a series of flights over the southeast coast during the night and early today. No bombs were dropped and anti-aircraft defences drove the invaders off, it was announced.

Developments in the Mediterranean theatre of war included:

Wave after wave of British Blenheim bombers swept over the Italian naval base at Tobruk Harbor, on the Libyan coast, setting a warship afire and damaging two submarines.

The British counted 30 civilians dead and 30 civilians and seven soldiers wounded in the first eight of a series of Italian raids on the naval base at Malta. The Fascist bombers returned again yesterday in two more raids, causing casualties in the working class suburbs of Valetta.

Egypt, under her alliance with Britain, reserved diplomatic relations with Italy.

Need is Urgent

London newspapers stressed the urgency of France's need for aid, insisting that even individual and incompletely equipped divisions be rushed to the continent.

They declared that "by common consent," French requirements take "absolute precedence to the defence of these islands."

"If the enemy is thrust back from the gates of Paris, he has lost the war," the paper said.

"We have to call upon our own workers and appeal to our American friends for haste and yet more urgent haste," the Times said, editorially.

"The great American Republic has two ideals dear to all men, and its ideals is dealy and immediate, and its statesmen are determined to play their own part, not as lukewarm sympathizers, but with the full passion of their ardent spirit and the whole potency of their vast resources, in the universal defence."

BRITAIN SPEEDS REINFORCEMENTS TO AID FRANCE

Troops from Norway as Well as Every Available Man, Rifle and Gun Being Dispatched

PAPERS STRESS SPEED.

London, June 13—(CP)—Great British speed troops, guns and tanks streamed from Channel to France today to give all possible support to the hard-pressed defenders of Paris.

British and Polish soldiers returning from northern Norway after the Allies abandoned the ore-shipping port of Narvik were rushed off to the continent to strengthen resistance to the German advance.

"Every available man, rifle, gun and tank is being sent to the aid of France," the Daily Herald declared. "The War Office is delivering every article of equipment to hasten their dispatch."

The number of reinforcements shipped to the French mainland yesterday was said to run into the thousands.

The troop movements recalled the statement of a military spokesman here this week that "it seemed impossible that 30 divisions can be sent to France. That is being done and if it is done we have won."

Strike at Right Wing

While Royal Air Force bombers struck at the German right wing encircling Paris Wednesday and warplanes based in Egypt renewed their attack on objectives in Italian Libya, the Germans feinted at British with a series of flights over the southeast coast during the night and early today. No bombs were dropped and anti-aircraft defences drove the invaders off, it was announced.

BRITISH TROOPS ARE READY IN EGYPT

While the Egyptian government suddenly sent 5,000 children and aged from the city of Alexandria, the British army of occupation in Egypt continued its preparations for invasion. In these two pictures we see a British anti-tank crew operating their new two-pounder from the special desert carrier that has been evolved for this purpose. BELOW the gun has been unloaded from the carrier and is being placed in position on the ground.

AMERICAN HEROINES OF BLITZKRIEG

Anne Morgan, sister of J. P. Morgan, international financier, is shown here with two of her aides, volunteers of the American friends of France. This group of gallant women have been in the thick of the blitzkrieg since the morning the Germans invaded the Low Countries. Under continuous bombardment the Friends of France evacuated thousands of refugees from Belgian and French villages, spending sleepless nights and eating days. Many of their ambulances were bombed and their drivers are missing, but Miss Morgan and her aides still carry on. At LEFT here is Eva Drexel Dahlgren, of Philadelphia; at RIGHT, Rose Dolan, also of Philadelphia.

Humane Soc. Carrying on Splendid Work—Reports Several Cases of Cruelty Successfully Prosecuted

Fine Progress Reported at Annual Meeting — Many Complaints Investigated and the More Extreme Cases Brought Into Court — Co-operation Received from Gardner, B.C., Dentist, Police, Council, Y.M.C.A. and Press Appreciated

CARRY ON EDUCATION IN SCHOOLS

At the annual meeting of the Society, recently held, Mr. W. H. Reeves, the President, reported a year of great success, and expressed his appreciation of the work done by the committees in developing up the undertakings of the Society and in bringing much needed assistance to the treasury. The tag day and rummage sales helped very materially in this respect and he took this occasion to thank all the ladies who had so generously assisted. During the year Kindly satisfied, during the year the inspector had resigned and that another position, an excellent substitute had been found in Constable Thomas Reeves, who had been engaged to take his place. Several cases of cruelty to animals had been successfully prosecuted, the policy of the organization was however to issue warnings in all but the most extreme cases. Mr. Reeves paid a sincere thanks to Mr. R. C. Donnan, Crown attorney, for his kindly consideration and to Inspector Gardner and the local police constables for their invaluable assistance. In closing Mr. Reeves spoke appreciatively of the cooperation he had received from the officers of the Society during the year.

The Secretary reported that the work of collecting had been made more difficult owing to the fact that a new system of monthly shearing so much of people's time. However the Society had the best satisfactory results were being achieved. One of these was the noticeable reduction in the number of stray cattle found on the city streets. That the public is becoming more humane to the work of the Society is evidenced by the increased number of donations from both individuals as stray and injured animals and to cases of cruelty and neglect. Since the 1st of October fifty-four cats and thirty-four dogs have been destroyed and ten found for a number of cats and dogs have been investigated and complaints made, warnings given in cases of horses being driven while suffering injury by shod or housed. Some of the more extreme cases dealt with recently were as follows:

Cases of Cruelty

Six cows were found to have starved to death on the farm of Mr. Hermon in the northern part of the County, and the remainder in poor stock with a pitiable condition, covered with sores and filth. The windows were out in the barn and shed where the animals were kept, in the midst of manure and filth. The owner and his son were convicted and fined.

A colt that had been tethered in a ditch where it had been unable to from a cart, was found on all four feet had apparently been burned off by a prairie fire and the colt could not stand up.

At December a horse was being worked while suffering from a disease which causes incurable lameness. The animal was ordered relieved from work.

A horse with a broken leg was being worked by a man at Point Anne. He was ordered to have it destroyed and the owner prosecuted. The owner of the horse was away on business who was convicted and fined two years ago for having barbed wire on his farm.

A farmer on the Campbellford road was found to be working a horse whose leg was in bad condition. The collar on them cut with the ankle was lying flat so that it walked on its fetlock joint which was raw and had a blood print. A summons was issued to the owner but the case has not yet come on in court.

Two cows belonging to a farmer east of Belleville started to death. A summons was issued and the owner subsequently pleaded guilty.

The financing of the Society has been carried through during the year by collection of membership fees, a tag day, rummage sales and donations from interested friends of various amounts from one to one hundred dollars.

Humane Education in Schools

During the year Humane Education and Junior Humane Societies have been installed in the public schools and the Prince of Wales Public School under the direction of Mrs. Branscombe. Much interest has been exhibited by the children and the teachers have given every assistance. During the year it was that the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was obliged through lack of funds to suspend publication of Animal Life, a subscription to Our Dumb Animals, the publication of the Canadian Humane Education Society, has been taken out for each school, and other literature supplied.

On Friday, May 17th, the annual meeting of the Dominion of Branches of the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was held and our Constable, Mr. Thos. Thorne, attended the meeting and was able to visit the shelter of the Toronto Humane Society where he was shown much that was interesting and instructive.

The Annual Meeting of the Ontario S.P.C.A. was held on June 7th and 8th in Toronto, but, unfortunately the Belleville Branch was not able to have delegates present.

It is interesting to note that in England the year's annual report of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to be greatly increased. Large sums of money had been sent to England to alleviate the suffering of animals caused by the war. In London and other cities shelters and clinics had been set up to look after animals in air raids and an additional force of officers engaged for this work. At the outbreak of war "arrangements for the care of London school children" was undertaken and, considering a small crocodile, was cleared. A register has also been taken of every animal in the country.

Appreciate Co-operation

During the past year as previously the Society has enjoyed the greatest co-operation from the City Council, the Police Department, the Y.M.C.A. and the Press. The Society is grateful to the Provincial Police without whose help it would be impossible to visit the remote parts of the County where some of the worst cases of cruelty and neglect are found. Gratitude is also due to the Society for the generous assistance there could be no Society and to the President, Mr. W. H. Reeves, who has been generously of his time, and to all officers and committees who had the Mist. Josephine Tickell, the Treasurer, reported a cash balance of $174.46.

Officers

The following officers were elected: Honorary President, Dr. R. W. Tennent; Hon. Vice-Presidents, Mrs. F. H. Wills; President, Mr. W. H. Reeves; Vice-Pres., Mrs. A. E. Shaw, Coll. Mrs. R. W. Tennent, Mrs. Bruce Hall, Mrs. Harold Mac-Bridge, Miss Hilda Ackerill, Mrs. H. E. Short, Mrs. Amy Walker, Mrs. Beauchamp Payne, Mrs. C. E. Argue, Mrs. C. V. Parks, Mrs. F. Branscombe, Mrs. Laurie Lewis, Miss A. Davidson, Mrs. F. S. Wills, Miss Rogers, Miss Ellen Cherry.

Nanking Demands Forces of Belligerents In China be Withdrawn

Shanghai, June 13 (AP) — The Japanese-controlled "Central China-ese Government" at Nanking published a declaration tonight demanding that all troops, warships and other armed forces of belligerent countries stationed in China be withdrawn.

The Nanking regime, headed by Wang Ching-Wei, a former associate Japanese advices, asserted it is intervention only in handling any "untoward incidents" in China.

It said Great Britain, France and the United States "have in China—in many cases stationed in the same localities.

"In this critical period," it said, "the presence of foreign armed forces is likely to result in conflict which may develop to serious proportions."

County Council Favors Low Cost Pavement Construction as Report On Roads and Bridges Adopted

Pave Mile and One-Quarter of Madoc Road Each Year Until Finished

FIVE-YEAR PLAN

Hastings County Council went on record today as being in favor of a change in policy of county road systems, favoring low-cost pavement construction as being more economical than maintenance of gravel.

This decision was brought about following a discussion of the recent policy of the road of Madoc-Belleville highway, which in turn brought in a recommendation that the remainder of this road should be completed under the low-cost construction policy with a mile and one-quarter or new paving to be completed each year.

The recommendation, however, brought forth nothing more than a lively cross-benches argument which ended with a motion for the adoption of the Roads and Bridges Committee's semi-annual report as presented by Chairman James A. Moore.

Criticism of the newly paved stretches of this part of the roads system was levelled by a number of the reeves. "The new paving is much rougher than the old," declared Reeve William West, Stirling, adding his corroboration.

Get What You Pay For

Reeve Ira Vanderwater Reid referred Roads Chairman James A. Moore, adding that the county should save money by borrowing sufficient funds to pave the entire highway system at one time. "You get what you pay for," he declared.

Reeve Churcher declared himself as being 100 per cent in favor of a five-year plan of low-cost pavement construction, in all roads of the system, in which case there would be a saving in the same money as expensive maintenance. "It is good economics," he said.

Reeve G. B. Bedford, Rawdon, commended the Warden's position.

"This is a good policy," he said, "and one I endorse. We ought to get the best results Road Superintendent W. L. Lane has told council all grading should be done the year previous to the laying of the pavement.

Roads Report

The Roads and Bridges report presented by Chairman James A. Moore, embraced all phases of the committee's activities for the committee since the January session. The expenditure for this period was $30,569.46, as compared to $28,906.19 for the same period a year ago.

The report reminded council that the estimated expenditure authorized by bylaw last January amounting to $87,500 had been reported by the Department of Highways to $75,000 since which time there had been a further $78,500.00. This meant, the curtailment of various expenditures on the county roads came through the Spring breakup period exceeding by well, the report stated. The lateness of the season delayed crushing operations, but the complete unpaved section of the Madoc-Foxboro road has been resurfaced and graded. Approximately one-half mile of dust-laying operations have been completed.

An important feature of the report was the efficient patrol work done by Chief Constable Clare Hayes of Tweed. This work resulted, the report said, in the number of overloaded trucks on the most heavily travelled highways being reduced by over one-half, the number checked a year ago. The cost was exceedingly small and half of it will be borne by the Department of Highways.

Regular inspections were carried out by the committee. No action was taken regarding the petition of certain Tyendinaga Township residents regarding the taking over of the road between Bad and Lonsdale by the county, due to the fact that not sufficient funds were available.

Regarding snow removal, the committee felt that attempting to keep open more snowbanks than last winter is a mistaken policy as sufficient equipment is not available and in 1-3 miles of snowfence owned by the county was not found a suggestion was made that additional 17 miles be purchased.

The cost of truck plowing was roughly $5,100 and the total cost of snow removal, $8,500. The fact that roughly 12 percent of the funds of the committee which leaves no improvement to the system shows what a good position snow removal is.

The report requested council to forward a resolution asking that more than the fifty percent subsidy for the Provincial highways, the counties, in that the gas tax revenue goes to the government.

The committee also recommended that a 2-1/2 mile gravel road be built for maintenance and construction on the roads and bridges system.

The 90 per cent who want to live in peace and under law in accordance with moral principles have received almost unanimous acceptance through the centuries can and must find a way to make their will prevail.

The hour now comes for these 90 per cent citizens of the world to unite against the mortal danger which threatens us. I have confidence in the solidarity of the American people in this critical struggle they are leading for their own safety, but also for the safety of American democracy.

I am compelled and you are compelled to look ahead. The peace, freedom and security of 90 per cent of the population of the world are being jeopardized by the remaining 10 per cent who are threatening the breakdown of all international law and order and who are destroying the right of free people to live in peace and under law in accordance with moral principles which have received almost universal acceptance through the centuries and must find some way to make their will prevail.

Canadians Recount Baptism of Fire By Nazi Submarine

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 13—(CP Cable)—Somewhere in the rolling hills of Scotland recruits of the Canadian Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry today are celebrating escape from their baptism of fire with a German submarine which overtook a fish-laden trawler ploughing towards England. They are now safe.

The pair, Lance Corporal Lawrence Nicholas, 21, of Victoria, and Private Lawrence Gaudet, 20, of Montreal, serving as machine-gunner "watchdogs" aboard a 900-ton fishing vessel, were bringing foodstuffs for Britain when a shell crashed through the wheelhouse.

The gunboat action was followed in rapid succession by whistling shells which failed to sink or look to boats. As the crew pulled away from the ship, the sea had already washed more than 20 shells pile into their vessel. The ship's wireless operator was sent to the bottom.

Nicholas's report they explained that the crew were unable to reply to the fire of the enemy to sail but lay off two-miles and just banged away with machine-guns.

One lifeboat was picked up a few hours after the attack last night by a British warship. Another which the Canadians jumped separated from the trawler in the smoke and lay for two days the men took turns at the oars. Then, which at times was more than half filled with water.

Fortunately, however, the Latvian second mate of the trawler had taken compasses and charts along and, with the aid of oars and sail, he was able to navigate the clumsy craft to the Hebrides "right on the nose."

Says France Loses Main Oil Industry

New York, June 13 — With the advance of the German armies in France, a large part of the oil refining capacity of that country is believed to have been destroyed or in the hands of the Germans. In the Seine Inferior district, situated the large refining area of France. Because of a law enacted several years ago requiring that a certain percentage of oil products for consumption in France be refined within the country, there is believed to be considerable refining capacity in France, based on pulation than in any other European nation.

Most of the petroleum refining there include the Standard Oil Company of France, the Société Francony-Vacuum Oil Company and the Texas Corporation. Crude oil for these refineries is brought mostly from Irak, South America and the United States, while the refineries are mostly out of commission or in the hands of the Germans, as they have to turn to foreign sources for petroleum products. What these demands will be will depend largely on the course of the war. If the ports of entry into France are reduced further, the question of getting shipments through will be difficult. With Italy in the war, the Mediterranean ports probably will no longer be available. As the Atlantic side, the Germans already have to turn to foreign sources for less.

Tours, France, June 14.—(CP — Havas)—Exhausted French armies, without reserves of men or material, fell back fighting today against the Nazi tide that threatens to flank the Maginot Line.

As the German marched into abandoned and lifeless Paris, it was disclosed that the French Government had withdrawn from Tours to a city farther southwest to escape the shattering tentacles of the vast German encircling movement which already has captured capital.

On the western end of the front, armored units supported now by large infantry forces have begun to over-run French defending forces, a military spokesman said.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Whence comes our air? This is not answered, in the main, because only indicates which way the air is passing at the moment. Extended studies indicate that a portion of air blowing past one's windvane from the south may actually have started from some northern land. On one instance, air over Hudson Bay started to travel in a southeasterly direction to the middle Atlantic. It turned and curved to the northeast and finally blew over England as a southeast wind. In another case air over Baffin Bay moved southeastwardly over the Atlantic, and curving entered the tropics as a northeast wind. Weather forecasters determine the source of air by examining its physical characteristics, such as temperature, humidity, etc.

HEAVY BOMB SCORES HIT ON NAZI BATTLESHIP

Scharnhorst Struck Abaft Funnel and May Have Received Second Hit

IN TRONDHEIM FJORD

Scharnhorst Was Engaged Some Time Ago in Running Battle and Was Struck

London, June 14—(CP) — The admiralty announced today that an airplane of the fleet air arm scored a hit with a "heavy bomb" on the battleship Scharnhorst in Trondheim Fjord, Norway, early Thursday.

The announcement said:

"Aircraft of the fleet air arm carried out an attack on German naval units in Trondheim Fjord early yesterday morning.

"Information has now been received that a direct hit from the funnel was obtained with a heavy bomb on the battleship Scharnhorst. It is also reported that possibly a second hit was registered on the same ship."

The Scharnhorst has figured in the news twice since the Norwegian invasion. She was engaged in a running battle by the battle cruiser Renown early in April and was severely hit. But she escaped to a shortage of fuel and ammunition has been repaired. Last week, according to a German account, she was back in the shadowy waters of the aircraft carrier Glorious.

Says Britain Drops Plans For Long War And Goes 'All Out' With Her Resources

Sources Close to Government State Britain Has Given Blank Cheque to U.S. for Any Kind of Usable War Material She Can Provide — Fullest Possible Effort Now Takes Precedence Over Programs of Later Production

London, June 14 (CP).—The plight of France has caused Great Britain to drop her plans for a long war and go "all out" with her resources, sources close to the government said today. This release a fund of money and credit for purchase in the United States of anything which will convey or fire explosives. The fund originally was allocated for future years.

As a result of the change in policy, these sources said, Britain is giving the United States a blank cheque, in effect, for any kind of usable war material she can provide.

Everything already found purchasable in arsenals, National Guard units and elsewhere is being sent.

No program aimed at later production will be permitted to stand in the way of the fullest possible effort now, these sources declared.

Allied Resources

This is partly the result of the loss of allies' resources because of the widening Nazi hold on France from 75 to 80 per cent of France's steel producing capacity is said by German hands, these sources said, and the same is true of the aircraft factories producing war material.

But, they added, fortunately for the allies, most of the French factories producing ammunition are in the south.

The government is not so much concerned momentarily about the United States' production capacity as about the material there already manufactured, they said.

For instance, they explained, the British Expeditionary Force's loss of 1,000 field guns in the withdrawal from Flanders has left few in this country, but the enormous army which must be put into the field, the situation with regard to rifles is not so acute, they said, but the demands of the Local Defence Volunteers—the Home Guard against possible German invasion have taken a large part of the supply.

British Production Stepped Up

While she will take all that the United States can send, and urges nothing of the kind, these sources said that Britain's own stepped-up production had vastly increased the flow of machine tools from the United States and that "we are now prepared to take such tools up to the United States' capacity to produce them."

Oh, Build, Assemble, Transport, Give, That England, France and We May Live

Edna St. Vincent Millay, U.S. Poet, Cries for Aid to Allies 'Before Tonight, Before Too Late'

ASSAILS ISOLATIONISM

(By Leon Edel, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, June 14—(CP)—Edna St. Vincent Millay, noted American poet, from a sick bed in the Connecticut Berkshires, today put aside her verse on behalf of the Allies and against American isolationists, "lest we be left to fight alone."

She sent her 160-line poem to the newspaper and it was displayed it prominently. Not in years has a poet sought to lend the ear of so wide a public.

In lines bursting with fierce eloquence she pleaded:

"Oh, God! Let not the lovely bow "Of Freedom in the trampled mud "Be vainly cast.

Pulitzer prize winner and author of several volumes of best-selling verse, Miss Millay called her poem: "Lines written in passion and indignation during the battle of France and my own country."

In an era in which poets have been accused of being too little to say to the many, Miss Millay suddenly launched her ringing call to arms under the impact of the "battle of France."

"Oh, build, assemble, transport, give.

That England, France and we may live.

"Before tonight, before too late.."

Through the poem runs the haunting, ironic refrain "There are no Islands Any More"—no refuge for the isolationist, no ivory tower of retreat.

"The tidal wave devours the shore: "There are no islands any more."

At 48 Miss Millay enjoys an unique reputation in American poetry. A skilful technician, she has written in addition to volumes of poetry, plays, the most notable of which is "The King's Henchman" which became the libretto for an opera.

Economic Life Is Galvanized Into Action

London, June 14 —(CP)— The Evening Standard, published by Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production, said today that Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime Premier, will go back on their promise to "stay quietly in the rear of the people of England" and command the right to be soldiers in this battle.

52 Millions to be Spent Immediately By Canada on Air Training Project

Ottawa, June 14 (CP)—In a comprehensive progress report on the physical side of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, Air Minister Power told the House of Commons today that it is proposed to spend immediately some $52,000,930 on the training project.

This money will be used for construction of lavoing fields, buildings and facilities for the 70 odd training schools and other establishments projected.

Local considerations should not and will not be permitted to interfere with the work of pushing the scheme ahead he said.

ALLIES ESTABLISH NEW LINE WEST OF THE CAPITAL

Abandonment of Paris is Severe Sentimental Blow

AFTER 9 DAYS' BATTLE

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris was abandoned today to save it from destruction and the Allies established a new line west of the capital into which German troops marched for the first time since 1871 when they entered the city for 3½ months.

Citizens were spared the anguish of those days which the oldest people remembered—days when a dead cat or an iron bed was sold dear in the produce market.

Tours, the first temporary seat of government, however, the man who announced the fall of the capital to be temporarily in the hands of the enemy, as did most French men and women everywhere.

It did not signify defeat of the French, but it was a severe sentimental blow.

Backing up westward, French and British troops were said to have had not slept for five days, fought desperately to preserve their lines during the withdrawal from Paris positions. They were tired and the German people of England command the right to be soldiers in this battle.

Even Paris' home soldiers were rushed to help the beleaguered French and popular feeling demanded calling out every available weapon and piece of equipment for the troops.

Battleground of Democracies.

Last night Premier Reynaud spoke to his people, told them France was "losing this battle", and declared his nation was the battleground of the democracies.

Paris fell nine days after the start of the German off-ensive against it and 33 days after the blitzkrieg started to roll through Belgium and Holland.

The attack to which the city has yielded started in the vicinity of Sedan where the French were defeated by Hitler's panzer divisions in the war of 1870 and the last Emperor Napoleon captured. The battle also led to Paris—but in a far longer time than in the war.

A new straw blew up in today's wind when General Francisco Franco's Spanish troops occupied the International Zone of Tangiers in French-ruled Morocco.

The significance of the move was not immediately apparent. The Spaniards said it had been made in agreement with the French so assure the neutrality of the zone. But it was recalled Spain only a few days ago proclaimed itself nonbelligerent rather than neutral.

RUMOR MONGERS CONDEMNED BY ERNEST LAPOINTE

Minister of Justice Urges People to Remain Calm and Steady

HEPBURN CRITICIZED

Ottawa, June 14—(CP) — The rumor mongers and spreaders of idle gossip bore its stamp of stern condemnation from Justice Minister Lapointe as a hindrance to Canada's war effort.

The Minister of Justice sounded another appeal for sound common sense to offset the alarmists who make "almost everything assume a sinister aspect."

In the House of Commons he urged the people of Canada everywhere to remain calm, steady, not to get unduly perturbed by rumors of all kinds which are being circulated.

The minister's warning came shortly before the House last night adopted the Defence of Canada Regulations to a special committee for review. Criticism, directed against Premier Hepburn by Gordon Conant, North Moose Jaw) who flatly charged the Ontario premier with "repeated sabotage," climaxed the debate.

Paris Symbol of Western Art And Culture For Many Centuries

Large Sections of City Were Destroyed in Siege of Three and Half Months by Germans in 1871

PARIS' ATTRACTIONS

(By The Canadian Press)

Paris, fifth largest city of the world with its normal population of 2,600,000, has been a symbol of western art and culture for centuries.

Its 1-2 square miles of area, defended the city from within. The fortifications were built around the capital the horrors of bombardment. Paris was besieged in 1870-71 in the bitterness of a previous conquest. For in 1811, after a siege that lasted 1-2 months, Paris had waste large sections of Paris, the city surrendered to the invading armies of Bismarck.

In 1914 the German armies of Kaiser Wilhelm II were within 19 miles of the city gates. Paris, however, remained inviolate although German aircraft bombed the city many times including the two "Big Berthas" — a long-range gun — dropped its shells on the capital from a distance of 75 miles.

Paris lies on both banks and islands of the Seine River, about 110 miles from its mouth, and occupies much of the Seine basin.

After the German invasion of 1871, Paris emerged as a newer and finer city.

Among its beauties are the boulevards, notably the Champs Elysees, the many bridges and squares; its quiet parks, the Tuileries gardens, the Bois De Boulogne; its fine churches, among them Notre Dame; its notable buildings, including the Louvre museum, the Hotel Des Invalides, the Pantheon, the Palais Royal, the opera and the Palais de Justice; and the Montmatre amusement district and the Eiffel tower.

Most famous of the chief squares is the Place de la Concorde, where Marie Antoinette was executed, between the Arc de Triomphe—largest triumphal arch in the world, and where the grave of the unknown soldier is located.

Almost every branch of French industry is represented in Paris, from fine arts handicrafts to manufacture of delicate machinery.

The city is the centre of a great network of rivers, canals, roads and railroads, and thus has been the nation's principal commercial centre.

Washington, June 14 —(AP)— Plans to provide 10,000 trained men a year, including 7,000 pilots, to staff the United States expanding army air forces were announced by War Secretary Harry Woodring.

The period of training has been shortened by a month. It will be 52 weeks instead of 56, Woodring disclosed.

Plane Makes Forced Landing on Stoney Lake

Engines Cut Out While Machine is Over the Lake — Crew Rescued

Peterborough, Ont., June 14—(CP)—Two members of the Royal Canadian Air Force escaped injury when their plane made a forced landing today and sank in 150 feet of water in Stoney Lake, 20 miles north of here.

Pilot Officer A. A. Winder of Toronto, at the controls, and his companion, Flight Sergeant Bews, (initials unavailable) were rescued by an airman, Roy Whetung, who operates a general store at Crowe's Landing on the lake.

It was reported here the twin-engined Lysander left Camp Borden, Ont., early today. The engines stopped suddenly while the machine was over the lake, and the plane made a forced landing, tearing off one wing before sinking.

No official version of the cause of the crash was available here tonight, but the fliers refused to discuss it.

LAST EVACUEES LEAVE PARIS

High Command Denies German Claim Whole French Line Broken

London, June 14—(CP) — The last evacuees from Paris left there at midnight last night (7 p.m. EST), Reuters Agency accorded to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, datelined Paris.

The last official evacuee train, they said, continues on the west side of Rouen.

Nazi assertions that the whole French line from the English Channel to Montmedy had broken, drew the comment that "We don't believe a word of it because the French were fighting very well and it would be quite improbable that the whole front from the sea to Montmedy should break down at once."

Paris, these sources said, was of no use as a military base.

Pre-Arranged Plan

At that hour, the Spanish said, orders were given for the gates of the city to be closed by police and gendarmes.

The French army, it continued, had begun to fall back on the west side of the city, according to prearranged plans, while it was forming well south of Paris.

To avoid the possibility of confusion, orders were given for no more persons to be allowed to leave Paris, the Agency said.

German motor machine - gun posts were established inside the gates, it declared.

Early in the city of the dead, the dispatch continued, with every shop closed and shutters down.

On the streets, no one could be seen but police and gendarmes. All these had handed in their weapons to become a rigidly civilian body.

The names of nine citizens were called in city police court before Magistrate R. C. Ponton, K.C., on a charge of having failed to procure a dog licence. His Worship cautioned the public regarding this practice and levied only the costs of the court, 75c, in each instance. The amended dog census had since procured their dog tags. One woman stated the dog at her home was not her property but "We are harbouring the animal and, therefore, responsible for the licence," pointed out Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K. C.

Some of the machines found were not equipped with the necessary city bicycle licence, however.

Reforestation Plan Of Ontario Gov't Laid Over Till Dec.

Definite decision regarding the acceptance of a government proposal to reforest depleted and other areas of Hastings County, will be made at the December session, members of the County Council decided on Thursday after hearing addresses from Ontario Forestry representatives.

Reforestation was started in Southern Ontario 25 years ago, and its primary purpose was to assist private landowners in replenishing depleted woodlots, council was told. This year 12,000 people in this part of the province were concerned for this purpose.

The Government now forestry representatives said, were willing to assist townships and other municipalities in reforesting small areas by supplying free trees and planting services.

Of late county forests have been started in those counties having large areas of sandy or other types of land unsuited for the raising of crops.

Proposal Presented

The government's present proposal to municipalities in possession of such land embraces three options. Providing the county purchases 1,000 acres, the government will undertake to manage the land for a period of 30 years, supply trees and supervision.

At the end of this period of time, the municipality will have the opportunity of (1)—if it wishes to retain the land, it may do so at the cost of 50c without interest; if the county wishes to relinquish the property, the province will take it over and pay the municipality the cost of the land without interest, or province and municipality can form a joint ownership with both parties sharing equally.

Seven counties in this part of Ontario have already taken advantage of this proposition, council was told and many more have given it favorable consideration. The average cost of these lands to the counties, thus far, has been an average of five dollars an acre.

Reduced to Minimum

Former great devastation to forests in Hastings County in the vicinity of Tweed, has been reduced to a minimum, thanks to efficient forestry service, members were told. This service is available to all parts of the county at any time.

Forestry Department representatives said tribute to the fine visits of Hastings County Warden, Clifford Township. This area is one that the Town of Napanee, Ont., was boinded out, and members of council were advised to visit it at their earliest opportunity.

Following the addresses, council decided to take up the matter and forward a definite decision at the next session.

Council Members Well Pleased With Facilities at Picton After Making Visit to Reg't. Depot

Warden Churcher Promises Every Assistance to Men in Khaki

LUNCH WITH OFFICERS

"The civilian population of Hastings County, especially those in the two communities, will be behind the soldier sons, and those of other counties in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment to the last ounce of their ability. You may rest assured of that, Gentlemen," Warden John L. Churcher told the officers and staff of the regimental depot, following inspection of the Armouries in Picton on Thursday by members of the County Council.

In a ringing address, the Warden who spoke as the "Voice of Hastings County" before twenty-eight council members, as well as the officers and staff of the regiment, urged upon his listeners the stringent necessity of both military and civilian co-operation in the days that lay before us, and the Dominion, co-operating with each other to the fullest extent "so that we can help this war to a successful conclusion."

Had Eyes Opened

"My eyes were opened," he said, "have had our eyes opened here today. We can really see for the splendid facilities available here, in the training, the feeding, clothing and ...equipment of the members of this regiment, that will make them fit to meet those of this fine armory as the headquarters of the regiment. I know that they were doing."

He will take back to the far-flung counties of Hastings County which are so ably represented all here today the news that the sons in khaki here are being well-housed, fed, clothed and trained under ideal army conditions with the best facilities available," he said.

Urging the necessity of the full-hearted support of the civilian life, Warden Churcher told his listeners that the farmers was playing one of the most important roles of the war, in that on his contributions toward winning the war.

Feed Most Cases from Farms

"The soldier must be fed. And the food must come from the farms," he added. "Fellow members of the Hastings County Council, you must help to counteract the needless necessity of greater production."

Tribute to the officers of the regiment grouped about him at the Picton Armouries, the Warden paid his personal assurance that "the civilian population of Hastings County will back her soldier sons and those of other communities to the last ounce of their ability."

"We are proud of the large number of Hastings County men, and County young men, and older veterans, that have flocked to the colors at the first call of duty," he said, "and it is our duty to back them to the last ounce of our capacities. And I can assure you, Gentlemen, that the County and Prince Edward Counties whether municipal, private or individual will utimat to keep this splendid country of ours democratic."

Lieut.-Colonel Ponton added, "and I speak for the rural sections of the county, that the boys in the Armouries now in khaki, will never suffer for the lack of food as long as the farmers of Canada can carry on."

Appreciative of Invitation

"The members of my council and myself are truly appreciative of the invitation to visit the Armouries and these armouries and to join with the officers of the regiment in what we have thoroughly enjoyed by us that we thoroughly enjoyed by us all" Warden Churcher told the officers assembled in appreciation of the fine reception accorded them.

Previous to Warden Churcher's address, Major E. T. Naylor, officer commanding the regiment, told the council that the needs of the Picton Armouries would be the military "powers that be" in the selection of training centres for the battalion now overseas, and for recruiting and other depot purposes.

"Sites in Belleville, Trenton and other centres of the two counties were thoroughly inspected and discussed," he said, "and due to the fine housing, feeding and other facilities available here in Picton this naturally was the final choice."

"There has been some misunderstanding regarding this matter in various parts of the district, and I sincerely hope that this visit will clear any wrong impressions that may prevail elsewhere," Major Naylor said.

He explained in detail just what the recruit goes through locally before proceedings to the training camp, where he undergoes preparatory training for the sifter days ahead.

Inspected Armouries

During the early part of the visit, members of the council inspected the armouries. They saw the Canadian "Tommy Atkins" in his famous battle dress, the equipment of the evening meal. They saw his living and recreational quarters and the many phases of army barracks life so necessary to the successful functioning of a soldier.

They were escorted by Major Colin Ferguson, Major Gerald Ferguson and other officers of the unit, through the quarters of the troops through stores, where rations are distributed daily and through the sanitary kitchens which a competent staff of cooks prepare the daily meals.

Later they were entertained at a reception in the officers' mess, previous to enjoying a "Tommy's" meal in the sergeants' dining room. Here they enjoyed a delicious meal of tasty beef stew with vegetables and dumplings, mashed potatoes, bread, butter, cheese, pumpkin pie and tea.

Following the dinner and addresses, members of the council were given ranks handle to wander at will through the armouries. Many took advantage of the offer and availed themselves of the opportunity to meet and chat with members of their own municipalities, who have donned the King's uniform.

HASTINGS COUNTY GIVES ONE MILL FOR WAR EFFORT

Will Levy for $18,282, Which Will be Divided Among Patriotic Institutions

NO DISSENSION

Money Will be Held Available and Committee Formed to Handle Same

Hastings County Council will set aside a mill rate for the benefit of patriotic purposes, instead of $4,-000 as was recommended by the Finance Committee report, adopted earlier by the session, members unanimously decided in the closing session of the June sitting.

The recommendation of three-quarters of a mill will be added to the levy of 10½ mills struck by the committee in its report. The one-quarter mill levied for this purpose was in addition to the original rate, thus the rate levied on the equalized assessment of the county for estimates is now 11¼ mills.

Considering the earlier report to include provision for the extra funds, followed a motion by Warden John L. Churcher to council in which he pointed out the "unprecedented crisis in the situation in Europe

"Hastings County must and will do its part for the Dominion, the Empire and the valiant troops now fighting for their very existence," he said. "During the past few days while we have been in session the situation has become increasingly more critical and we realize today by day the necessity for co-operation and assistance from every quarter all concerned whether military or civilian. I suggest, gentlemen, that this county council make the proposal of increasing the grants by one-quarter mill."

No Dissenting Voice

There was no dissenting voice. Reeves from the far-flung sections of the county expressed their approval of the resolution, and following a general voicing of opinion, the Finance Committee's report to provide for additional funds was carried unanimously.

The Warden originally suggested that the rate be at the rate by another quarter-mill. Other suggestions, however, brought out the opinion that this amount would not be sufficient, and when Reeve Thomas Robson, in a brief address pointed out that demands were inevitable and would continue to do so, and that a mill would not be too much, his suggestion met with wholehearted support of council.

Members Thanked

Reeve Linn, Marmora — "If we pass this half-mill rate we should not spend it, but distribute it accordingly."

Warden—"We should not apportion this money at once, but keep it in reserve."

Reeve Robson—"The ratepayers are beginning to realize that this is a crisis of the situation. I would be willing to go higher than a half mill. This is no time for ballyhooing. Are we going to say that organizations and soldiers will have to get these things. The least we can do in this wealthy county is what we can. The call is growing greater These things must have more money. We can't give them these moneys if we leave the rate as it is. I am willing to see it be raised and we must do it. It is our duty."

"The ratepayers of this county would not hesitate one moment if they knew what the committee are doing it. $9,000.00 is too small for this county. It should come right away. I suggest a rate of one mill be levied."

Reeve George Jordan agreed. "A mill doesn't amount to much to ratepayers today as it would have done three years ago. I think a mill is not too much," he said.

Reeve Hubbell—"Strike the mill rate and spend it."

Reeve Graves of both north and south municipalities spoke in favor of the suggestion.

Warden Proud

"I have never been the grouder of Hastings County Council than I am this minute," Warden Churcher said.

"You have corroborated my statements made in Picton yesterday, and I am proud to be at the head of such a council. I think this morning, have shown in an admirable manner their loyalty and willingness to make sacrifice."

Mrs."

A few words of appreciation were expressed by the members of council having had in our company several ministers who have now been called to other fields of service. Three of the men replied briefly and expressed the joy they had in the fellowship of the association and appreciation for the help received. Six ministers will be removed from the county and three who were in attendance were O. R. Plindall, A. R. Craig and H. F. Rockwell.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted: Be it resolved that in view of the present crisis which now exists in our Empire's history, should unite upon Christian people throughout the county to take every opportunity that presents itself for uniting in prayer on Sunday and from men in attendance were O. R. Plindall, A. R. Craig and H. F. Rockwell.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted: Be it resolved that in view of the present crisis which now exists in our Empire's history, should unite upon Christian people throughout the county to take every opportunity that presents itself for uniting in prayer on Sunday and from day to day on the Lord's Day—for strength and courage, wisdom and guidance. It is further resolved that the response to this appeal will be widespread, for the need for mobilizing our spiritual resources is most urgent, and that we are fighting for the preservation of moral and spiritual principles, in fact, everything that the love of mankind holds, as well as for the victory of truth and righteousness and the establishment of a just and lasting peace.

"God in our distress, near the bold, we shall find Him very near, therefore we shall not fear."

The members who approved the resolution represented nearly every section of the county. They were: Grant, O. R. Craig, J. Cantrell, C. Ponton, K.C., J. Wills, J. Ellis, W. McKee, H. F. Sanders, R. Garrati, J. F. Reverell and A. Strother.

After a basket lunch served in the school room of the United Church, the whole company, ministers and their wives and friends gathered at the lovely residence of the church for meditation and prayer. Rev. J. P. Heyrart presided over and directed the suppliants in their period of intercession.

Redeemed from Fire

Firemen received a call to the Reid property on Bridge Street, Wednesday, in order to extinguish fire that was reported. A shallow well had been drilled 280 feet deep was filled with water and some over 300 feet, was drilled near by. The well was used to begin flowing over due to great pressure beneath. A match was lit and the gas in the water caught fire, but the water poured back into the other well and due to the pressure of the gas it was feared the flames might burst out of there as well but were extinguished without damage being done.

Diplomas Presented to Albert College Students at Convocation Exercises Held in Memorial Hall

Chapel Furnishings Gift of Mrs. E. N. Baker in Memory of Dr. Baker, Dedicated

PRESENT CHAPEL CHAIR

Stately Memorial Hall of Albert College was filled to capacity Thursday afternoon with proud parents, friends and alumni as members of the 1940 graduating class and undergraduates were honored at the annual convocation exercises.

Immaculate and charming in their white graduation dresses with corsages of spring flowers, the lady members of the class afforded a delightful contrast to the smart blazers and white flannels of the youths as they filed into Memorial Hall a few moments before the exercises opened.

Members of the faculty and staff in their dignified caps and gowns occupied the dais at the front of the hall along with members of the colleges board and visiting celebrities. Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, principal of the college, presided over the exercises. Professor J. O. Watts, B.D., Queen's University, was the guest speaker of the afternoon and presented the Convocation address to the students. In the crowded auditorium were many noted visitors, parents and relatives of the students from the far-flung corners of the Dominion and Province.

Candidates for Graduation were:

Chapel Furnishings Dedicated.

Following the invocation which officially opened the exercises the college choir, with Wm. Connor, A.R.C.O., at the piano, gave a beautiful rendition of the Gaul of Bing's "All Glory."

The dedication of the Chapel furnishings—the gift of Mrs. Baker in memory of her husband, Dr. E. N. Baker, former principal of the college, was one of the highlights of the afternoon's program. In presenting the furnishings of the chapel, Dr. Howard said that it was due to the generosity of Mrs. Baker that they were now enabled to use the chapel in the capacity for which it was built and promised that by her generosity a most serious difference in college life would be felt. "No word of thanks could express our sincere appreciation," said Dr. Howard, "so we will just receive this very generous gift from Mrs. Baker."

"I deem it an honor to the memory of my husband," said Mrs. Baker, as she accepted the thanks of Dr. Howard on behalf of the student body and faculty, "and I am very deeply grateful that this room may be a sanctuary for the students of this college."

Following the dedication of the chapel furnishings the entire assembly stood and sang the beautiful hymn by Louis F. Benson (1855) the first line of which is: "O Thou whose feet have stood life's hill" Dr. Howard Reports on Activities.

In opening his report of the year's activities, Dr. Howard cordially welcomed the congregation to the College vocation exercises. He was delighted to see so many friends in attendance, he said, and offered his sincere thanks to these friends, who, throughout the year had shown such splendid loyalty. Were it not for this splendid loyalty the aims for which this college is striving, would be impossible.

After extending his sincere thanks to the Women's Guild of Belleville, to the members of the staff and board, the recreational character and vocational committees, he extended his congratulations to the graduating class. "Congratulations are more than due to you," he said, "Albert College is safe in their keeping—no higher tribute than that." Referring to the troublesome times Dr. Howard said that "we must face the future with courage, hope and faith. God has not forsaken us, nor will He in the years to come. So into the future we must march, going forward with our chins up."

Lists of graduates, diplomas and certificates in the Conservatory department were read by Dr. E. Graduating Class at Albert College Urged to Seek Definite Aim in Life

Prof. J. O. Watts of Queen's University Speaks at Convocation Exercises on Theme "Solidarity of Service"

EDUCATION A TRUST

A rousing challenge to youth to assume a "solidarity of service" attitude toward life rather than the lackadaisical effort so prevalent among the people of the world today, was given members of the graduating class and to undergraduates of Albert College in the Convocation address by Professor J. O. Watts of Queen's University at the annual exercises held in the Memorial Hall of the College Thursday afternoon.

With an occasional touch of humor running through his address that dispelled any possibility of monotony, the speaker illustrated many instances of everyday life as examples to make clear his point, which was his own Patriot Saint, declared Prof. Watts, "and the Patriot Saint of this generation age is St. Vitus." Referring to the German people as an illustration of his point on "solidarity of service," he said that the Germans had gotten together and were all travelling the same road. We Britishers realize that co-operation and effort to dominate the world is wrong but it nevertheless proves the point—they are all going the same way.

The commitment to some definite purpose is an essential characteristic, continued the speaker, but the question is "What are we committed to?" If not committed there is a desire to obtain power and overrun the world, then that is not a person's true worth to the world is his commitments.

Professor Watts referred briefly to his one-time colleague, the late H.A. and the gentleman whom he said, could always put a quizzical look in any difficulty. This was not mean that he did not meet his difficulties in a straightforward manner, continued the speaker, but if it is necessary that you look a man down, it is better that you hold him down with a smile—but still hold him down.

The speaker quoted Chamberlain as saying only two years ago, "That if war were to come, civilization as we know it, would pass away." Now it has come and although the days ahead look dark, God is reminded us that the gates ahead are always open. It is the gates behind us that are closed, said Prof. Watts as he trusted for all ultimate Allied victory.

Prof. Watts said that the influence of the home was one of the essentials which the student must have in his equipment if he were to succeed in his commitments. "Too often," he said, "the home was thought of as simply a place to come when every other place was closed, but it should be an important is at best a tramp. Don't take the privileges to be enjoyed alone, be advised the students, but let it be as a sacred trust. All privileges is nothing unless shared."

"Don't get the impression that although the world is in chaos that the world is crushed and downcast," he said in conclusion. "Though times are turbulent remember that Christ is Risen and His Risen reign. Press forward with head up, chest out and alert. All the best of luck and reunion for those who have sacrificed and suffered to serve."

VISITOR ENJOYED YOUTH PARADE

Editor Ontario Intelligencer;
Dear Sir:

I am in Belleville for a few days visiting my son's birthday; it was a real pleasure for me to see your parade of youth; it was most impressive to see the young girls in uniform, they stepped out with spirit and the boys made such a smart military appearance, it is a good thing for our young people to have such a good training and those responsible for the parade were to be commended. You should make it an annual affair. I love going out to street fairs, trees and gardens. Your lawns and gardens look beautiful.

Sincerely,
John McBride,

DOMINIONS' PERFORMANCE

The magnificent performance of the Dominions in seizing Italian ships and in other duties which came to them with the entry of Italy into the war is one which proves to the world the effectiveness of a world-wide empire bound by the ties of the Royal Navy and the navies of the Dominions and the Royal Air Force and the air forces of the Dominions.

All the strength of the Allies is not being shown on the western front. Preparations were well made if and when Italy should plunge into war. When he did, he found himself facing complete Allied organization and co-ordination which is one of the sources of strength of the democracies.

ITALY, OLD ROME AND MODERN DEMOCRACIES

Mussolini's attempted revival of the old Roman empire has not proceeded far for it is not in the nature of Fascism with its distortion of the civilization to build up a permanent state. Italy has dwarfed evil impulses but those which can be carried out by force and violence. Truth has been choked for the sake of militarism and the fame of one group. Her literature has fallen away in fascist France and has gained control and all her thought and effort have been warped. The reference to the old Roman empire has been just a slogan of Il Duce to exalt Fascism.

The ancient Rome gradually lost her power from within and also as she met the races which came out of the east and north and attacked her. In time Italy was broken up into small states which for many centuries remained for many centuries.

This ancient Rome which was already decadent when with the ancient Greek cities states which reached a high political and art development was a high state of general education but did not find a means of protecting themselves against dissensions and went down in the Peloponnesian wars and later in the second century before Christ became vassals of Rome, produced a culture which was rather imitative of ancient Greece and lacked the spontaneity of Greek civilization.

Some say that were Rome were pale as compared with the democratic glory of today, as seen in so many lands, such as England, France, United States, and nations invaded by Germany, Italy, and the totalitarian states. Ancient Rome was a cruel task master, her emperors were mainly tyrants. Not until the close of Britain has there ever been seen an empire with the elasticity and freedom which the British Empire has given the world. In truth the British system seems to be the system that may work out into a world confederacy or into that new era in which peace will be guaranteed, an era so earnestly hoped for and so strenuously fought for today.

Italy which had chance of a fine development has fallen prey to the Fascists who under Mussolini have led her astray down the road of reversion to barbarism in which the aspirations of men like Hitler and Mussolini to play the gangster part against a well-ordered society had their opportunity.

Mussolini cannot make Italy great in the way he has undertaken for it is founded on force, violence, aggression and selfishness.

The strength of the democratic countries comes from the fact that their development has not been warped and distorted by selfish men. It has grown like a tree or a mind by the very nature of the principles that govern its growth.

Mussolini talks of his millions of soldiers and his resources and whines about being chained within the Mediterranean and deliberately picks a quarrel. Ancient Romans would have been ashamed to play the part Mussolini is playing, second fiddle to the Germans who in the days of Caesar were barbarians to the Romans.

Never in Italian history has so grave a mistake been made as Mussolini, blinded by Fascist doctrine, has done. He has disgraced the arts of civilization for the sake of the cause of Fascism. Italy had the opportunity of development but Il Duce has hitched to Hitler's policy of looting the world and stifling liberty.

Canadian Dailies Doing Swell Job

The Canadian Press, a co-operative news gathering agency sponsored by the daily newspapers of Canada, held its annual meeting in Toronto recently. In his President's address, Mr. Wilson Woodside, Kingston Whig-Standard, stated that the C.P. has "risen to the test of war with vigor and efficiency. "In the last war news was not organized as it is today," he continued. "There was no radio with unsympathetic listeners would cross the border; no short wave with insinuating propaganda direct from Germany."

It is the considered opinion of the editor of The Statesman that the daily press generally, and Canada specially, is doing a remarkable, conscientious job of gathering and distributing world-wide news, particularly pertaining to the war. The reader and citizen is getting more news contained in the dailies presents established facts, as far as possible, and remains remote from the dangerous field of mere sensationalism dispensed by many across-the-line broadcasts. Too many American radio commentators present as much unreliable and often damaging rumor as material that their credulous audience is upset with the jitters, become fit subjects for a mental institution.

Important, in the editor's view, to the high ideals and century-old traditions of Canadian journalism, are measuring up to their full responsibility and keeping the public properly informed. By doing so they have won the confidence and gratitude of their readers.

Sane and calm thinking combined with an enormous activity are essential during these crucial days and the daily press of Canada is a vital factor in attaining these objectives —Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

The Choice

New York, June 14—Unless we see with crystal clearness that we are preparing to defend ourselves against, all our defense plans will be partial and even futile.

x x x

The United States of America is menaced in its independence, freedom and institutions, as are all the States, by the organized, by an international revolutionary movement, spreading by the sword and by the methods of criminal conspiracy. This revolutionary movement has, under the command of a single leader, the secret, political, diplomatic, economic and military of a great nation—Germany—already in part already taken a large part of Europe under its "protectorate." It has also subjugated by fear all the small States of the Baltic, has partly, or perhaps won over to itself a second revolutionary power, Russia, which threatens, at least is assigning it its limited ways, and has purchased Italy for the time being. It is open war on what is left of Europe and Europe's empires and dominions, which are world-wide.

Armed power is only one of the methods of this aim of which is the subjugation of the world.

This is what we are up against.

Now, a defense program against such a movement requires more than guns, battleships, airplanes and submarines. The total war requires the total defense. The total defense means the co-ordination of all the resources, moral and economic means under a Government which has the confidence of the people, and under a defense plan that can be executed by a board of dollar-a-year men.

It is necessary to have Government confidence of the American people—that is to say, of both major parties. Nothing can succeed otherwise such a defense plan can really be used to entrench one party in permanent power. It is necessary to have a defense executed by men, Democrats or Republicans, without authority the necessary confidence of Congress. Congress must be responsible for the laws it passes, but must not have the power to put that plan into execution. That is the system of patch and the greatest freedom.

x x x

I am presuming that we wish to oppose this movement. If we do not wish to do so, there is no sense in any armament program whatsoever. For we shall not have no other force in the world today, and still we be in the greatest danger epoch. We can, if we wish to do so, make a bargain with Hitler, as has the Premier of Brazil seems to have indicated his willingness to do, by which we shall agree to the cost us America as we have known it, and to the destruction of almost of us can dream it. Inasmuch as the overwhelming majority of Americans now wish to oppose that force, and a strong minority of people in Europe, who are opposed with their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor, to that force coming to terms will open us to the menace now visible on the horizon. But so, also, will a half-hearted and doubtful opposition to it. For the twilight of a dubious and divided policy the conspiracy to destroy this way from the world will flourish and gather strength.

Presuming that we wish to oppose it, we should immediately give unequivocal Government support to the Allies, by every practicable, effective and legitimate means, making their cause our own and preparing to help defend it with the utmost of our power. Only so long as they can hold out clearly does that event—because the enemy's strength that they serve).

How the Magnetic Mine Was Conquered

Britain has a new naval hero — Lieutenant-Commander I. G. D. Ouvry. Pictures of him are as widely displayed in the cities of the British Empire as those of Nelson in the conqueror of the Graf Spee, Rear-Admiral Sir Harry Hardwood, after the Battle of the Plate. Interviews by glossy eyed reporters wearing the Distinguished Service Cross received from the hands of George VI. He owns a modest mien, the fact that it was he more than any one else who saved Britain from the menace of the magnetic mine.

The means of defence against the German magnetic mine, consists of a girdle of cables that covers a ship's hull, fore and aft and extends right up to the bridge. Just how the electric current is distributed over these circuits is a secret of the utmost importance.

What is certain is that neither the vessel nor its cargo exercises the slightest magnetic effect. The magnetic field needed that sets off the magnetic mine after the ship has already been completely been equipped with this depolarization apparatus and it sails over one of the mines, is supplied by the Queen Elizabeth employed by the Queen Elizabeth during her epic dash across the Atlantic.

The apparatus was perfected at the Mines and Torpedo School at Portsmouth, and after three months of intense research by an entire staff of scientists. The first ship was possible only because of the discovery of the secret of the German magnetic mine by Lieutenant-Commander Ouvry.

Immediately on the outbreak of war, Ouvry was appointed a staff officer, 1st. June 14. All Rights Reserved.

That evening, he was round at the young lady's house with a dozen roses and a shine in his eye that rivalled the shine on his shoes acquired with Nugget Polish. Polish. Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private cigar stand and was looking at the paper, saying, It seems as if the whole world is against Hitler, that what this country needs is to spend about a billion dollers on sure shot bombers and help defend our country that ever attacked us would be the day.

There may be something to that, who said I to pop, and, ma said, Well this page is full of speeches on the subjekt, but this particular statement was made by Major General Larkins, retired.

Now he is to retired in name only, pop said, and, ma said, Well he's not the only one that says so. Here's a statement to the effect that it seems as if this country more than 2 or 3 years to go the way of all the ancient civilization unless we start to think of our national defense and keep on thinking of it and dont allow ourselves to think of another single thing, she said.

Who said that? pop said, and ma said, Quiller D. Pringle, president of the Stately of Home Defense. But why should we know what he's talking about, because here's a very interesting article to prove that it's much more sensible to spend all our wealth on public relief works because no other country would dream of attacking us and even if one did why we'd have so many men spinning to their own arms of their own accord that it would just be an embarrassment of riches, she said, I who claims What? pop said, and ma said. Anges Lippers, founder of the Golden Rule Foundation. And other people seem to bare her out, too, for instants here's a long account of a lone speech saying practically the same thing, it was made by Dr. Doaneky Pratt, secretary of the Union for Immediate Disarmament. So what do you think, Mr. Wilyum? me said.

The only thing that occurs to me at the moment is to fix that bolt on our front door, pop said.

With he went and did with a screw driver.

The festive co-eds of the graduation class looked particularly charming in their white graduation dresses, outstanding in the pastel toned gowns of the guests. The function brought to a close a year of memorable social events which mean so much in the college life.

ALL SUMMER LONG women want prints, especially if they commute. A smart model is in silk crepe in white and lavender, the shirt-waist dress with knife-pleated skirt, the jacket with white velvet flaps at the hip pockets.

A DASH OF COLOR with shirt white is the fashion formula for the smart woman. A beauty of an evening frock is a hooded model in lime white crepe printed here and there with enormous bright red poppies.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Schoolgirl Seeks Way Out of Loveless Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"When I was 16 I quit high school and married a boy much against my mother's wishes and hopes for my future. I was living on a farm and his stories of the big city excited me, and I imagined myself in love. I had known him only three weeks.

"For a while I was happy, but when I became homesick and lonesome I complained. I went to shows, but he fell asleep. Sometimes when he had to take me, I had no friends, as I went back to high school. Although the girls are nice, they have their own parties and dates, and I feel more like my mother. I'm only 19 years.

"My husband is only 20, but he never wants go do anything I want to do, he is like an old man. I like to dance; he says nights clubs are cheap, and that we ought not to be talking about pleasure when people in Europe are starving. He says all one of mean things and shouts so that the neighbors can hear him. He has even struck me several times.

"What shall I do, Miss Fairfax? I know I didn't really love him and I feel I'll be happier without him. I want to go home, but I think there could be worse husbands. I've been told to be a part, but going back to school has given me a driving desire to get an education. Did I do wrong? My husband's ideas and mine are as far apart as the

"Married Schoolgirl."

When a boy of 23 acts like a "very old man" it is usually because he is overworked, has had his high spirits in trying to earn a this case? living for himself and his wife. I'm sorry for youngsters who marry too early and become disillusioned and restless.

Of course, the answer to this girl's letter summed up in a paragraph is that she and her husband were both too young to marry. But the stating the cause for their dissatisfaction with each other doesn't solve their problem.

Youth in life's playtime, the curtain of fun, irresponsibility and supposed happiness before the real drama of life begins—whether it's going to be tragedy or comedy. Deprived of the jolly curtain-raiser for any reason whatever, youngsters are apt to grow morbid and irritable.

My sympathies are with this boy she married, even though he has been unwise enough to strike his school-girl wife when his temper has been particularly nasty. If he indulged in these caveman tactics in certain cities of this country, the law would give him a dose of his own medicine. Lashing a wife-beater may be brutal but a brutal act has provoked this legal correspondent.

I don't believe the girl is as completely finished with her marriage as she imagines. There could be worse husbands", she says, and that makes me think their differences might still be patched up.

Before definitely breaking up, it might be well for her to go back and put on a visit her mother. And then she would probably write me: "You knew all we were separated how much I cared.

Visit first this radical experiment seems worth trying. What do the readers of my column think about

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Puzzled Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. If I have thank-you notes after I am married, how should I sign them?

2. The place where I work usually gives a "shower" when an employee marries. How should I acknowledge this? Usually the employee is the one who writes a card of thanks which is posted on the bulletin board. Is this correct? Should I sign this with my full maiden name, just with my first name?

3. When a shower is given for me, how should I acknowledge the kindness of the hostesses?

4. I plan to have my maid of honor and bridesmaids lockets. What would be the correct inscription on these?

Joan

1. You should, if possible, write all your notes of thanks before your wedding. The wisest plan is to write every day the notes for the gifts received that day.

However, if some of the presents arrive at the last minute, so that you have to write these notes after your marriage you sign only your first name. Otherwise your friends just as you would sign any other letter to them.

When more than your first name is used in signing a note, for example, a note to the groom's aunt, whom you have never met, your note would properly be signed:

Sincerely,

Joan Perkins Brown

2. The correct procedure in personal way for you to acknowledge this gift is to write a note to the contributor. Each giver gave personally to you, so, naturally, each giver should receive an individual expression of thanks for his or her thoughtfulness and kindness.

If this isn't possible, write the note of thanks to the girl who gave the shower, write a note of appreciation to each hostess, thanking her for her thoughtfulness and hospitality, and telling her what a happy time you had at the shower. Very often this very special thank-you note is signed with a box of flowers or with a corsage.

3. The inscription in this type of gift usually includes the initials of the bride and bridegroom, the day of the wedding (6-24-40, for example), and, if there is sufficient space, the initials or name of the attendant.

Wedding Finances Limited

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Your very interesting and informative column has become one of my daily newspaper habits. Although you have probably answered this similar request in your column from time to time, I would appreciate it if you will be kind enough to help me.

I am planning to be married in July. The wedding will be held in church and I want to wear a gown of white. Would it be proper for the groom to wear a white linen suit? Would it be proper for the same be suitable for my uncle, who will give me away?

I realize that when the bride wears a gown and veil, all accessories should be strictly formal, but as my finances are limited I'd like to economize in other arrangements are not just as correct. Would you advise me?

Any suggestions you may have would be very welcome.

W. P.

Under usual circumstances, when the bride plans to wear a gown, bridal dress and veil, the bridegroom and men in the wedding party wear formal attire too—cutaway coat and striped trousers for the formal day wedding "morning coat" for the formal evening wedding.

But since, I judge, you are keeping the wedding plans in simple lines, and since the wedding is to be in July, when warm weather rarely wear white linen suits, or white flannel trousers and dark blue coats.

Mrs. Frank Hicks, Christian Stewardship convener took charge of the last part of meeting. Mrs. Reynolds, Mrs. Horton, Mrs. Pitcman and Mrs. Jones assisted in the scripture lesson. Mrs. Homan led in prayer. The meeting closed with a hymn. A contest was given by Mrs. J. Homan. Lunch was served by the hostess and a social time enjoyed.

HUNDREDS BOARD LINER WASHINGTON

Last U.S. Ship Leaving for Home With Citizens from War Zone

Galway, Eire, June 14 —(AP)—Hundreds of passengers today boarded the liner Washington, last United States ship which will take American citizens home from the war zone.

The ship is expected to sail at 2:30 a.m. tomorrow (8:30 p.m. EST Friday).

Captain Harry Manning of the Washington today gave the following statement as to what he did when sighted to stop by a German submarine last Tuesday:—

"I kept on sailing so as to keep his mind off the torpedo and occupied with our thinker. Apparently it worked.

"My only hope was to stall him along until it would be safe to ship in daylight, with the women and children crowded in the boats, and this maker him realise what he was doing."

Rifles, Ammunition In Canada Sent To Great Britain

Ottawa, June 14 (CP)—Air Minister Power acting Minister of National Defence informed the House of Commons yesterday that all available rifles and ammunition in Canada had been sent at the disposal of Great Britain at the urgent request of the Mother country.

The information was contained in telegrams exchanged between Mr. Power and Attorney-General Conant of Ontario who requested arms for civil guard defence.

In reply Mr. Power stressed the "real emergency" existing at present Britain and the "vital" request of Great Britain.

Arms for internal security, he said, can only be issued by the Provincial government through the Department of National Defence.

WOMAN DONATES WEDDING RING TO ALLIED CAUSE

Sacrificing what to most women is as sacred as life itself, that tiny band of gold which she wears on her finger proclaiming her as a married woman, a well-known lady in Belleville yesterday went into McPee's jewelry store and offered her wedding ring as a donation to the Dominion Government to be melted down and used as currency to further Canada's war effort.

This was an entirely voluntary act by this Belleville lady and shows her loyalty to her country in her hour of need. Any old gold is welcomed as a donation and McPee's are acting as local collectors.

All Possible Aid Being Extended To the Allies States Roosevelt

Washington, June 14 —(AP) — President Roosevelt repeated today that all possible help is being extended to the Allies and pointed out to Hitler's record in response to a report that the German Chancellor had said invasion of the western hemisphere was premature.

Mr. Roosevelt was told at a press conference that Hitler had called the possibility of German invasion of the Americas "grotesque" in an interview with a newspaper man.

Asked for comment, the President said he could give none except to say "that it 'brings up recollections."

He authorized direct quotation.

He added that his remark could be enlarged on with dates, nations, going back over quite a period of years.

The President was asked whether he believed the United States could "extend its material resources to the British Government volume and sufficient speed to save them."

He did not reply directly, asserting that it would take two hours to answer the inquiry.

He said, also, that he had received no second direct appeal from Premier Paul Reynaud of France for more war planes and further assistance against the German foe.

(Reynaud said in a speech yesterday that the Allies needed "tens" of airplanes from across the Atlantic.)

If any such request has been forwarded, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, it has not been received.

Juliana and Children Happily Situated in Quiet Ottawa Valley

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montebello, Que., June 14—(CP). Princess Juliana of The Netherlands accepted today the refuge of this quiet Ottawa Valley district while her baby daughters, too young to know of the war that has drove them from their homeland, played happily and seemed at ease in democratic fare of sunshine and vegetable milk.

The Dutch princess and her two babies reached this little French-Canadian village 45 miles from Ottawa yesterday after a trip overseas by warship and a 2-hour train by rail from Halifax where they landed Tuesday. They moved immediately into a long mansion nestled in the green slopes of Montebello's outskirts.

Masked Vegetables Diet

A 27-year-old mother of two who was abroad the six-car special train said the royal entourage had mashed-vegetable diet of the 2½-year-old Princess Beatrix and her nine-month-old sister Irene.

Blonde and slim Elaine Corbett gave her opinion of the social set of the princesses—"just as good for royal children as their subjects."

The girl told how she had been ordered by the Canadian Pacific to Halifax from Bridgewater, N.S., where she was doing child welfare and visiting work as a member of the Royal Victorian Order of Nurses.

Sunday she reported to a train standing in the yards at Halifax not yet knowing what was her special assignment. Wednesday Princess Juliana, her daughters and party boarded the train. Only then did the nurse learn that she was to help "Miss Piet," the Dutch nurse of the little Princesses.

Cares For Her Babies

But there wasn't much help to give. When nurse Piet and Miss Elaine Princess Juliana who cared for her babies Princess Juliana is with them almost constantly," said Miss Elaine. "She likes to look after the children personally and keeps only one nurse."

Then came a letter of other details of the party's trip to a Canadian haven which later will take them to Ottawa as guests of the Earl of Athlone, Canada's new Governor-General, and Princess Alice.

The Princess Julie told of train, room hammocks Dutch sailors wove as gifts for the Princesses before they left Halifax Harbor, Miss Corbett knowing that the hammocks would be used in immediate transit on the train. The hammocks were hung in the train and slung in by the baby.

The nurse had one or two occasions to talk to Princess Juliana on the train. Her impression was that Princess is charming and awfully democratic."

DAY OF PRAYER FOR FRANCE ASKED

Sunday Set Aside to Give Thanks for Valor and Implore Aid for Success of Their Arms

London, June 14—(CP)— The heads of Protestant and Catholic churches in Great Britain today made fervent appeals for prayers for France in its present grave hour.

The Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury, designated Sunday as a day of prayers for Prange, and Arthur Cardinal Hinsley asked for three days of prayer starting today.

"The nation is united in wholehearted sympathy with France in its supreme hour of distress which it is meeting with undaunted bravery," the Archbishop of Canterbury said. "Let this sympathy be expressed not only by the material help which our government is doing its utmost to send, but also in the prayers of our people. I ask that in all our churches Sunday next should be observed as a day of prayers for France.

"For heroic France we owe the best that head and heart and mind, hearts and souls can give," Cardinal Hinsley said. "This hour may be fateful for the world. France is bearing the brunt of the struggle for our liberty. Her people are under a pall of misery and death, her gallant forces are shedding their soil with unexcelled bravery against appalling odds.

"Our Prime Minister has promised assistance in men and munitions which is in our power to give. But we in this island must all do whatever in us lies by the sacrifice we are with them, that we are their comrades in arms, and of unyielding weak and strong, sick and healthy.

NAZI COMMUNIQUE

Berlin, June 14—(AP)—The text of the German high command's communique today:

"The second phase of the significant campaign in the west is victoriously completed.

"The power of resistance of the French northern front has collapsed. The Seine, southward from Paris, has been crossed on broadest front, and Le Havre taken.

"The enemy is in full retreat along the entire front from Paris to the Maginot Line and Switzerland, several points our tank and motorized divisions have already reached and overtook the retreat movement.

"Regarding the German claim that the entire Allied front has collapsed British military attache said "We don't believe a word of it." Regarding the French claim of no confirmation, but in view of the withdrawal to the south of Paris it appears probable.

"The enemy there fled leaving behind entire material. Our motorized divisions broke through the defence lines of the fortified forces were no longer sufficient for protection of the Seine front.

"Since this forenoon our victorious troops have been marching into Paris.

"East of the Marne, Vitry-Le-François was taken. The northern frinse of the Argonne Forest was reached. Rieps (on the Marne-Rhine) northeast of Verdun was stormed yesterday evening.

"Monindel, commander of the Maginot Line, is conquered.

"The third portion of the enemy until final destruction now has begun. Only in the area on the Saar front also began a frontal attack on the Maginot Line.

"The French military spokesman had no specific comment on these claimed developments. He said "the unhinging of the Maginot Monindel will become inevitable" if the Germans throw their forces around the flank.

"Although hampered by weather, our fighting planes and bombers enders destroyed units on June 13 and 14 numerous supply trains, also fighting at many points of the front.

"Troop concentrations and marching and transport columns in the rear of the battle area were successfully bombed and machine-gunned.

"Extensive destruction was carried out on railroad installations and rail lines—especially in the region east of the Marne.

"In the outer harbor of Le Havre we succeeded in sinking two transports and an additional three were damaged, among which was one ship of 10,000 tons.

"Anti-aircraft artillery north of Le Havre sank six enemy transports, considerably damaged an additional three, and forced one Engish destroyer to run away. Precise claims were not confirmed by the Admiralty in London.

"The opponent's air losses yesterday amounted to 19 planes. Three were bagged in an air fight, three were shot down by anti-aircraft guns and the rest were destroyed on the ground. Two of our own planes are missing.

"One submarine on June 13 sank the British auxiliary cruiser "Scotstoun" of 17,000 registered tons. Another U-boat succeeded in hitting and sinking from the most strongly protected convoy a 12,000-ton transport ship with 1,200 men aboard.

"And if that course of action by lending planes, tanks and munitions to the Allies leads to war, then we will meet that issue when it comes!"

CUT HAY EARLY FOR BEST RESULTS

Has Higher Nutritive Value Than Late Cut Hay, Says Ont. Dept. of Agriculture

The feeding value of the hay crop in Ontario each year, which covered 2,400,000 acres and was valued at almost $31,000,000, can be greatly increased by the cutting of earlier stages of growth, states John D. MacLeod, Forage Crops and Weeds Branch, Ont. Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Experiments have shown, says Mr. MacLeod, that early cut hay is more easily digested than late cut hay. The minerals are more easily assimilated and the amount of digestible protein is greater than in late cut hay.

The higher nutritive value of early cut hay helps to replace purchased concentrates and cut down on winter feed bills. Ask the man who has had to use it and he will tell you the milk sheets show the benefits.

Early cutting also gives more aftermath pasture which is very valuable in August and early September.

In making hay there are heavy losses from shattering of legume leaves and in exposure to the sun-bleaching and bleaching. Some progressive farmers are now using tripods to cure early cut hay. Plans for making tripods may be secured from Agricultural Representatives.

In a wet season a crop of alfalfa or clover-grass mixed hay can be saved to advantage by ensiling with molasses.

For molasses silage, cut early (in the bud stage for alfalfa) and apply 80 pounds of molasses per ton of material. Increase the ensiling box down as close as possible to the bottom. Tramp in layers 6 inches lengths and tramp the silage firm to ensure successful curing.

R. A. F. PILOT HAD HARROWING TIME AFTER CAPTURE

Was Shot Down Over Holland—Later Was Mistaken for Spy and Given Death Sentence but a General Cancels Sentence

NATIVE OF N.S.

Yarmouth, N.S., June 14—(CP)—Pilot Officer Jack Hatfield's last letter home reveals how a British airman fell into the hands of the Nazis and how he was mistaken for a spy and given death sentence by a German court martial after having been shot down.

The letter was received by Hatfield's parents several weeks after he was reported missing by the Air Ministry. Hatfield, who is a native of nearby Tusket was wounded in his Netherlands escape and is under convalescing failed to return from active flying duty.

"Notations in my diaries," he said in his letter. "We sighted Dutch coast and I knew exactly which had just released their bombs. We attacked and a dog fight started.

"These dive bombers are very manoeuverable and are used as fighting planes. I was attacked from the dog fight. I shot down one Me7 and then 27 fast fighters appeared. The dive bombers had been used as bait and the fighters had been hiding in the sun.

"Before I realized it I had three on my tail. My plane was apparently hit, as the plane started to spin and I could not get control of him. I jumped and came down by parachute."

Shown on the rear platform of the train which took them from Halifax, Nova Scotia, to the Seigniory Club are some of the guests of the Canadian Pacific, holding her nine-months-old daughter, Princess Irene. At right one of the members of the party holds Juliana's eldest, Beatrix, now two and a half years old. Princess Juliana, Princess Irene and her children are to be the guests of the Earl of Athlone at Ottawa for the duration of the war.

Cleveland Players Demand Manager Oscar Vitt Be Fired Although Team in 2nd Place

Players Charge in Protest Insincerity, Ridiculing of Players and Caustic Criticism

DODGERS READY

Crucial Series to be Played in Flatbush This Coming Weekend With Reds

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

The baseball spotlight will be focused this weekend on the four-game collision of Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, in the hope the series will indicate the eventual National League champion.

Whether it will or not is open to question but there never will be a more dramatic setting for a test of power between two strong teams that are virtually deadlocked for the lead.

The ball park, seating approximately 35,000 persons, has been sold out for today, tomorrow and Sunday and police reserves had to be summoned in Brooklyn yesterday to clear away thousands of fans clamoring for tickets.

The pennants ever Cincinnati developed last summer has been reduced to insignificance by the ardor of Flatbush fans, who believe the reinforcements of outfielder Joe Medwick and pitcher Curt Davis will enable Brooklyn to crush all other contenders.

Both leagues swung into action on three fronts today, the National League in the eastern sector and the American in the west.

Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers staged a red-hot interlude yesterday while the other clubs were travelling and the Indians eventually triumphed 3-2 in 10 innings.

However, the big news from the Cleveland camp came some hours after they had won that game, in the form of a players' demand that manager Oscar Vitt be fired.

The mass protest followed a disastrous eastern swing and their charges included insincerity, vacillating of players, and caustic criticism.

The victory lifted the Tribe back into second place and gave Lefty Al Smith his sixth victory against one defeat, although he gave up 13 hits to the 10 collected by Cleveland.

Kiwanis Win League Opener

The league champion Kiwanis 'Kids' commenced the 1940 softball season exactly where they left off last summer when they trounced the Y's Men 16 to 13 in their initial game of the Service Clubs 'no kick' softball league Wednesday evening.

"Bunny" Miller and Teddy Follwell opposed each other on the mound and there was plenty of hitting in evidence throughout, as the K-boys scored runs in every inning, except the fifth, while the Y'Men were only kept off the score sheet in the fight and seventh frames.

Secretary Bruce Lattimer, Frank Pollock and the veteran Jack Domenico wielded potent bats for the victorious Kiwanis while Don Ridley paced the Y'men with three hits in as many tries. Murray Dougherty and Seymour helped the losers with occasional hits.

The lineups:

Kiwanis: Logan, Lattimer, Fox, Ted Pollock, Brown, Grant, Shaw, F. Follwell and Domenico.

Y's Men: Vaughan, Mulvey, J. Ridley, Mitchell, Ridley, Seymour, Dougherty, Russell and Weese.

LOUIS FIGURES A NEW PLAN TO STOP GODOY

Brown Bomber to Meet Crouch for Crouch in Bout on Thursday

OUT FOR REVENGE

Champion Says He Will Stop South American Before Limit of Bout

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

Greenwood Lake N.Y. June 14—(AP)—For the entertainment of the cash customers and the agony of Arturo Godoy, Joe Louis is planning to adopt the "South American way" himself for his heavyweight title defense against the crouching Chilean in Yankee stadium next Thursday night.

Still as peeved as all get-out over the way Godoy made him "look bad" in going 15 rounds in their first meeting last February, the champion and his brain trust have figured out a plan of battle whereby the bomber will meet crouch for crouch with Arturo the arrogant—and maybe even try to outcrouch him for a point or two.

Then from this position, for all the world like a couple of overstated grasshoppers out looking for breakfast, Joe will try to straighten Godoy up with an assortment of plain and fancy hooks to the body.

Up to now, the Bomber has been a pretty fair country clouter, but no one has ever accused him of boasting a particularly brilliant or diversified style. He has been a one track fighter—duck the left and hit pitch until the other fellow goes down. Whenever he has found any opposition even slightly unorthodox he got out of ordinary, but didn't know what to do. But Jack Blackburn, the military strategist of the champion's camp, has it all figured out this time.

Joe's out for revenge this time. As has been his policy since he made a fin in his grimacing for his first fight with Max Schmeling, Joe isn't picking his opponent, but he's intent on a knockout—"yes as soon as he can," big Mr. Godoy."

The Vikings climbed out of the cellar slot and pushed the Woolworth-Store girls into the lone cellar position slot.

Two more in the fourth and one each in the next two era in the fifth gave the winners a safe margin despite the fact the "5 & 10" lassies scored three in the first and four for the fifth inning. The Eaton Vikings catcher, sustained a badly bruised nose when struck by a foul ball in the fourth and was forced to retire in favor of Miss Zebedee.

The Zebedee lassie made an auspicious appearance in the league by batting the only home run of the game and added a single for good measure. Kempston and Ketcheson pounded out two hits each while Rita Rabbie, the Viking pitcher, helped her own cause with a single. Timely work by "Froopy" Hodges led the lassies on the attack with a double and three singles with three hits, including a triple and double.

Phil Marchildon Scores His Second Win of Season Due to Heavy Hitting

By The Associated Press

If Brooklyn Dodgers would like a little left-handed pitching strength to shore up their batting power they got through the purchase of Dicky Medwick, they can count on Kemp Wicker, the former Yankee, now twirling for Dodgers' Montreal farm club.

Wicker probably would get some mighty good recommendations from other managers that he be sent into faster company—for every time Kemp takes the mound in the first with Max Schmeling, Joe isn't picking his opponent. But he's intent on a knockout—"yes as soon as he can," big Mr. Godoy."

The second tournament of that nature to have been sponsored by the local Lawn Bowlers.

Charlie Sulman's rink composed of himself as skip, Fred Hall and Georgs Pauley and Mrs. Patterson won the main honors of life day with three wins high.

With two wins high L. E. McCann's rink of Mrs. Correll, T. Hefkey and Mrs. J. Legault was second while in a special doubles match Cliff Argue and Fred Harper won those honors.

All rinks were drawn prior to the tournament while silver spoons were presented the winner and donated by Haig Bros. Some 40 bowlers participated in the Red Cross matches.

Games Chairman Cliff Argue announced that a mixed jitney tournament would be held at the Bowling Club greens tonight.

War communique:

If General Bill McKechnie would issue a statement on the Medwick situation, it probably would read something like this: "The Rhinestone face its greatest crisis in history. . . If necessary, we'll fight it out in the streets of Cincinnati."

A tentative committee composed of representatives from several branches of sport in Belleville met at an impromptu meeting recently in hopes of formulating plans whereby a city golf day could be arranged at the Fair Grounds with all proceeds to be given to the Red Cross or some other patriotic organization. Although there is absolutely nothing concrete on the proposal as yet, the idea as suggested is to field girls' and men's softball games, an impromptu track meet, including public and open professionals relay races and other sporting attractions that might be included to provide an interesting afternoon's entertainment. If deemed advisable the outing will be held at the Exhibition Park and perhaps conclude with a band concert, dance and carnival fun inside one of the park buildings. Representatives from the Belleville Softball and Ladies' Softball Leagues were present to express their eagerness to act on a committee to organize such a patriotic day. We hope to have more concrete information on the matter later.

Two former Belleville boys usurped the headlines in a Northern Ontario newspaper recently when Keith Carter, Weeks and Ralph "High-pockets" McCabe banged up in a seven-game nine-inning affair that was terminated by darkness, Sturgeon Falls' ambitious pitchers restricted their opposition to eight hits. Ralph Joseph McCabe's mound aid manage to push three runners around to the last corner safely. For McCabe is pitching for the Malartic, Que., team, considered one of the best in northwest Quebec, while Weeks is pitching for a Timmins, Ont., team. Both Weeks and McCabe learned the rudiments of baseball as juniors in Belleville. "Bunny" Murray Morgan, "Shad" Eshler, Art Scarlet, Weeks and McCabe are only local lads in the new playing ball in the north, who once appeared in Belleville. Lawrence Dingle, Walter Gerow is coaching ball up north this season and Jack Bell Belleville we aren't even as much as sponsoring baseball in the city here, which is indeed lamentable.

Do you remember when hockey lost its gre.test goaltender, Charlie Gardiner died suddenly and the Chicago Black Hawks, six years ago today? One scribe penned a glowing tribute at the age of 30, only two months after Chicago had won the Stanley Cup, as the end of peak of his spectacular career in National League circles.

"In a few weeks the baseball writers who pick the halos for players destined to an immortality will be naming more Hall of Fame players," points out Sporid Service of St. Louis Post - Dispatch. "Rogers Hornsby, now definitely out of active play for a couple of seasons, is eligible. If he doesn't go over we haven't think of any who should. No player of recent times is better deserves a place in the Hall of Fame than Hornsby. He holds the highest modern batting average for one season, .424. He batted above .400 three times and only Ty Cobb has had a lifetime hitting percentage of .358. He led the league in batting seven times, ran in row and was regarded as one of the best second base defenders of modern times.

The heads of the Ladies' Softball League would be well advised to legislate a ruling whereby all catchers in the local girls' softball loop would be compelled to wear a catcher's mask. Last night Catcher Eva Adams of the Vikings, sustained a severe facial injury and deeply discolored eye when struck in the face with a foul tip and was forced to retire. It is recalled Miss Zebedee, was struck in the face by the next night's game fortunately escaped injury. Before some girl catcher is real seriously injury the team managers should compel their catchers to wear a mask. That ball is a lively missile only and can inflict a serious facial injury. Some of the league catchers feel they cannot wear a mask unaccustomed to handicaps their view. A softball mask is light and gives full vision, but affords a fine protection desired. Incidentally the Vikings broke into the win column with a 15 to 9 win over the "Big-Nickel" store last night and the fish adjourn to the Collegiate this evening.

That veteran of the bowling green, Charlie Sulman, again skipped his local rink a tournament victory yesterday when his four best winning lawn bowling tournaments in three years under the age of 40 years in a single day. Yesterday the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club staged a mixed jitney tournament in aid of the Red Cross and although the weather sent enthusiasts, a goodly sum was realized for the fund. Chairman Cliff Argue and the club challenge doubles will open early next week, so select your partner and get into the swing.

Now that Larry McPhail has started the ball rolling for business, the latest out is that Cleveland and Detroit are dickering for a trade for Joe Medwick. Curt Davis flew by plane from Buffalo to Brooklyn as soon as they were notified of their becoming Daffinessmen, and with one exception Boston, all of the American League teams are absolutely every the cornish of the Yankees, however.

SPORT SPICE—Al Weill, manager of Arturo Godoy the Chilean heavyweight, who meets champion Arthur Donovan as the proposed third man in the ring for the Joe Louis-Godoy bout..... "Donovan has refereed every championship bout in which Louis has fought. It may only be a coincidence but I'll be on my own look right and we want no part of Donovan in this affair." Well, Larry McPhail is upping the price of tickets for the week end Canada Cup baseball series ..... After all he's got to pay for the cost of the trip to Montreal some way..... The American League all-star game of six million, established in 1934, may be upped this year. President Harridge predicts.....

Sports Roundup

New York, June 14—(AP)—Billy Southworth sure got a cheerful welcome to St. Louis. Day he was appointed manager of the team and wired him: "Morale of club at lowest ebb in history. . . Rumors flying around Aguedust say Challedon, No. 1 horse of 1939, will not start in the races until late in the season. Very uncertain if Seabiscuit will be in the Brooklyn Handicap June 29.

When more and better runs are batted in, learn to be a chap named Sanders with Columbus, (Ga.) in the Sally League. So far he's knocked in 74 in 50 games. . . . Joe Medwick and the war news were 50-50 in Brooklyn front page space yesterday. . . . Here's another of the spelling bees heard from Herman (Patty's kid brother) came up with the only double eagle ever scored in an attempt at it.

How To Overcome Piles
And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems like the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so highly endorsed, can be had at such a reasonable cost. Bancroft

Bancroft —(Special)— A quiet wedding took place Monday when Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Krieger, was united in marriage to Richard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hermon Weiner.

Mr. Cecil Wiggins, accompanied by Miss Jean Bowen, Mrs. George Bowen and Mrs. Gustave Hartz motored to Trenton Tuesday evening, Mrs. Bowen and Mrs. Hartzwith leaving for Toronto to attend Mr. Duncan McLellan, their father-in-law, who is seriously ill in the Toronto General Hospital.

The ladies of the local L.O.B.A. met in the Orange Hall Monday evening and packed twenty-nine boxes containing sox and tobacco for the boys overseas who enlisted from this district. This arrangement was made possible from the proceeds of the previous dances held in the Hall under the auspices of the L.O.B.A. and L.O.L. lodges of Bancroft.

Funeral of Lale Mrs. R. Kidd

The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon of the late Mrs. Robert Kidd who passed away at Kingston on Sunday. The funeral took place in the Standard Mission Church and was conducted by the Rev. Mr. A. Dunning. Interment taking place in Mount Pleasant Cemetery at Bancroft.

Miss B. Haase, accompanied by Mrs. F. Russell, motored to Belleville Wednesday morning on business. Returning home in the evening they were accompanied by Miss Urale Russell and Miss Annie Hudson.

Car Damaged

A slight accident occurred on Main Street in Bancroft about two fifteen Thursday morning when a car driven by John Peters struck a parked car owned by Mr. James Arkile. The car driven by Peters was left in gear and parked in front of Mr. Arkile' residence, was driven up on the sidewalk a distance of about five feet by the impact of the Peters' car. Considerable damage was done to the Arkile car in which the left rear fender, bumper and tail light were torn off. The car was by blamed the visibility for the accident. Constable S. Palmateer investigated the accident and later lodged John Peters in the village jail charged with driving a car while intoxicated and also with reckless driving.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wiggins, accompanied by Mr. Cecil Wiggins, have the element of the fresh, novel and entirely practical about them, and the best recipe for launching worthwhile projects that will stand the test of merit, and while the friendly aid of superiors and employers is imperative these may have to be approached with tact rather than insistence or boldness. A child born on this day may be aggressive, audacious, high strung and impetuous in a combination that may prove its self-undoing, unless trained in tact and diplomacy. Its quick temper and lack of moderation should be disciplined.

Easier Prices Noted for Butter

Toronto, June 14—Easier prices were again reported for butter as trading continued to lag on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Eggs maintained a firm tone on top grades, but grade C declined.

Buyers still opened on a hand-to-mouth basis on the butter market, making it difficult to clear all current supplies. Brokers, however, reported no surplus stocks beneath some. Price on No. 1 Ontario Seagram was quoted at 22 1-2 cents per pound, although some points endeavoured to obtain 1-4c higher. Outside of C grades, which declined under slow demand, the week's market was firm. At former levels Receipts were on the light side, but the volume of trade tended to increase the number of lower grades offered. Local shipments were here. Storage packed and Government inspected. First of Maginot Line Held Intact

On the eastern extremity of the front, he said, "our divisions have until today succeeded in holding intact the west of the Maginot line at Montmedy and in holding the German drive in the Argonne and in eastern Champagne, while on the rest of the Champagne front enemy armies are advancing toward Romilly and St. Dizier."

"Of the enemy push into the line the fresh divisions he still has in reserve, the unhinging of the position at Montmedy will become in-

MASONIC NOTICE

The members of the Masonic Fraternity and Sister Orders of the district, are requested to meet at the Masonic Temple on Sunday, June 16th, at 10:15 a.m. for the purpose of attending Divine service at Bridge Street United Church.

By order Carl D. Crosby, Secretary.

evitable," the spokesman added. This is why the Government last night ordered the battle south-west.

"It is important," he went on, "that international opinion should understand that the enemy attacks the vanguard army of the democracies, has not succeeded, despite the terrific difficulties, its fight to the end.

"But we are less numerous. The lengthening of the front is forcing us to put in reserves that in our dispositions have lost their depth. We have not almost no reserve. We have no material.

Planes and Tanks Are Necessary

"This is the full meaning of the appeal addressed to France's Government by [illegible] Reynaud. Planes and tanks must be sent to us by the thousands. That is necessaries for whom we are fighting. It is the only way to safeguard today the solidarity of the democracies. Then, in the words of Reynaud's speech, "the day of resurrection will come."

The German thrust reached the gates of Paris last night, it was officially disclosed. Nowhere have they found only the unarmed Metropolitan police who had remained in the deserted capital to maintain order. All communication between Paris and the rest of France were cut.

French Army Withdrawn in Two Directions

The French army which had fought in front of Paris in the h300 days of fighting withdrew in good order in two parts, one to the east and one to the south-west, it was said to join south of the capital. The historic bridges over the Seine in Paris were prepared.

Pouring southward, too, were thousands upon thousands of cars of vehicles, and workers following the evacuation of scores of the big industrial centres, where the war effort will be pushed to the utmost.

Continue Battle to "Most Complete Order"

With almost superhuman courage, the French troops continued their battle to "the most complete order" as the morning communique of the high command phrased it.

The communique said the troops defending Paris had withdrawn in conformity with orders of the high command, under accentuated German pressure.

The communique said that to the east of the capital the German spearheads striking southward from Chalons-sur-Marne were "continuing their progress" to be heading" toward Romilly and St. Dizier, Romilly is about 40 miles southeast of Chateau Thierry and St. Dizier the same distance southeast of Chalons-sur-Marne.

Reynaud's Appeal

The withdrawal from the Paris sector followed Premier Reynaud's dramatic declaration that the nation's very existence was at stake and his appeal for immediate aid from the United States.

In a radio address to the French people last night Reynaud said he closed he had addressed a new and final appeal to President Roosevelt.

"The superiority in quality of British aviation is showing itself," M. Reynaud said. "It is the explanation for clouds of war planes from beyond the Atlantic which increase the power which is dominating Europe."

British Premier Utmost Confidence

Immediately after the premier's speech the British government sent a message to the French premier pledging the "utmost aid in her power" and proclaiming the indissoluble union" of the French and British peoples and empires.

"We renew to the French Republic our pledge and resolve to continue the struggle side by side with France, in this island, upon the ocean and in the air wherever it may lead us, until we have delivered to the utmost limits and sharing together the burden and the miseries, ravages of war," the British message said.

Wrong Must Be Righted.

"We shall never turn from the conflict until France stands and is secret in all her grandeur until the wrong and the violence done to her and to slaved states and people have been liberated and until civilization is free from the peril which now threatens it.

"That this day will dawn we are more and more confident and we shall sooner than we now have the right to expect."

Reynaud painted a vivid and dramatic picture of the plight of the French armies, with the enemy standing in the path of the onrushing German waves for ten days for the battle.

"I have been, in the name of France, Reynaud said, "coming from battle, men who had not slept for five days and nights but who remained fearless by marching and fighting. These men are determined to the enemy thought he could shatter, had no doubt about the final result of the war, they did not think of the safety of the country.

Seat of Government Is Not Conquered.

"The heroism of the armies at Dunkerque has been surpassed in the battles which have been fought from the sea to the Argonne.

"The soul of France is not conquered."

Reynaud said the French race will not allow itself to be beaten by invasion. He said free men everywhere must realize the danger and move to France and that "the time has come for them to pay their debt.

"Wounded France has a right to turn toward the other democracies and say to them: 'I have a claim on you'," the premier declared.

"During the sad trials of their history our people have known days about the future seemed bounded by counsels of defeatism. It is because they have understood that they were great.

Day of Resurrection Will Come.

"Whatever may be the days ahead she French are going to have the right to say they have been worthy of the nation's history; they have become brotherly! May they thereby deserve victory and freedom! The day of resurrection will come!

With the capital and the vast industrial works abandoned southwestward to the enemy, it appeared that a new "industrial Maginot Line" was being built underground in the south-west to protect the remnants of the Paris district.

The plans primarily concerned are those turning out munitions and planes. They have been excavated to a good depth in places since a long time ago against just such an emergency as this.

War Industry Magnet Line.

When it becomes necessary to work underground to avoid air bombing, a kind of war industry Maginot Line will come into actual use.

Among the streams of refugees pouring southward from Paris could be seen gigantic heavy flat-car trailers carrying the machinery of industry at great speed toward the south-west.

Other trucks crowded with working men were passing in the same direction.

The morning high command communique said:

"On both sides of Paris the resistance of the enemy army has been counteracted. Because of this advance, the troops covering Paris have fallen back on the north of the city in conformity with orders of the high command. The high command, in renouncing the direct defence of the capital—now an open city—has left to the commander-in-chief of the Paris district the responsibility for the measures of police which this defence would have involved. Nevertheless, the general strategic result justified the sacrifice of the capital.

"On the vast Champagne front, the enemy armies are advancing. Rainfalls yesterday and the night have slowed down the movements of advanced elements appear to be heading toward Romilly on the east side and Saint-Dizier, on the other. Our fighting and our movements are continuing in order to complete the operation."

As the Germans smashed southward it appeared that the French government, which went to Tours from Paris, would be compelled to move again to escape the advancing German armies.

Armored Columns At Leviers.

Parts of the German motorized armored columns last night "began to pour over" the Seine River at Leviers, 30 miles from Paris, driving toward toward Pacy-Sur-Eure and Evreux, which are 15 miles and 30 miles below the river, the high command said. The Germans bombed Dreux, which is 40 miles west of Paris and slightly south.

Dreux "appear to be heading" to-

North of Paris "twelve divisions at least"— perhaps 180,000 men—are driving toward Meaux, Senlis and Betz, about 25 miles away. Some German units were reported only 15 miles west of here.

Meaux, east, south of the Marne—where the battle was "still more violent than on the preceding days"—is about 15 miles south of Chateau Thierry and Dormans toward Montmirail, which is 15 miles south of the river and 55 miles due east of Paris.

A fourth major field of action was still farther east, where powerful German forces operating from the Reims sector were plunging southward toward Chalons-Sur-Marne— 90 miles east of the capital and 25 miles southeast of Reims.

These operations were a threat to the flank of the Maginot Line, anchored at Montmedy, 60 miles to the northeast.

SAYS BRITAIN

The policy is to put into the field as soon as the biggest army possible—briefly: a maximum of soldiers in a minimum of time—they said. Not for a long time to come across the Atlantic for a large British Army.

Need is Immediate Future

They said Britain wants from the United States, these sources said, are the weapons needed immediately, manufactured in the close of the last war to replace those lost from August 1939 to date.

For instance, they mentioned the certain need for machine-tools for the manufacture of tanks, tractors and aeroplanes.

While she is planning to go all the way in renewed to men, money and supplies, Britain still is keeping in sight that her capacity may be reduced by bombing as the war goes on, these sources continued.

Hence the need for certain need for finished war products as well as for raw materials to take the place of losses of ore and other material.

BRITISH ARMY

"We Have Waited Long Time,"

"We have waited for this a long time," said one young subaltern. "We are only sorry that we have not have a cut at both the Germans and Mussolini at the same time. Perhaps the Italians will be kind enough to wait on us."

Reynaud went to France "thousands" of soldiers who had been brought from the British Isles to the British lines from threatened Nazi invasion. Simultaneously, Premier Reynaud that "We cannot measure the various forms of the danger that will fall upon our peoples in the near future."

The British message expressed determination "to continue the struggle side by side in France, in this island, upon the ocean and in the air wherever it may lead us, until we have delivered to the utmost limits."

Ministry of Information said that "all available troops and material are being sent to help the French. The army is collecting all possible vessels to transport and bring across for its expeditious dispatch."

The Royal Air Force pounded at objectives in France, Africa and Norway in the last 24 hours, announced the Air Ministry announced last night.

British bombers struck at Nazi troop concentrations and communications behind the French from the channel coast to the Belgian frontier, starting fires and explosions that important roads and railways were destroyed, and ammunition dumps and destroyed near Saint-Quentin, Amiens, Abbeville and Arras. Enfires, and blasted an ammunition dump at Cambrai, the communique said.

Italian bombers staged five air raids on British Mediterranean naval base at Malta yesterday, Britain announced last night, and reported that "within a few days some scheme will be made known" to give the people of Malta assurance of their families' economic status.

The British said that the third British armed merchant cruiser reported lost in the war, The others were the Rawalpindi, 16,697 tons, sunk during a battle with the German battleship Scharnhorst and Nov. 23, and the Carinthia, 20,277 tons, sunk yesterday of which was announced June 8.

52 MILLIONS

The establishments, he added, would be located according to calculations of technical officers although many considerations had been received from municipalities and public bodies that they be placed in their areas.

"Over - energetic representations from public bodies in various localities," he said, "can only serve to delay the decision as to where from their duties officers already completely engrossed in their essential work are essential importance.

"Our partners in the plan—our Allies—will readily appreciate the urgency which lies behind the purpose of the scheme and will give it consideration in areas of heavy snowfall.

Mr. Power gave details of a total of $12,458,330, it was proposed to spend on buildings for schools and "other matters" at 26 different points. All these projects are either under way now or to be started within a few weeks.

He did not detail the use of other monies making up the $52,000,000 total.

COL. J. L. RALSTON

Not long ago, when Conservative members suggested Mr. King should make way for a great governor, Mr. King had mentioned Col. Ralston as a man in whom confidence might be placed.

The Finance Minister sat through the Prime Minister's speech in the boomlet without any show that he heard the expressions of confidence in his colleague. He was quite unperturbed by Mr. King's announcement yesterday.

"In agreeing to this request," Mr. King said, "Col. Ralston has been actuated by that high sense of public duty which has governed his activities and actions throughout the whole of his public life."

Next year is to succeed the Next Defence Minister in the Finance portfolio is Revenue Minister Ilsley, another Nova Scotian as was Mr. Rogers.

But what is coming in the way of shuffling or enlarging of the cabinet to ease the wartime-burden of government administration was not indicated.

When and if such moves come Mr. Ilsley has a Postmaster-General's job to fill, to relieve Air Minister Power who presently is Postmaster-General. Transport Minister Howe, who is also Minister of Munitions and Supply, likely will drop one or other portfolio.

Mr. Howe, lawyer and soldier, is one of the ablest of Parliamentarians and one of the most experienced members, of the cabinet. He left politics 20 years ago and returned only last September to take the Finance Ministry when illness forced the retirement of Finance Minister Ilsley.

During his retirement to private life he practised law in Montreal and twice served as council for Manning Depot, Repair Depot, Repair Depot and Training Schools; Wireless School; Repair Depot).

INSTALMENT 11.

"Please come with me," he said impulsively. "I want to talk to you."

Five minutes later she was following the stranger across the deck of a smug little cruiser. He turned on the lights, perhaps an attractive cabin, then led the way into a cosy-ed galley which was like a doll-house, she thought, as they scrambled eggs and made toast and coffee. For a little while he made no attempt to talk seriously to her and she reminded her of the days at Nina's. Conversation and laughter and the flattering attention of a man she had already decided was the most interesting she had ever known.

When they finished eating he lighted a pipe and said, "Now suppose you tell me all about it. What is bothering you, Linda?"

She replied quickly, "Oh, no!"

"Then it must be money."

Not in the habit of confiding, Star hesitated, then she said, "It's just that I haven't any and I can't get work. I used to be secretary to a writer, Mrs. Lambert. Miss Lambert. Perhaps you've heard of her?"

He smiled as he answered, "Yes, I have. What happened to make you lose your position with Mrs. Lambert?"

"Mrs. Lambert was a lovely person to work for," Star said loyally. "But she is going to Europe."

He looked at her curiously before he asked, "Without trying to find another place for you?"

Star's eyes clouded.

"She offered to," she admitted, "But I wouldn't let her."

He leaned toward her, saying decisively, "See here, if I'm going to help you I'll have to have the whole story. Either tell me everything or nothing."

Despite the old clothes he wore, there was an air of authority about him. Backed with his strength and a kind face, he gave an impression of cynicism. This man has been hurt, too, Star thought. He has been away for a week but he admitted-ly did not want to discuss the whole. Why? For the first time in her life a man had aroused her imagination.

"Which is to be?"

"I'll tell you everything," she agreed.

It was wonderful to confide in him. Reserve was part of her instinct for self-preservation but to pour her troubles into his sympathetic ear made her feel that she was no longer alone. Whether or not he could help was not so important as the fact that she shared her problem.

When she stopped, he said, "I understand it all now. Better probably than you do, and far from being hopeless, you have nothing whatever to worry about."

He tore a leaf from a notebook on the table and wrote an address on it saying, "Be there at nine o'clock to-morrow morning and there will be a position for you."

"But what shall I say?"

"Nothing. Just give the girl at the information desk your name. That's all that will be necessary."

"What shall I have to do? How do you know I can do it?"

"It will be a stenographic job," he assured her. "That's what you wanted, isn't it?"

Star nodded, but she could not understand why he would not tell her the name of the firm of his own position there.

"And now we must go," he said briskly. "I think we can pick up a taxi at the corner."

He drew a wallet from his pocket and gave her a bill.

"This is an advance on your first week's salary. We'll start you at twenty a week."

Star gasped. "How do you know I'll be worth that much?"

"Any one who can satisfy Nina Lambert is worth that much," he assured her.

Star wanted to ask him if he knew Nina personally, but his manner did not encourage questioning and presently they were in a taxi bound for her rooming house. When she left him, she said shyly, "I don't know how to thank you but I promise to do my best."

"You'd better wait until tomorrow before you make any promises," he replied.

It was exactly nine o'clock as Star walked into the rooming house and paid her landlady for another week.

The woman looked at her curiously.

"Found work huh?"

"Yes," Star said proudly, "I have." She did not see the sardonic smile which followed her.

In bed at last Star covers high about her shoulders, and reflected on the astonishing events of the last day. Her income for one thin time. She was sure of it. Every nerve in her body screamed with it, but, she had seemed completely empty, surrounded by a void of new possibilities, all of which had come to her through a man whose name she did not know. Not even his name to call him. She had told him things she had never told any other human being. He knew all about her and had still offered her a position. She had even told him about Graham and her suspicions of Joe.

Then the next morning when she sought the address he had given her she realized why he had said to her, "You'd better wait before you make any promises."

The building belonged to a well-known magazine for which Nina Lambert's editor had telephoned and worked. It hadn't been a month to remind her employer that she had planted them a story. Which then was the man who had promised her work? Well, she would soon know, Star thought, presenting herself at the door.

The girl behind the cage looked at her without interest.

"Oh, yes, Miss Bright, you're to go to Mr. Wood's office. Down the hall and to the right."

Had she the man who had befriended her was. The reason his face had seemed familiar was that she had met him at Nina's. He had been present at one of those first impression-crowded afternoons. She could remember Nina's saying, "This is my new secretary, Milton! Mr. Milton Wood, Star." Milton Wood, business manager of the magazine which published Nina's stories.

Star had now reached his door, which she timidly pushed open. There was only a secretary inside, busily typing at a desk in a small cubicle which opened into her employer's office.

"Mr. Wood isn't down yet," she said. "But you may wait here if you like. He telephoned that he is expecting you."

Star sat in a corner watching this other girl, wishing that she might be his secretary. Perhaps she would some day. That is, if she tried very hard and made good. But she must ask him not to tell Nina where she was. She never wanted to see either Nina or Bob again.

How strange that she should be working here where Nina's stories were published! He had recognized her the night before, of course! That was why he had been so kind. With a sudden sinking feeling, Star realized that she was disappointed. She would have preferred that he had helped her without knowing any more about her than she did about him.

INSTALMENT 12.

Milton Wood was much more impressive looking in business clothes than he had been in sweater and slacks. If Star had seen him then as he was now in the doorway of his office, she could not have confided in him. But his smile was just as kind as it had been the night before as he said, "Good morning, Miss Bright. I'll be with you in just a moment."

His secretary followed him inside and closed the door but it was not long until she reappeared.

"Mr. Wood will see you now, Miss Bright."

It was all very impersonal and businesslike, but Star's heart was pounding with excitement. Suppose he had changed his mind about her during the night? But no, already she knew him well enough to believe he would not do that. And she was right. He acted as if the uncertainly were on her side.

He said, "I hope you will forgive me for not reminding you that we had met at Nina's, but I decided it was wiser to wait until you were feeling better."

"When did you recognize me?" she asked.

"As soon as I saw you. You passed me on your way to the end of the pier but you didn't even know it, did you?"

No, she had been too immersed in her bitter thoughts to see any one.

"You aren't exactly the kind of person a man would forget," he added unexpectedly.

Star glanced at him in surprise.

"But you saw me only once and that was weeks ago."

"I remember perfectly, but I shouldn't expect you to recall the faces of as many strangers as you must have met that day."

How kind and unpretentious he was! The most unassuming man she had ever seen. Conscious of her embarrassment, he said encouragingly, "I have arranged for you to go to work in the stenographic department immediately."

She heard was on the bumer to summon his secretary when Star said pleadingly, "You won't tell Bob where I am?"

"Of course not."

"Is there any chance of Mrs. Lambert's coming down here before she goes?"

"Very little chance of her seeing you if she does. My secretary tells me they are sailing the end of this week. Nina wants to see me before they go but you need not worry. I shan't give you away."

Star said, "Thank you", and walked toward the door.

Working in an office was very different from working with Nina, but after the first few days she became accustomed to it and turned out copy so rapidly that no one could doubt her ability. If there had been any suspicion as to the reason she had been hired, it soon disappeared. This girl with the tragically beautiful face and cheap clothes was also a first-rate stenographer. Her work as well as her manner won respect. She came to work and left quickly, making no effort to be friendly, but her rare smile was worth waiting for, and the fact that she made no claims and asked no favors was a high recommendation with the other employees who soon discovered by the grapevine method operating in every office that she had been hired by Milton Wood.

Star did not even see him for almost a month, but there was never a week that did not hope that she would. Always then would be the remote possibility that his secretary might be ill and that some one else might substitute for her. The more Star thought about it the more astonishing that evening at the yacht harbor seemed.

Later, if he did recognize her, it had been wonderful of him to follow her and find out what was wrong. He had changed the entire trend of her life, and put her faltering feet on firm ground. Was it any wonder that she put him on a pedestal and worshiped him? Was it any wonder he was probably the one man in the world who could be trusted and she believed that in his heart he was as lonely and almost as shy as she was. They had been very close in spirit that night on his boat. She had wanted to stay with him as she had never been with any one else as she had eaten scramble eggs and make coffee. They had laughed together and later when she confided in him there had been tears in his gray eyes. Night after night after she had gone to bed, Star relived the scene until it took on an added significance. Some day she was going to see something in his face to show her why she would be able to repay him.

At the end of one of those afternoons from the rooming house to a better one where she had an inexpensive but cheerful room. There were other young people there who ate in the dining-room at the same table with her, but Star was so absorbed in her dreams that she was scarcely conscious of them.

She lived now for her job, which was more fascinating than any amusement. She liked the atmosphere of the busy place and began to take a personal interest in the magazine, which she read from cover to cover. It seemed strange to see the same stories she had typed for Nina. Jim Nina and Bob were now safely in Europe. Star wasted little time thinking about either of them. She could see now that Nina had been right to refuse her consent to their marriage although her method of stopping it was cruel. Star was too old for Bob. Her life had not fitted her to be the wife of a boy like Bob. She needed an older man, just as Nina had said. Not Milton Wood, of course! But some one like him. Some one kind and cynical and a little shy and about his age which Star decided must be in the early thirties.

Secure in the fact that she was self-supporting, Star did not realize that she was living in a dream world. The day that she was able to start a bank account was the proudest of her life. She would have no chance ever again being left with only a dime. A definite percentage of her salary was banked every week. The amount remaining was enough for her room and board and even permitted her to put aside a bit for the clothes she must buy in the fall.

She deliberately closed her mind to the thought of Hank. Her mother had refused to help her when she needed it, and Star told herself she was under no further obligation.

At night she went to an occasional concert or movie alone. She continued the reading course Nina had recommended and she was happy until the day in early September when she was forced to realize how much of that happiness was based on a false presumption.

The day for which she had longed finally arrived. Mr. Wood's secretary was ill and a stenographer was requested from Star's department. Perhaps because she had prayed for it so long, perhaps because of the excellence of her work, she was the one to be chosen. She walked into the business manager's office feeling as if she must be floating on a cloud. What a thrill it would be to be alone with him, take his dictation! She had dreamed of it many times but he was even kinder than she had imagined. His face lighted up at sight of her as he said, "Well, it's been a long time since I've seen you. How are you getting along?"

"Just fine, Mr. Wood."

"Like your job?"

"I love it," she declared.

It was then, while her face was radiated with admiration and gratitude, that Mr. Wood saw the small picture on his desk. It hadn't been there before. She was sure of that.

It was a photograph of one of the most beautiful women Star had ever seen. She had a classic perfection of feature which was accentuated by shining blond hair piled high on her beautiful head. The fur collar wore was arranged with studied grace about a flawless throat. Every detail of her costume was perfect. Star glanced furtively before her employer spoke what he would say.

"That is the latest photograph of my wife," he explained.

"She is very beautiful," the girl answered automatically.

She should have known that he would be married. Men like that always have wives. It had been silly of her to assume merely because he had been alone at Nina's the day that he was unattached. Besides what difference did it possibly make to Star Bright whether he was married or not? She hadn't been good enough to marry Bob and this man was as far above Bob as...

BRITAIN TO SPURN ANY PEACE OFFER

'Peace Offensive' By Hitler Expected Soon by Britain

Allied Reverses in France May Encourage Nazi Leader to Hope for Peace at Own Terms

WILL CONTINUE FIGHT

Regardless of Outcome of Present Battle Britain is in the War to the End

London, June 15—(CP)—Official Britain, anticipating an early "peace offensive" by Adolf Hitler on the heels of Allied reverses in France, stated that "whatever happens, Britain will fight on."

While London newspapers rallied at times British leadership for "complacency" and "fantastic unpreparedness", British radio commentator said "the prospect of American intervention" more than counterbalanced the events of this "blackest week in history" for Britain and France.

British official circles described the withdrawal from Paris as "a military, and a political decision," and predicted that France would continue to fight. Regarding of the outcome however, they declared Britain is in the war to the end.

Late war editions of London morning newspapers carried stories and pictures of fresh contingents of the British Expeditionary Forces bound for France. The Government, pledging the "utmost aid in her power," has dipped into its home defence units to strengthen the B.E.F.

The "blond bombshell" starred in the choruses of "Sally" and "The Show Must Go On" in the world," and after the concert choked out a tearful farewell in the Friendship commendation on the eve of her departure for the United States.

"I'll be back by September —Good luck, and I hope you do something to Hitler," were Miss Fields' parting words.

Miss Fields' tour was cut short yesterday when its sponsors, the Navy League of Canada, decided to put off the big Victory Loan campaign to raise money for Canada's part in the effort.

SHIPS SUNK DURING WEEK

More than 210,000 tons of Italian shipping either fell into Allied hands or was scuttled by Italian crews following Italy's entry into the war. A detailed list of the Italian losses was not available.

British losses during the week included the former liners Carinthia and Caledonia, each of more than 20,000 tons, but they were no longer merchant vessels, having been turned into armed cruisers at the beginning of the war.

The extension of the war to the Mediterranean was reflected in the loss of three Greek ships, totalling 12,385 tons, during the week. One Swedish vessel of 1,828 tons also was sunk.

Helsinki, June 15 (AP)—Henry W. Anthiel, Jr., of Trenton, N.J., attached to the United States Legation in Helsinki, was killed in the mysterious explosion of a Finnish air liner yesterday which took him and other persons lost their lives.

Spokesmen said Anthiel was on "courier service" but had no authority to say whether he was acting as a courier in the delivery of documents from Berlin. His identity was not made public until today.

The governments of Finland and Estonia began an investigation to determine whether sabotage was involved in the loss of the plane, bound from Tallinn, Estonia, to Helsinki.

Princess Juliana Carries on Same as Other Guests at Club

Telephones Herself for an Appointment With Hairdresser

DRESSES SIMPLE

By DOUGLAS AMARON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montebello, Que., June 15 (CP)—Separation by 4,000 miles of land and sea from Holland has not dimmed the love of Princess Juliana for her war-torn country nor her desire to serve her people as best she can.

The Dutchlands have been ravished by the Nazis. Parts may yet be the Netherlands Empire has been forced to seek refuge in Canada. But even from this distance, at the Seigniory Club, 45 miles from Ottawa, she is doing her part.

Because the Princess left fully aware of the privations the war has wrought upon the people of Holland she herself has yielded some of the prerogatives of royalty. She has done this partly as an example to her people and partly because of economy, so that funds she might be using can be put to better service at home.

The Princess and her two young daughters, Princess Irene, 18, and Princess Margriet, 11, arrived here on Thursday from Halifax after a rapid train trip from England in a travelling with a small entourage.

The main party consists only of eight persons, the three members of the Princess' family and Lt. Van Van Steenwijk and his wife, the Princess' Lady-in-waiting, Baroness Van Heeckeren Van Kell, and the children's nurse. In addition there is a small English detective guard.

Princess Juliana, it is learned today, declined the suite she might have had at the Seigniory Club and which had been prepared for her, preferring to live as other guests and two single rooms.

The Princess has ordered a private dining room and has taken her meals with other club guests in the main dining room. Princess Irene and members of the party dine with her in the same room.

Her dress has been simple she telephoned herself for an appointment with the hairdresser, and she has spent the time since her arrival as much the same manner as any other guest at a summer resort.

"Paris May Yet Rise Again" Says Herald Tribune in Editorial

New York, June 15—(CP)—The fall of Paris, Paris the beautiful, Paris the city of light, became the main theme of editorial comment in New York's leading morning newspapers today.

"The city will stand," declared The Times. "Paris may yet rise again," echoed The Herald Tribune.

"The barbaric Hakenfreux floats over that proud and lovely capital," said The Herald Tribune. "The savage children of the Nazi gospel of the robot beliefs were pouring through the great boulevards. Yards, miles of them, down to the city which 20 short years ago was mistress of the world and which now they have conquered.

"In a day or two, no doubt, the new attila will be there to celebrate his triumph; the unbalanced post-card painter, the unknown corporal who fought from end to end in 1918 when he learned that Germany had surrendered, will stand among them.

"So long as the Nazi horde remains in occupation, Paris is dead.

Said The Times:

"The shell (of Paris) witnesses the obscene triumph of a man and an idea that have invaded not only a city but a century, out of the gospel of the past. But it is only the shell that Hitler has captured. He has not conquered Paris. Nor even can he, his tanks, his robot battalions penetrate within the precincts of that magic city. For all their violence, it remains inviolate, forever."

FRENCH LAUNCH COUNTER-ATTACKS AT MANY POINTS

Army Fighting Determined Rearguard Action Along Whole Front and is Still Intact

ATTACKS LESS VIOLENT

Units of French Fleet Out to Strike First Major Blow Against Italy

Tours, June 15—(AP)—The armies of General Maxime Weygand withdrew before the driving pressure of the German legions today, launching counter-attacks at several points and fighting determined rearguard actions along the whole front from the Argonne to the sea.

There were indications that the hard-pressed, weary defenders, despite their surrender of Paris, still were intact and were checking the Nazi push in some sectors.

The high command, in its communique late last night, reported the battle continuing on the entire front but with "less violence" at certain points. It announced, too, that the "retirements are being made according to plans."

The Nazis' eastern flank, with German forces from the centre occupying the capital, had pushed down to Romilly, 65 miles southeast of Paris, and to St. Dizier, 100 miles southeast slightly south of Paris on the road to Nancy and 45 miles southwest of Montmedy.

In its relation to Montmedy, western end of the Maginot Line, this thrust represented a threat to the French mid-section.

The German flank west of Paris advanced.

TAX COLLECTOR GIVEN JAIL TERM

Clark Butler, Convicted of Theft of Township Funds Over Nine-Year Period

Lindsay, Ont., June 15 (CP).—Clark Butler, former tax collector for Somerville Township, was sentenced yesterday to two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory after being convicted of theft of $8,131 in township funds over a nine-year period.

He was sentenced by Judge D. B. Coleman, Whitby, after a jury concluded two hours of deliberation by bringing in a verdict of guilty.

Edward Tennant, provincial accountant, testified he had audited the township books and found shortages totalling $8,131 from Jan. 1, 1931, to Dec. 31, 1939, however, a move for recovery of any of this money and said he could not explain the shortages.

Butler based his defence mainly on the contention he was not the only person who collected taxes, and this was corroborated by C. R. Westwood, township treasurer. Westwood said he himself, the township clerk and two bailiffs collected taxes. In addition, Mrs. Butler, wife of the accused, said she had accepted tax payments on behalf of her husband.

Allied Army Leaders Take Strategic Steps Likely to Show in 24 Hrs.

London, June 15—(CP)—Reuters News Agency reported today that "strategic decisions of great moment" had been taken by Allied army leads in France and that "the next 24 hours are likely to show what these are."

A Reuters correspondent writing from "Somewhere in France" reported that these decisions had been taken last night at a meeting between the commander of the British forces in France and the French generals.

"As seen from a British military centre southwest of Paris", the correspondent wrote, "the situation is the most tragic since the Prussians marched into Paris 70 years ago."

He added that "nevertheless there is a complete absence of panic or desperation."

The Reuters correspondent said: "Some authorities believe the Germans' greatest desire is to try and occupy all northern France in order to secure an outlet to the Atlantic seaboard, and to combined with a simultaneous drive to the south, hence great decisions are likely to be given effect very soon."

In this connection, the authorities say, the overwhelming sea power exercised by the Allies must prove influential."

SWISS PREPARE AGAINST INVASION BY PARACHUTERS

Sudden Tightening of Military Preparations as Disturbances Uncovered

HUGE FIRES SEEN

(AP)—Posters(advising the public of the steps to be taken to meet a possible parachute invasion, appeared all over Switzerland today as the Rhine front north of Basel showed signs of increasing tension.

Sudden tightening of military preparations indicated to neutral observers that the Swiss Intelligence Service had uncovered the best—informed concerning activities within the belligerent countries, had uncovered disturbing information.

The tightening was reflected in orders cancelling the usual Sunday leaves for police and forbidding them to receive the customary week-end visits from friends and relatives. All leaves will be staggered through the week until further notice.

French heavy artillery in the Maginot Line continued pounding German objectives intermittently during the night, and early this morning Swiss watchers saw a huge pillar of flame and smoke shoot behind the Nazi Rhineland Gibraltar at Istein.

Although it could not be confirmed, it was believed at Basel the flames came from a big German storage tank of high test gasoline, whose heavier protection reinforced concrete had finally been pierced by the constant pounding of French long-range guns.

The French bombardment drew little reply from the Nazis, and German sources today were only saving their ammunition for a later offensive.

Has on Board 1,000 U.S. Citizens Fleeing from the War Zone

Galway, Eire, June 15 (AP).—The United States liner Washington sailed from here today with more than 1,000 Americans fleeing from the European war zone.

Most of those aboard the liner are women and children, many of the latter under ten years of age. Only a few are the aged, and even they never before had seen so many children aboard one vessel.

The Irish coastal situation, United States Lines officials loaded into the Washington here yesterday 1,500 gallons of milk, hurriedly obtained from all over Ireland.

The Washington sailed here yesterday after stops at Bordeaux, Pauillac, Le Verdon and Pasajes, and she picked up several hundred American refugees.

The ship will carry a crew of 572.

CABINET RESIGNS

Three Demands Made by the Kremlin and All Accepted by Lithuania

London, June 15 —(CP)— The Moscow radio announced today that Lithuania had accepted a Soviet ultimatum to which the Russian Government claimed the right to occupy Lithuanian territory "with sufficient forces."

The broadcast was heard here shortly after a report was received of the resignation last night of Premier Antanas Merkys and his Nationalist Union Lithuanian cabinet, which, it was said, General Stasys Rastikis, former Lithuanian Commander-in-Chief, had been entrusted with formation of a new government with wider representation.

Expired at 10 a.m.

The Soviet ultimatum to expire at 10 a.m. today, the announcer said. The Lithuanian Government was communicated to Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov by the Lithuanian Minister in Moscow at 9 a.m.

Demands on Lithuania were first, that the Lithuanian Minister of the Interior, Kazys Skucas, be tried immediately before a court of justice and the Chief of Political Police and tried as one of those responsible for "provocative acts" against the Soviet Union.

BRITISH CAPTURE ITALIAN FORTS ON LIBYAN BORDER

Royal Air Force Repeatedly Bombs Italian Positions on Frontier

SHARP FIGHTING

Alexandria, Egypt, June 15 — (CP)— Sharp fighting between Italian and British troops in the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, after repeated Royal Air Force bombings was reported today.

Communiques of the last 24 hours were declared to have brought the capture of the Italian forts of Capuzzo and Maddalena by British troops.

The R.A.F. also continued air attacks on Sidi Barrani, a stronghold of Italian forces, and attacked the Egyptian outposts of Solium, Sheggu and Omaha but had caused little damage.

No Official Egyptian Reaction

There was no immediate official Egyptian reaction to Italian attacks on Egyptian territory on which the government had warned will bring a declaration of war against Italy.

A dozen Italian fishing boats which attempted to dash from Alexandria were seized today and brought to Egypt.

The government prepared to conduct the Italian community's social and educational institutions, appointing official custodians. The Italian Ala Litoria School, one of the largest in Egypt, was converted into a military camp.

Serafino Mazzolini, the Italian Minister, requested of the British and French authorities safe conduct for a staff of 60 legation and consular officials and a group of Italian journalists. They planned to go to Rome via Palestine, Syria, Turkey and Rumania. The Minister probably will not leave before next week.

Battle of France May Reach Peak In Next 48 Hours

French Are Still Fighting and Keeping Up Struggle Despite Extreme Fatigue and Heavy Losses

MUST HAVE HELP

Country Searching Sky Over Atlantic for Planes and They Will Have to Come in Thousands

London, June 15—(CP)—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Tours, France, said today that "during the next 24 to 48 hours the battle of France may reach its culminating point."

"Despite superhuman efforts the ready made French troops, despite extreme fatigue and heavy losses, the French, it is stressed in authoritative circles here, have not given up," the dispatch said. It added:

"They are still fighting with all strength left to them but no secret is made of the tragedy that lies ahead if positive help does not arrive from other democracies with the greatest promptitude.

"France, in this most tragic hour in her history, is searching the sky over the Atlantic for a cloud as big as a man's hand' which would herald hitherto unseen American planes.

"They will have to come quickly and they will have to come in thousands."

Allies Put Seven Billions on Counter For All Available U. S. Supplies

Proposed U.S. Modify Laws to Allow U.S. Ships to Enter Belligerent Ports

SCOUR ARSENALS

Washington, June 15 (AP).—Proposals to modify the Neutrality Act to expedite shipments to the Allies were brought to Congressional attention here today as Great Britain put $7,000,000,000 in assets on the counter for all available war supplies the United States could furnish.

Several bills for speedier shipments were reported to have conferred with authorities here on the subject. One would permit belligerent Allies United States vessels to register under the French and British ports, now in the prohibited combat zone.

While all energies were bent on making good President Roosevelt's pledge of speedier aid to the Allies, shipping circles observed that the efforts would be pointless unless vessels were available to transport the goods.

Less than a dozen Allied steamers stood in New York harbor yesterday and most of them were taking on scrap iron.

In reporting that Britain would give the United States, in effect, a "blank cheque" for munitions, British sources yesterday emphasized that Britain was urgently needed ready-made supplies and not future deliveries.

To meet its "blank cheque", Britain was estimated still to have $7,-000,000,000 in privately owned assets in the United States.

The War Department scoured arsenals and inventories for additional surplus equipment that might be "made in" for sale to the Allies.

Would Make U. S. Motor Industries Gigantic Plane Factory for Allies

Washington, June 15 — (AP) - naval bases to the British fleet, if the British should become untenable, Senator Pittman (D., Nev.) said today.

With the course of the European conflict turning so importantly in calculations, multiple efforts continued today in the Congress and in United States preparedness and assistance for the Allies.

The War Department announced that the Citizens' Military Training Camps, which provide military training this summer to 3,000 business and professional men, under a plan reminiscent of the Plattsburgh training Camp of days before the first Great War.

The Department also disclosed it was reinforcing its staff of military observers in South America, and made known a program for training more Latin Americans.

New Destroyer Unit.

A new destroyer unit was created by the Navy to Atlantic Squadron, with Rear Admiral F. K. Reichmuth in command of some 100 ships of the fleet and 1,000 naval aircraft. Preparations also were underway for returning 71 decommissioned destroyers and submarines to active service.

In the field of help for the Allies, President Roosevelt reiterated at his press conference that the United States was doing everything it possibly could. War Department officials backed up this statement, but emphasized "we are not de-arming the army".

FOUR CHARITIES WILL BENEFIT BY COUNTY GRANTS

Remainder of Fund of $16,282 Will be Administered by Committee Appointed

SPECIAL GRANTS

Council Takes No Action in Formation of Home Guard at Present Time

Four registered war service charities organizations will benefit immediately from a patriotic fund created by the Hastings County Council at its regular June session which concluded on Friday.

Eight thousand dollars of the one mill levied on the county assessment for the year 1940 purposes, which amounts to $18,282.00, will be paid in varying proportions to the following war charities: the Red Cross, $3,000; the Y.M.C.A., the Salvation Army, $1,500; and the Knights of Columbus Army Huts, $1,500.

These sums were distributed yesterday by council as a whole but the remainder of the fund will be administered by a special Patriotic Funds Committee appointed by the council. The committee is Chairman of Finance, Reeve George West, Marmora; Reeve Robson, Thurlow, and Warden John L. Cruncher, Dungannon. County Treasurer J. A. Haggerty and County Clerk Eric Denyes will act on the committee in an advisory capacity.

A chairman will be appointed in the immediate future by the personnel of the newly formed committee. Must Be Approved.

Council was reminded that all the grants or awards made to any war charities organization must first receive the approval of the Department of Municipal Affairs before payment can be made.

The general Patriotic Fund came into being during the Thursday session of the sitting when members of council unanimously agreed to set aside additional three-quarters of a mill to the one-quarter provided for in the estimates for patriotic purposes.

There was some diversity of opinion among council as to the disposition of the eight thousand dollars realized from the mill assessment. Some reeves were in favor of an equal division into two thousand dollars each, while others favored various combinations. After a somewhat lengthy discussion, the motion of Reeve Charles Kerr of Tweed that hospitals be the sole recipients of awards, was carried by a substantial majority.

Remained Undecided.

Routine business including the granting of regular and special grants to various municipalities and organizations, was disposed of by afternoon of the current session. Several by-laws which dealt with the levying of taxes for the county council received the third reading and adoption.

A notice of intention was given council in which a veterinary medical officer who will be in charge of indigent hospitalization, will be appointed by the December session, was read to council.

Communications received by the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital, and Lieut. Col. C. D. Doolittle, O.C. Hastings of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Depot, for the kindness, hospitality and courtesy shown council during their recent visits to the county institutions, were unanimously passed.

The formation of a County Home Guard as suggested in a communication from the Prime Minister was little discussion, and council decided to take no action at the present, but to wait for further word before arising a special session of council to discuss the matter at a later date. The majority of members felt that Belleville and the County have sufficient protection to cope with any foreign element which may attempt to enter the country illegally.

A request on the part of Mr. W. Ryan, Belleville, for permission to sell certain number of volumes of a publication shortly to appear, met with no action on the part of council.

Reforestation.

Reopening of the discussion on a County reforestation scheme under Government supervision brought about a motion that the matter be referred to the Agricultural Advisory Board.

Northern Reeves were unanimous in their opinion that there is no reforesting the area of the north, and with adequate fire protection, and control of cutting, the north will never lack for forests.

Reeve Charles Rush, Hungerford, pointed out the fine progress made in reforestation during the past four years. This year, he said, a total of 60,000 trees will have been planted. He advocated the use by municipalities of the scheme, but declared himself as not being in favor of the county forest project.

Grants.

The following grants were awarded by motion: To the three district headquarters of the Women's Institute, $15.00 each; to Township of Tyendinaga, to raise the road near Chisholm's Mills, $100; to the Coe Hill Red Cross Hospital, $100.00; to Bancroft Red Cross Hospital, $100.00 with a special increase of $100.00; to Belleville Trustees and Ratepayers Association, $5.00; to Belleville Fair Board, $150, and County Pair Boards $100.00; for junior extension work $75.00; special grant to northern municipalities of Tudor, $300.00; Limerick, $300; Wollaston, $300; Marmora and Lake, $150.00, and Dungannon, $150.00.

Appreciation.

Prior to adjournment until Dec. 3, a motion of appreciation of the services of Warden J. J. Churcher with council during the session just ended met with hearty endorsement.

In reply Warden Churcher thanked his colleagues for the kind expression of good will and said he received his own gratitude for the fine spirit of co-operation and sympathy that pervaded council during the sitting. "I am proud, indeed," he said, "to be the chief of a council composed of such a fine group of men, and of a county of loyal British citizens."

He urged his council to spur their constituents on to even greater efforts during the dark days that lie ahead. He had no fault to find with the government, he said, but leaders of the country must be men who will lead us to victory through difficulties and politics should be buried, and the people feel that no one lagging, we must spur our leaders on to greater efforts," he said.

"We believe in our God, fighting the right, and we must inspire ourselves and others on to greater achievements that will eventually end in victory," he concluded.

The National Anthem concluded the session.

Patriotic Concert at B.C.I. Auditorium Much Enjoyed

Crowd Not as Large as Expected and Some Criticism Offered

VARIED PROGRAM

Nothing but praise for the various members of the Public School band, the members of the High School band and the personnel of the Belleville Municipal band, was heard at the conclusion of the patriotic concert held in the Belleville Collegiate auditorium under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. War Committee. With a presentable and predominantly militaristic atmosphere prevailing as the various bands played martial music, the glowing rhythm created by them were well suited for the appreciation and enjoyment of the audience with the stilo "Destruction of Atlantis" in four parts played by the Belleville band under Capt. Fred Cooper, directing, being the feature rendition of the night as with its crashing crescendos and swiftly changing tempo held the audience spellbound.

The concert opened with the showing of a picture depicting the activities of Canadian troops at Aldershot. The pictures showed the soldiers participating at sports, including hockey, football, softball and boxing and the troops in training exercises. Life in the "rest" recreational centre was shown with the boys enjoying themselves playing cards, dancing and having refreshments.

The first band rendition was by the Public School band under the direction of Mr. Alfred Cooper, setting the tempo for the night's program with a spirited rendition of the "Blue Danube" waltz followed with the "Maple Leaf Forever" with the audience joining their final musical selection.

Introduced by Banker Beard

Mr. Jimmie Bankier, Belleville's well known basketball player and referee with the patriotic number "Grand Old Flag" was introduced by appropriate folk number entitled "Tim Rooney's at the Fighting."

The march "Here They Come" by the High School band was met with applause from the audience as did the "Sabre Dance" and "Jolly Coppersmith" while the patriotic march "Land of Glad Tomorrow" was especially applauded.

Mr. Harold Barrett sang a very appropriate number "The Call to Arms" from "Home Fires Burning" and as an encore sang the sentimental number of "Tall Ring Orange."

The Belleville municipal band then played three numbers, the first a march entitled "Hollycrest," and two popular numbers "Serenade" and climaxing their performance with the popular number "Poppa Piccolino" as their encore song.

The Belleville male choir under the direction of Mr. Harry Moorman, delighted the audience with a medley entitled "Songs of the Merchant" and as an encore sang "Battle Prayer."

Mr. Fred Jobson as conductor of the Belleville Band spoke briefly to the audience on the significance of the two school bands for their extensive musical training under the program and urged the whole-hearted support of the citizens for the Belleville Band as they become proficient, especially in the near future when we have in Belleville the largest group of clarinet players in the province, a splendid boys' band and group learning band music than in any city in Canada.

The final two numbers on the program were renditions by the public school, the high school and the Belleville band in a selection of popular band tunes, The overture "Primo" was written by Mr. Reg. Hinchey for the school bands and the solo arrangement was played by Stan. Wiggins. The band arrangement for the finale, "There'll Always Be An England" was written by Mr. Hinchey who is rapidly being recognized as one of the foremost composers of music in Canada. The Belleville Male Chorus and audience joined in singing the words of the final number after which the massed bands swung into "Rule Britannia."

Disappointed In Crowd.

Mr. Wynn J. Clarke acted as chairman for the evening and expressed his extreme disappointment that the auditorium was not filled as a tribute to the fine entertainment offered by the three Belleville bands, by the vocalists, Jimmie Bankier, Harold Barrett and the Belleville Male Choir with Mr. Leo Riggs as accompanist. All these men have been unfailingly in their time and talent, said Mr. Clarke, in order that such a program as this might be possible.

"We read a great deal in the newspapers and hear a great deal on the radio about Canada's war effort," continued Mr. Clarke, "and we also hear on the streets a great deal of what Canada's men should be doing towards Canada's war effort. We hear a great deal of criticism but

UTMOST SUPPORT GIVEN TO FRANCE SAYS THE PREMIER

Munitions Minister Howe Will be Vested With More Power to "Get Work Done"

R.C.M.P. ON JOB

Ottawa, June 15—(CP)—The job of providing equipment and supplies for Canada's war program is to be done quicker and more directly after this. And the House of Commons has before it a bill providing for this increased efficiency.

Under the bill, presented to the House of Commons yesterday, Munitions Minister Howe will be vested with broad new power "to get work done."

The Minister was originally empowered to mobilize all economic and industrial facilities required for war supplies. The new measure enables him to delegate and supervise, but not privately-operated industries, to determine the activities of any person and Supply Department and to revise certain departmental procedures.

"I thought I had taken all the powers there were but if there is any other power not in the bill I shall be glad to include it," Mr. Howe told the committee.

The Commons also heard Prime Minister Mackenzie King pledge Canada's utmost support to France as Canada has already pledged to Britain. It applauded when he promised that the resources of the North American continent would be "thrown into the struggle for liberty on the side of the western democracies."

No further information has reached the Justice Department on rumors mentioned earlier that Adolph Hitler, former Hepburn of Ontario of a threatened Nazi invasion of the United States, Justice Minister Lapointe said. He was answering a question by Conservative (Lib. Moosejaw.)

The minister said the Royal Canadian Mounted Police had conferred with the head of the Ontario provincial police seeking information. The latter had replied that he could give any assistance without first consulting with Premier Hepburn, the latter was not available, and as yet been received from the Provincial Police head.

R.C.M.P. is in constant touch with United States police, Federal and State, and particularly with the law enforcement agents in New York and Michigan," Mr. Lapointe added.

BOARD IS NAMED FOR ARBITRATION

Residents of Glen Miller Appeal Against Division of S. S. 6 of Sidney

Judge Charles A. Cameron, Public Schools Inspector for Hastings, former Public Schools Inspector H. J. Clarke, Reeve Bruce Robson of Sidney and Trustee William West of Stirling were appointed by County Council on Friday to act as a Board of Arbitration to hear an appeal of residents of Glen Miller against a county by-law passed by the Township of Sidney in County Council on Friday to set a Board of Arbitration to hear an appeal of residents of Glen Miller against a county by-law passed by the Township of Sidney in County Council, dividing S. S. No. 6, Sidney, into two separate institutions.

Judge Cameron will act as chairman of the board, and the hearing will convene at his summons.

According to the by-law passed by the Sidney Council, ratepayers of the public school section in question, had appeared before that body claiming that under present conditions some of the pupils were not receiving a fair share of attention, and as a result the section should be divided into two separate school sections.

Later, residents of Glen Miller forwarded a petition to County Council protesting against the by-law and instituting a formal appeal against the Sidney Council's decision to separate the school section into two parts. Financial hardship would be placed on the minority of ratepayers, the appeal said. It also claimed that the division was contrary to the views of the Department of Education in the matter.

County Council, relative to the appeal, appointed the above-mentioned Board of Arbitration.

Soviet Contracts Air Field Near Boundary Report

Nome, Alaska, June 15 — (AP) — The Daily Nugget quoted a "reliable source" today as reporting that Russia is constructing an air field at Russian — Ex-imo families were ordered to leave the field and were given notice on the Soviet-owned island by the Rev. Fr. Gerasim, Greek Orthodox priest, pastor of the Tabernacle United Church.

The paper added it was informed the new field would soon be used for year-round weather reports broadcast by radio. There was no basis for a report that Russia was settling thousands of families on Big Diomede.

(In Washington yesterday territorial claims of Russia and Diomede told reporters he had been informed of Russia's new construction activities on the island.)

Big Diomede is about four miles from Little Diomede Island, owned by the United States. The Soviet and United States flag at the Bering Strait are 25 miles northwest of Alaska's Seward Peninsula. Russia has 139 miles northwest of Nome and about 40 miles southeast of East Cape, Siberia.

NEW B. E. F. IN FRANCE

A new army from Britain has arrived in France to aid its great ally, France, against the invading German army. The vast offensive has advanced to Paris but the French people are resolute. The abandonment of the capital has been a serious blow to sentiment but the resolution is unbroken. As Monsieur Reynaud, Premier, said the other day, fighting will continue. France will yield to the German blow.

Meanwhile there is a real understanding of the need for material supplies. United States is sending as fast as possible what material aid is available to be forwarded to assist the Allies. In Britain a spokesman said yesterday that the plans for a long hard war had been dropped by Britain and that she has gone "all out" with her economy for the most potent immediate action. Production in the future is not to be allowed to interfere with the immediate needs and shipments. In Britain herself there has been a vast speed up in production.

Hitler is using his blitzkrieg to throw blows which he thinks may shorten the war. He does not want a long war because there he sees every sign that he is using up his men and materials at a tremendous rate. The intense effort which is now waged for days in the Battle of France is a proof that he is doing his utmost at enormous cost.

The British policy is outlined as to place a maximum of soldiers in the field in a minimum of time and the British look abroad for a large part of the equipment which is necessary, though their own production is growing.

Somewhere of the impressive character of the resources of the British is shown in the Commonwealth Air Plan more details of which were published yesterday. Fifty-two million dollars is to be spent for the seventy odd training schools and other establishments in Canada.

PROTECTIVE FOODS

The booklet "Food and Health" prepared by the Medical Association, nutrition and containing suggestions by Canadian doctors for wholesome meals at low cost gives the protective foods as milk and milk products, potatoes and other vegetables, whole grain cereals, raw fruits and canned tomatoes and eggs, meat and fish. After eating these essential foods, one may eat whatever he wishes—and what ever suits his appetite.

One can protect one's health at low cost by eating inexpensive foods in these groups.

When there is not much money to spend for food, first on the shopping list should be milk or cheese, potatoes and whole grain products and next investigate wheat and whole wheat bread).

The recommended foods supply nearly all the substances necessary for good health. The basis of a health-giving diet is very simple.

The advice of the booklet is "always eat your protective foods. You can add then whatever else you like and can afford."

Another few bits of advice are the following:

"One half or more of the cereals and flour should be whole grain, such as rolled wheat or rolled oats, and one half or more of bread should be whole wheat."

"The Canadian farmer produces all the foods necessary for good health. Canadian-grown vegetables such as tomatoes, turnips, cabbage and fruits in season (apples, berries, cherries, plums, peaches, pears) can replace the more expensive imported fruits."

The booklet advices the use of cod liver oil for children from October to June and also for adults, working indoors.

Here is the weekly buying list:—

Group 2—Vegetables and fruits, (a) potatoes, (b) fresh and canned vegetables tomatoes, cabbage, carrots, turnips, onions, beets, cauliflower, spinach, squash, green peas, green beans, (c) dried vegetables—navy beans, lima beans, soya beans, peas, lentils, (d) freshfruits — apples, bananas, oranges and lemons, (e) canned fruits—tomatoes, peaches, pears, cherries, plums, peaches, pears, (e) dried fruits — prunes, dates, raisins, figs. U. S. on Guard Against Fascist Propaganda

New York, June 15 — (AP) — Intensified measures to detect and prevent subversive activities were announced here following a warning by an undisclosed federal agency that Italian Consuls General in the United States had been instructed to further the cause of Fascism in this country.

All city police commanders were ordered to guard against "Fifth Column" activities at a secret conference yesterday at which they were given a 35-page report summarizing recent results of investigations by the federal agency.

Acting Mayor Lehman on reports that Italian officials had been told to conduct propaganda campaigns through newspapers, radio and other radio, attaches at the Italian Consulate declared:

"We are not authorized to make any statement regarding political matters."

The memorandum given police commanders said that the investigation by an undisclosed federal agency and by state and city police authorities said these activities were carried out with the approval of Italian Consulate officers who worked under the mantle of "diplomatic immunity."

The memorandum emphasizes that Fascist propaganda here has three purposes: first, support of the Fascist political party; second and incapable of solving United States problems, and that "we need a good mechanic like Mussolini or Hitler."

New Tomato Immune to Disease

Science has produced a new tomato that seems immune to a disease that destroys the plant's existence. It was done by back-cracking to the tomato's wild ancestors and starting over again to domesticate the plant.

The disease is a fungus growth—fusarium wild—that is killing millions of plants in forty-two states. But the growth apparently cannot touch the new plant developed by Dr. C. M. Haenseler of the University of Missouri college of Agriculture.

Investigators first tried to defeat the fungus by plant breeding. They produced varieties that were less retarded. Meanwhile, the fungus became more virulent.

Dr. Tucker and his associates were convinced that present-day tomatoes lacked factors that would prevent wilt and so they decided to get a wild plant with the proper characteristics. No one was certain such a plant existed.

Dr. Tucker and his associates located many, many plants unsuccessfully. Finally, in 1934 an entomologist in Peru, Charles H. Nowotol, sent a wild tomato to the Missouri experiment station. Between 1935 and 1939 seedlings from this wild plant were "given the works" and developed high resistability "to take it." Exposed constantly to the wilt, it resisted successfully.

Of 2,500 plants transplanted to the fields, none was killed or failed to ease and only ten showed slight susceptibility to the disease. Disease in the stem.

Dr. Tucker tried cross-pollinations between commercial tomatoes and the wild variety, known as "Accession 160," and succeeded. Seeds were the ale of a current.

The first crop produced walnut-sized tomatoes, unsatisfactory for canning. But Dr. Tucker kept on and now has hybrids that approximate as large as beasdlike—the kind gardeners want. The plants will be on the market soon.—N. Y. Times.

Modern Viking Doing Fine Work

At the time when the Nazis reached Trondheim, Norwegian fishing village, business was booming for Ragnar Ulstein, 28-year-old local dentist. Distastefully this descendant of the Vikings gazed out his window at 1,000-ton, modern, million-mark armed German trawlers by Malangen in the harbor. Dropping his novocaine, he wandered downtown, collected thirty fishermen, and told them to get their boats and manoeuvered alongside the unsuspecting craft. Deftly the hatches were opened and all swarmed aboard the enemy vessel, the Washington Star says.

"This will hurt a little," said the doctor, as he drilled the Nazi captain through the middle of the fifth column, "but it will soon be over." It was. The others of the crew were somewhat pained at the unexpected turn of patient in treachery, but are not worrying about it now. So sudden was the assault that the protectors of Norwegian neutrality never even had a chance to set off that triumph of the German ingenuity, the scuttling bomb.

Consequently, Dr. Mashre and the Malangen men got a fine modern trawler and a new addition to their fleet.

MEMBER APPEALS TO LABOR MINISTER FOR MORE HELP

Geo. S. White, Conservative, Hastings-Peterboro, Takes Part in Labor Debate

SPEAKS ON ROADS

Mr. Geo. S. White, Conservative member for Hastings-Peterboro delivered another address in the House of Commons on which he stated.

Mr. Chairman: I wish to speak only briefly on this resolution. I regret that the Minister of Labour (Mr. McKinnon) has not yet outlined in any detail the principles underlying or the manner in which he will carry out the spending of the moneys to be appropriated under this resolution and I indicated the works to be carried out by his department in the province of Ontario. During the debate on this resolution I have received many letters from the western provinces gave to the house and to the country the agricultural districts in the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, which no doubt would have shocked many hon. members; but I do not like to draw to the attention of the minister the fact that these conditions do not exist in the eastern Canada but apply also to certain areas in Ontario. The hon. member for Trinity (Mr. Roebuck) in his speech to-night made mention of the drought which prevailed in his riding in Toronto. I should like to draw the attention of labour; in considering the plans of his department for the spending of the moneys appropriated under this resolution to overlook the distress that prevails in certain parts of the provinces of Ontario.

British Descent

The riding which I have the honour to represent, Hastings-Peterborough, consists of twenty-seven rural townships, all of these townships nineteen are unsuited for farming or agriculture, and consist largely of rock isolated areas. This is due to the Laurentian range of mountains, large rock formations and poor type of soil. These townships, in the province of Ontario, were once covered with very fine forests. Those forests are now developed, ravaged, and at the present time there are only a few left for the use of the settlers. The settlers in these townships are practically 100 per cent of British descent. They are not the type of citizen that wants relief, but they are willing to help and desire the development of the natural resources of the great municipalities of Hastings and Peterborough, and of the province of Ontario generally and they will create work for everyone. There are large mining areas in the district. Until the reforestation scheme could be undertaken, there is no work for them to do. If developed it will provide work for many people. I have received letters to apply to these two counties of Hastings and Peterborough, apply to the province of Ontario, and to other sections of Ontario, but I shall deal with these two counties in particular because I am more familiar with their conditions.

Maintenance Costly

In discussing roads, I realize, Mr. Chairman, that the building of roads is largely a matter within the jurisdiction of the province and of the individual counties. But I think it will be safe to say that realized that in many of these rural areas the building of roads is one in which money can be spent to provide employment to the people in the county of Hastings, for example, which is one of the largest counties in Ontario. There are some 582 miles of county roads, administered and maintained by the county during the present year the county by by-law has provided the sum of $75,000, being the amount approved by the provincial department of highways. To show you, Mr. Chairman, the large amount of money it will take to put the county of Hastings, for example, which is one of the largest counties in Ontario, in a state of repair, I will give the house a statement of the mileage of twenty-five miles, is paved throughout except for a few miles at each end. Nearly maintenance of this unpaved ten miles of road costs $2,000, often does not take into account the cost of snow removal, which is a very large item of expense in a county of Hastings with its large mileage of roads. This action may not be political, but is said to be highly practical. When he finds one he opens wide and does a real, humane jobs. When he runs out of supplies he sails off to Hammerfest, loads up and goes out again at his self-appointed task of filling the Nazi casualty lists.

Roads Are Grant

I would urge upon the Minister of Labour that when his department comes to be granted under this resolution, he keep in mind the condition of the roads and in particular the counties of Hastings and Peterborough. I would suggest to the minister that he should go to these two counties will serve as an example of the advantage of the work to be done from a plan being worked out between the federal Department of Labour, the province of Ontario and the different county councils and the development of main county roads. Such a plan would create employment, would be of great value during areas, and do much to aid the tourist industry in the two counties benefit hundreds of settlers in these two counties.

The municipal councils of these townships are unable to pay out much in the way of relief. When one considers that some townships with a total assessment of $60,000, one can readily understand why some municipal councils can do little in the way of relief. Taxes in all these municipalities are very high, and within the last few years several writs have been issued by the county against the local municipalities for arrears of county rates. Indigent conditions exist in the county of Hastings amount to between $30,000 and $40,000 a year, and there are thousands of dollars of unpaid taxes and many properties are in the hands of the municipalities.

Certainly there is very little, if any, opportunity for the young man or woman, and little prospect for the future. The situation is somewhat better in the counties of Hastings and Peterborough constitute a fine recreational area, and wonderful opportunity for a reforestation scheme, yet to date no such plan has been announced. The land is ideal for the planting of trees, and there are plenty of moisture, but to-day we find that the land is rapidly and readily carried away. During the last three weeks in addition that the Dominion's youth today is so anxious to maintain independence. In the last war Canadian Division went into action a month after arriving in France. In 1918, it has had been practically preceded by the famous regiment, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry which entered the trenches Jan. 6 as a unit of the Imperial Army's 27th Division.

Glorious Record

From the moment the "Pats" got into the fight until the end of the struggle in 1918, they had consistently earned undying fame by their record of courage and sacrifice.

Veterans of the Canadian and other wars, the P.P.C.L.I., raised by Col. Hamilton Gault, D.S.O., of Montreal was commanded by Lt.-Col. F. D. Farquhar of the Coldstream Guards. General Snow's division to which they were attached was composed of Canadians from all parts.

The Pats' first major action was on June 2 when parties made a successful attack on enemy trenches at St. Eloi, a fact which brought a congratulatory letter from Minister of War H. H. Asquith in the House of Commons. The first battle honour the Princess Patricia's Regiment has been given during the last few days was gallant and efficient work."

Its strength shattered in later fighting, the regiment was disbanded in the autumn of 1915 and its men drafted elsewhere.

In the meantime the 1st Division after four months' rigorous training with the Second Division at France Feb. 12. Its first engagement was in the trenches at Wytschaete, March 10, when it co-operated on the flank of the 1st Army by a fire attack during the first assault.

This served as a minor preliminary to the Second Battle of Ypres, April 22-24, where the Originals were subjected to the full fury of the German's first real baptism of fire.

In the face of clouds of poison gas and numerically superior forces, the Canadians defended their positions for three days, suffering severe losses, but inflicting heavier losses on the Dominion men, casualties amounting to more than 4,000 be killed, wounded or captured.

Their remarkable resistance caused Lt.-Gen. Edmund Ironside, now Chief of the British Army, to report to the War Office: "The Canadians have proved themselves their gallantry and determination undoubtedly saved the situation."

The Canadians were singled out for congratulation in a message to Sir Robert Borden, in Belgium, by King George V. He referred to the gallant conduct of the Canadian Division in repulsing the enemy and recapturing four lost guns."

The tank, around which the General staff has built much of its military strategy, was first used by the British at Cambrai in 1916, in the battle of destruction—pyramidlike editions of the machines that are now known through the Low Countries and northern France in the early days of the war—were powerful Canadian attacks at Courcelette and Martinpuich on Sept. 15. German posts were crushed and the defenders ran for their lives.

Like the Originals of 1914, the first contingent of the present army sailed across the Atlantic convoyed by staunch ships of the Royal Navy. The same secrecy that surrounded the mobilization and embarkation of that 30,000 troops in August, 1914, shielded the current armada that left Halifax last December.

Leading the Princess Pats, the initial contingent of Canadians in the First Great War left Quebec City, Oct. 3, 1914. Thirty-one transports, in three columns, each led by a warship, sailed from the Quebec harbor in mid-afternoon. Another contingent and the Indo Fy-mouth on Oct. 14.

The voyage was without incident and the only excitement was twice changed. Congestion in the English Channel near Southampton being selected as the point of debarkation instead of Liverpool because the last minute advices were reported off the English coast by the German sub Indo Fy-mouth on Oct. 14.

Landed at Plymouth

As the great convoy steamed up Plymouth Sound—the roadstead from which the Spanish Armada sailed against the Spanish Armada 300 years before—the British warships were greeted with cheers from thousands who lined the hills that encircled the harbour, in addition the troops were sent to Salisbury Plain.

Here the Canadian Contingents of Canada's soldiers in 1914 compared favorably with that of the regulars of that day was not as comfortable as that of the present.

Four years across the Atlantic in seven days six months ago, but there was no complaint.

Veterans of 25 years ago, now with 1914 experience in mind regard conditions at Aldershot as palatial compared with the Canadian camp of Salisbury Plain. Aldershot's barrack rooms, central heating and modern conveniences are in striking contrast.

Salisbury And France

At Salisbury the troops passed the winter in tents and the season was one of cold and discomfort. Deep snow and parade grounds were deep in mud and frequently training was interrupted by the heavy downpours that swept the Plain.

Finally the first Canadian Division left Avonmouth Feb. 8, 1915, on their way to France. The discomforts of the Salisbury Plain winter and even a stormy three-day voyage around the coast of Britain failed to damper their enthusiasm.

Frenchmen on the docks at St. Nazaire, on the River Loire stared wide-eyed and then cheered as ship after ship unloaded men, guns, horses, and supplies until 20,000 troops and their equipment and baggage were landed. Every detail had been planned to avoid delay. The Canadians were to be rushed to the desperate and the men, under command of Lt.-Gen. E. H. Alderson, were rushed to a concentration area near Hazebrouck.

'Canada' Yearns to Battle Foes

By H. H. GORDON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Eager to play their part in the struggle for preservation of the world's greatest democratic nations, Canada's troops are poised for service. Whatever the call beids, the 1st Division stands ready to uphold the high traditions set by Canada in the First Great War.

Canada's young army is called upon to meet ruthless foreman, exponents of a military technique on land and in the air that would have astounded their fathers a quarter-century ago.

"Canada" watches it was then, with infantry matched against infantry and guns against guns. Aerial attack was in its infancy and mechanized equipment, developed in the war's later stages, provided the warring nations with only a vague idea of the mammoth proportions to which this form of total war would grow.

But it was Canada's 500,000 soldiers in the First Great War who established the tradition that the Dominion's youth today is so anxious to maintain unblemished. In the last war Canadian Division went into action a month after arriving in France. In 1918, it has had been practically preceded by the famous regiment, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry which entered the trenches Jan. 6 as a unit of the Imperial Army's 27th Division.

The fall of Paris, while not unexpected, is a serious blow to the morale of the French army and people.

The fact British authorities are using every available man and piece of equipment to France to aid the French in continuing their fight, bodes well for the future of the world that French resistance is not over and to the French themselves as the British and allies will make any sacrifice to help them.

The position of the French army in the south of the country, is not enviable. It has a long front to hold with tired troops and at any moment it may expect an attack from the Italians in the rear.

The loss of Paris complicates the problems of transport, communication and supply. The capital city was the very hub of the life of the country. All roads led to it. It was a nerve centre with the lines of information leading out in all directions. Now some new means of coordinating communications must be found.

One of the next objectives of the Germans may be the occupation of the whole French coast in order to cut off further aid from the Great Britain. In this operation as in others the German air force can be expected to lash out with heavy attacks on all coastal points in an effort to destroy docks and other facilities.

Unknown Heroes

At the bottom of the English channel lie as yet unrecorded group of men who thus take honorable place with the unknown Soldier in Westminster Abbey. These are they, their very names unknown to the world, who adventured forth to take part in a great epic of history. Day and night they made their effort to help in the removal of British and French troops from the beaches that was Dunkirk. Many of them went in boats hardly fit for coastal navigation, others in small unknown waters, under a hail of shells and bombs, ceaseless only when there were sorely beset soldiers who must be brought home, and careless of their own safety.

Forever more, the waters of that channel will be hallowed ground for the British Empire.—Windsor Star.

St. Paul's W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of St. Paul's United Church W.M.S. was held in the church parlors on the afternoon of June 11th under the direction of Mrs. Pidgeon. The meeting opened with hymn and prayer. Mrs. J. B. Thompson, treasurer, gave the financial report and during the business part of the meeting plans were complete to attend the annual at home meeting to be held this year at Mount Pleasant United Church. Mrs. C. F. Linn, convener of the program committee directed the remaining portion of the program following the use of hymn No. 116. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. C. Lansing who also led in prayer. A musical contribution to the program which was greatly enjoyed was a vocal solo by Miss Mae Currie, "The Lord is My Shepherd." The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. H. C. Martin who graphically described the proceedings of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada held recently in Cobourg. Hymn 427 was followed with prayer by Mrs. Pidgeon. A group of numbers were then offered by members of the Mission Band in reacings, recitations, solos and duets. Each of the performers doing splendid work. The final musical number was a group of selections by Jimmy Armstrong, local musician playing the guitar and harmonica. The meeting closed with the benediction.

Sothall Activities

St. Paul's United Church and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church are leaders thus far in the local Church League. Each has won all their games thus far by good margins this week. St. Andrew's scored an easy victory over the "Combines" a team drawn from the congregations of St. John's Anglican Church and St. James' Presbyterian Church while St. Paul's downed the visiting squad from Springbrook United Church.

In the Pranford district league in which the Stirling Bombers are ably represented the locals have lost to Pranford in their first game of the season but scored a clean cut win of the Tabernacle squad that visited here on Wednesday evening. Bill Long and Rowan Walker shared the mound duties for the locals but due to the wet condition of the park the game was no indication of the ability of either team but rather a matter of lucky breaks.

Rev. W. H. V. Walker, Mrs. Walker, Rowan and Jack and Mrs. Harper Rollins spent Thursday visiting friends at Bethany.

Mr. Duncan Mcolgomery of Toronto spent the week end at his home in Stirling.

Work on the interior mechanism of the new Bel. Telephone exchange is being rushed to completion and the date set for the switch over is the latter part of this month.

Mrs. Kerr and Miss Elsie Kerr, Reg. N. who have been spending the winter in Toronto have returned to Stirling for an indefinite period.

Mrs. George Snider of Trenton on Thursday visiting the home of her sister, Mrs. Arthur Hullo, Stirling.

Mr. Reg Clarke has returned to his duties at the Trenton depot of the R.C.A.F. after spending days leave at his home in Stirling.

Agricultural Society Increases Activity

With the Stirling fall fair only a few weeks away the Stirling Agricultural Society under the leadership of President J. B. Thompson and Secretary H. R. Mallory are already preparing for the event. A meeting for the purpose of appointing committee workers and for the discussion of general business was held in the agricultural offices on Tuesday evening. It was decided that the prize list revision of last year be re-appointed. Messrs. F. R. Mallory and H. L. Anderson be appointed to the special prize committee and committees to meet with local councils were as follows Stirling council, H. R. Thompson, Gilbert Thompson. Rawdon Township, S. L. Lucas, W. H. Patterson, Sidney, E. J. Fryer, Ben Bleecker. The matter of several changes to be made in the prize list was discussed at some length and recommendations filed to be placed in the hands of the Revision Committee.

Lower River Pilot Places Crew Under Arrest When Freighter Grounded by Italian Crew

Quebec, June 15 (CP). — Willie Pouliot, lower St. Lawrence River pilot for 21 years, told reporters on Friday how an Italian crew of 35 men he placed under arrest Monday the captain and 36-man crew of the Italian freighter Capo Noli after it had been run aground in a grueling attempt to avoid capture by the pursuing Canadian minesweeper, Bras d'Or.

Pouliot, who went aboard the freighter at Quebec to pilot her before Italy's war declaration, said that when the crew set their vessel afire and it went aground on rocks off Big Island, about 180 miles east of here, the captain said to him: "Now what are you going to do with us?"

"With the ship aground, my duty as pilot was finished," Pouliot said. "I was a Canadian citizen confronting an enemy crew. I said to them squarely: 'I am going to bring you to the authorities'."

Pouliot said the Italians followed his orders without resistance and the party abandoned ship in two lifeboats which soon were picked up by a yacht. At his directions, he said, the yacht carried the group to the Canadian minesweeper Bras d'Or, standing by the Capo Noli and which brought the prisoners to Rimouski.

National Penny Actions.

The pilot said before the vessel was set afire by her crew he had noticed "comings and goings" from the captain's cabin. Finally, he said, the captain came to him at the wheel and said: "My friend, we are at war. I wonder if I can get out of the Lawrence."

Pouliot said he replied:

"Not in this direction, because the patrol boat at Rimouski is faster than this and will surely overtake you."

He said the captain then left to consult his officers and in a few minutes came back "a little nervous" saying: "The stores are afire. We must run the vessel aground right away."

Then, he said, the captain ordered his men to deck and gave directions for the wrecking "with a courage I could admired sincerely."

The Italians arrived here Wednesday from Rimouski and were turned over to military authorities. Their vessel is being salvaged by the Royal Canadian Navy, which also had charge ship further down the St. Lawrence in order that the Capo Noli would not escape.

I find it very easy to drive and park as well, and I'm entirely pleased with the low fuel consumption. All 'round, the new Ford was a good idea for this family."

—MRS. M. L. MORRISON, Hamilton, Ont.

"There's something completely restful and relaxed to the ride of the new Ford and I'm all for it! Whatever contributes most : : : the softer springs or the new type seat cushions : : : certainly does a job. I also like the Hydraulic Brakes and steering column gearshift. They add a lot to the ease of driving, particularly on long trips."

—COLIN A. MacPHERSON, Kingston, Ont.

"Take the word of a motorist with long experience : : : this new Ford of mine tops anything I've run in a low-price cars for the comfort of its ride! The stabilized chassis and those new heavy-duty shock absorbers do a real job. Take my word on performance, too : : : that V-8 engine has pick-up and power for any kind of difficult driving. Guard Prenatal Diet

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

The expectant mother, as soon as she supposes she is to be a mother, should go to see the doctor and should visit him thereafter at regular intervals. The doctor checks on her physical welfare and advises her, especially in reference to her diet.

During pregnancy it is more important than ever, of course, to follow good health habits, avoiding sleeping, bathing, exercising and overwork. She will preserve good mental health habit so as to have normal peace of mind, poise and presence of mind. Toward her mental health her husband can add mightily by his own contribution. It is a lovely gesture and contribution for a husband to remember when he goes with her on the first visit to the doctor's office, that the doctor advises him how he best can further her physical and mental health.

The diet of the expectant mother should be one to build not only her body but also the baby. For example, she needs the calcium foods to nourish her teeth as well as to build bone and teeth in the baby. Every baby costs the mother a tooth," need not be so. But it is true that the baby starts at birth hidden in its gums, have already been prepared and partly built.

Lime and phosphate are the two leading bone and tooth builders for the expectant mother, comes at the head of all goods at all ages, since it supplies both of these minerals in right proportions, and fills nearly all other needs as well. Cheese, eggs and buttermilk contain much of the same materials as milk.

Ranking next are green vegetables, fresh fruits, eggs and coarse cereals, especially the vegetable foods as whole wheat bread, oranges, tomatoes, lettuce, spinach, dried figs, lettuce, cauliflower, chard, peas, string beans, tomatoes, carrots, beets, Brussel sprouts, celery and asparagus. As a rule, two vegetables a day, fruit twice a day and at least six glasses of water daily are advised.

In all diet lists for expectant mothers, fats are advised in generous amounts. As best being butter, cream, olive oil, and peanut butter and bacon fat.

Rich in Vitamins

Meats and fish are advised for not more than once a day, except on the doctor's order. Cheese may be substituted for meat. Sweets are to be preferred in the form of honey, maple sugar and dried fruits.

To supply adequate vitamins and minerals for the expectant mother, liberal amounts of milk, quart of milk, one egg, one raw vegetable salad, such as lettuce, tomato, celery, cabbage or carrots, one cooked green vegetable, two servings of fruit, one slab bran bread or one and one-half ounces whole grain cereal. If a helping of the service requires it, there is a prayer bench covered with one white satin pillow, or two snakes in jeans.

The music at a house wedding, if there is to be music, must be well played or well sung. We may have a simple string trio, two violins and a cello; or a violin and piano; or either a violin or piano alone; or a harp, violin, and piano; a phonograph record of beautiful organ music may be used.

Because of the limitations of space at a house wedding, the bride usually has fewer attendants than at a church wedding of a similar nature, and there usually are no ushers.

The bride's mother, the hostess of the occasion, receives at the door of the room in which the ceremony is to be performed, receiving the guests as they arrive. The bridegroom and his attendant find places: at the left of the ceremony-place are the relatives and friends of the bride and those about to begin, the bride's mother takes the place for her at the left of the improvised altar.

At the first notes of the wedding march, or at some other signal, the minister enters the room and takes his place at the improvised altar, facing the guests. Then the groom and best man take their places at the right. Through another door (if this can be arranged), come the bridesmaids (if any) walking in pairs. Next, the maid of honor, walking alone. Last, the bride, on her father's right arm. She enters by one entrance to the room, the minister, followed by the groom and best man by another. After a few moments after, the bridal procession begins.

When the bride and her father reach the ceremony-place, the groom steps forward to meet the bride, the bride stands at his left, and the father to her left. With a step or two to the bride's left, where he awaits until the close of the ceremony in which he gives the bride in marriage. The maid of honor stands at the bride's left, to help with her flowers during the ring part of the ceremony. The best man stands at the right of the groom, to give him the ring at the proper time.

After the benediction is pronounced, the groom kisses the bride, the minister offers his best wishes to the bride and his congratulations to the groom. Then the bride and groom turn to receive the greetings of their parents and friends. In a home wedding there is usually no recessional.

The wedding repast is usually served in the dining-room (there may or may not be a bride's table in another room) and the menu is as simple or elaborate as is desired.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Unhappy Parents Recognize Child's Right to Marry

Dear Miss Fairfax:—

I'm a married woman and have had a son of two years of age. Have been married for four years, but six months after I married I wished I hadn't. Then I figured if I had a child it would help me, but it didn't change matters. I'm tired my best to be satisfied but no one knows of this terrible did not ask to come here. How do you know, if you divorce your husband, and married again, that the second married again, that the second married would be any more contented than the first.

Women are often unhappy because they don't know how to use their hands. Why not take up something which will interest you and might prove profitable? Write letter to your husband, and if you were to take up some type of Vocational Training. I think you'd be better able to face your marriage the benefit of this letter.

Wants to Call Girl He Met Through Business

Dear Miss Fairfax:—

I work in a hardware store and go to night school. I think I'm in love with both in business and class work. I'll not occasionally see HER more than a few minutes at a time.

I've doped out that she must not be satisfied with her husband, he buys a good many more locks, nails, 44 cans than I think she really needs. Also, she blushes when she makes purchases. The last time she was there she's well-to-do and I'm not. I'd like to ask her to go to the movies, but you think I'd dare take the risk?

Bashful Salesman

As this column has frequently reminded young men in your position "He that buys his fate too much or his deserts are small, that dares not put it to the touch to gain or lose it all."

But may even turn you down at first, but if she continues to blush, better risk another invitation.

Shall he Repay Education Money to His Mother

Dear Miss Fairfax:—

I'm 20 years old and very much in love with a girl who is two years before we can be married he should he repay to his mother the money she borrowed to go through college.

We have been engaged three months now and I will get my ring when he can afford it. He lives in another town and I see him about every two weeks. I know he never goes with other girls because he's with me whenever he can get off from work.

We never need to quarrel, but now we have little fusses over the fact that we can't see each other enough.

Do you think we ought to wait until he can pay back the money to his mother, so we can start with a clean slate?

E.

As the platitude reminds us, "Circumstances alter cases." If the boy's mother is well-to-do, generous and capable of earning her own living, she might accept the offer in which case the payment probably will be put off indefinitely, which is the reason I suggested such cases. If, however, the mother is actually in need of money, I think it's up to the boy's sense of honor to repay it.

You'll probably hate me for saying so, but at 20 years of age you should be able to wait a couple of years until this young man has repaid his mother and is standing on his own feet. To evade debts and responsibilities is not good for character-building. And I think you and the boy will be happier if he does not incur any more obligations he has contracted.

Well-Planned Home Wedding Can Be Beautiful Ceremony

Many brides prefer to be married in the home, whether whether the home is large or small, it may be made a charming setting. Lawn and garden and potted plants can plan a simple and beautiful background for the wedding. It will give the wedding an intimate charm and dignity.

If the house wedding it is wisest, under most circumstances, to keep all details simple, if decorations, the wedding, refreshments. The "home" setting should, as much as possible, be kept in the family. If is small, and the number of guests invited large, some of the heavier pieces of furniture may have to be removed, or moved to the sides of the rooms. However, several chairs should be left in position as there may be older guests who will be glad to sit.

For the ceremony-place, choose the most effective and adaptable place in the living-room, the mantel, or in a bow window, or between two windows. There may be made a perfect background with plants, short tree branches, trailing vines, greenery and flowers, as flowers alone. On the ends of this improvised altar it is effective to have two tall details of decoration—two candelabra containing tall cathedral candles, or simple tall stands with ivy or smilax, or tall vases of white flowers.

Sometimes an aisle is formed, by white satin ribbons or flower-decorated posts (or both), through which the bridal party walks. If the service requires it, there is a prayer bench covered with one white satin pillow, or two snakes in jeans.

The music at a house wedding, if there is to be music, must be well played or well sung. We may have a simple string trio, two violins and a cello; or a violin and piano; or either a violin or piano alone; or a harp, violin, and piano; a phonograph record of beautiful organ music may be used.

INSTALMENT 13.

Suddenly Star realized that Wood was speaking, and she had heard a word.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Wood. Will you please say that again?"

She imagined he looked at her sympathetically as Wood carried out a wave of perfume Star did not even like.

"I would be ashamed to have any one hear me begging for anything like that," she thought.

From the beginning Star did not like Jennifer and while she could double the affectionate tenderness in her employer's voice she had also sensed the disappointment in it.

The little scene had its advantage, however. It put an end to Star's dreams. Million Wood was no longer enthroned in her heart. He was the man, one of the most interesting as well as the kindest she had ever known, but he was Jennifer's husband. She could no longer think of him except as married to Jennifer who made him pay for her caresses. And being a sensible girl as well as a proud one, Star told herself that she needed more companionship.

She had held herself aloof from the other young people at the boarding-house because she had a room to herself, but now she realized that in every book she read she had been substituting herself as the heroine and Million Wood as the hero. Leading a double existence was not a real one. She decided to put an end to it. She would ask one of the girls to go to a movie with her that very night.

Once determined upon a course, Star never hesitated. The girl sitting next to her at dinner had no engagement, but one of the boys, hearing Star's request, asked eagerly, "How about me, Star? I'm not attached."

Star had paid no attention to him before but she saw now that he was a nice looking chap with a decidedly boyish manner. She accepted at once, and accepted.

It was typical of Star's entire life that although she had asked another girl to go with her, to a movie, she was accompanied by a number of the masculine sex. Clifford Payne had not hesitated. He could not have been waiting for just such an opportunity. Other girls might spend hours wondering how to assess the interest and win the attentions of men. Star never gave it a thought. She didn't have to. Her beauty with its added lure of sadness was an attraction few men could resist. Yet the strange part about it was that she herself had never been really interested in any one except Million Wood, who was perhaps the one man in her acquaintance who was unattainable.

On the way to the theatre Clifford said, "Gosh, what a break! We had decided you must be engaged or something."

Star asked in surprise, "Why?"

"Really as I was darned alone," he reminded her. "I suppose you don't know that every man in the boarding house has been wanting a date with you."

She smiled.

"I don't believe that. You are exaggerating."

"Oh, no, I'm not. We couldn't make up our minds whether your indifference was a bluff or the real thing."

"I haven't meant to be indifferent," she assured him. "I have had a lot on my mind, and I'm still that way."

"That was obvious. I hope you've got rid of them, and for a selfish reason. I want you to myself."

Better Not Take Lovely Tresses For Granted

By HELEN POLLETT

More than a million girls has been shocked and surprised at the bad behavior of her hair. Nice tidy tresses suddenly and suddenly go loose. Thinning at the temples, they get duller and duller. Some are treated with a glorious halo that met all beholders' eyes. Under the new thinning arrangement, its owner took so much for granted. Never dreamed a thing to happen to that way. No foresight at all, that baby.

SUNSHINE

Yesterday, the waiting continued a summertime dosages of cod-liver oil, "poured down the throats of the five" let it to be inferred that I was discounting the healthful value of the sunshine. When the sun begins to get hot and consequently is charged with ultra-violet rays, it's my advice that you get these your child, that you may benefit from those rays.

Putting him out on the "sun porch" is a misnomer in most cases. Put him out on the "sun" ultra-violet rays out of the sunshine.

Putting the child outdoors all bundled up won't do much good while the sunshine needs to come in direct contact with his skin.

Of course, this is something that you should do only when he is careful, for baby's skin is delicate, and he can easily become sunburned. In the care of a very young child, out in the open for the first time, only a small area of his body should be exposed directly to the sun. Time and care must be taken for a minute or two. As he gets used to it, the exposed areas may be enlarged and the periods lengthened. Soon he will be able to stand the direct rays of the sun on all parts of his body, except his eyes, for a period of several minutes. But it's good idea to use a stopwatch or watch with a second hand to time these exposures carefully.

The Dionne Quintuplets have always been great sun bathers. As soon as they were moved into their present home, when only four months old, we commenced exposing them to the sun, but we had extra careful with them the sunburn problem. We would almost them taking strength from the rays of the sun.

Each baby has been out in the direct rays of the sun as long as three hours a day. It is a good thing to let him lie uncovered a while, but the children's heads, even the direct rays of the sun, in the open air.

Marie Quins go outdoors everyday; they dislike staying indoors even when it rains. Of course, we don't have the sunburn problem with them. Parents have had a summer, because we give the Quins sun lamp treatments in winter and thus keep their skin conditioned.

Sun suits that leave children's arms free to get the benefits of the sun are a splendid idea. If parents generally combine sunbathing by wearing them by keeping arms, shoulders necks, etc., covered most of the day until the wearers are gradually tanned.

Ottawa, June 15 — (CP) — When Hon. J. L. Ralston brings down the budget next week in his last speech as Finance Minister, Canadians will get a dollar-and-cent picture of what the Dominion is throwing into this fight.

Mr. average Citizen will probably be affected more than in any budget in years. New taxes, new schemes of war finance, new plans to back up the troops with Canadian resources are slated for inclusion in the most extensive budget in the country's history.

When the speech is over, Col. Ralston leaves the finance portfolio and this soldier-lawyer takes over where the late Hon. Norman Rogers so tragically left off in directing the fighting forces as National Defence Minister.

War Notes

The government was all set for Italy's entry into the war ... the formal Canadian proclamation of a state of war between the two countries is understood to have been prepared for such an eventuality several days in advance ... and the Mounties were organized for the Italian roundup ... complete lists of potentially-dangerous Italians had been carefully concocted ... foiling of the attempt to scuttle the Italian ship Capo Noli in the St. Lawrence River shows the navy was on the job...

Probably the most moving and sincere tributes the Commons heard in recent years were paid Mr. Rogers .... he took his heavy responsibilities most seriously but at unexpected moments showed touches of rare humor, emphasized with the flash of a boyish smile...

His favorite anecdote was about an incognito visit to an army canteen at Aldershot ... It was just after the Princes Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry of Winnipeg missed going to Norway ... A boisterous Pat relied into the canteen ... shouting to the Tommies in the room that he was just back from Norway ... a pop-eyed audience gathered to hear the account of the lad who appeared to have rallied with Bacchus too ... "What a scrap," shouted the private ... "Machine-gunned and bombed all the way..." He followed up with a harrowing account of a magnificent retreat .... Mr. Rogers sat quietly in the corner, laughing heartily over the imagination of this Canuck....

Movement of refugee children from Britain to Canada may get underway before long ... the plan calls for them to be settled in private homes ... summer camps may be used if the influx reaches large proportions ...

If you don't want to be kidded, keep away from the boys in khaki with "C.P.C." on their shoulders and badges ... they're the Canadian Postal Corps of the Canadian Active Service Force ... but wags in the unit are telling the curious that C.P.C. stands for "Canadian Parachute Corps"...

Sessional Chaff

What with secret sessions in the bother of parliaments in London, there was talk of such a move here ... but it doesn't appear likely now ... unless developments are extremely grave .... consultations between the Prime Minister and opposition leaders avoid the necessities for secret sessions.

The Senate Committee considering the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company diversion bill is a popular hearing .... the first meeting attracted almost as many members as attended the important railway hearings last year ... the large room was crowded .... some kind of reciprocal passport deal possibly is being arranged between Ottawa and Washington .... but light-lipped ... external affairs officials just smile wisely when asked about it....

Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York made a grand-slam hit with officials Ottawa ... his outspoken denunciation of Fascists in general ... found ready response among the cabinet and diplomats who heard him ... even his striped, in garish outfits dripping with gold braid, were impressive ....

Senator William Duff hails from Lunenburg, down on the rugged Nova Scotia coast and rules one of the colorful figures in the Upper House .... known as "Admiral Duff," he's a bluff, hearty man with the booming voice of a schooner captain ... in ringing tones he demanded in the Senate that the Commons be urged to expedite its business ... Senator Raoul Dandurand, Government leader, gravely assured Senator Duff that he had no doubt "your voice will be heard in the other House" ... the Commons is 300 yards away, down an echoing marble hall....

Danubian States Weigh Consequences Of Turkey's Action

Budapest, June 15 (AP).—A fresh drive for the maintenance of peace in southeastern Europe began today as the Danubian States weighed the likely consequences of Turkish entry into the war.

Informed quarters here are convinced that, should Turkey decide on active participation beside Britain and France, her western treaty partners, this act would spread the conflict throughout the Balkans in spite of the Balkan nations' prevailing reluctance to assume belligerent status.

Leader of the peace move appears to be King Carol of Rumania, who end.

That Yugoslavia — a traditional friend of France—is reorienting her national policy better to harmonize with Germany's current success was indicated by the release from prison of a dozen or more leaders of factions favoring the Rome-Berlin axis.

Reports from Bucharest suggest the king is urging Turkey to hold fast to the status quo. The Rumanian monarch also is represented as invoking Yugoslav support to this

Most prominent of these was former Premier Milan Stoyadinovitch, who was interned April 19 after Belgrade authorities announced discovery of a plot to overthrow the government and turn the country over to the Nazis. Now, according to reliable reports, he is in Belgrade seeking to form a pro-Axis cabinet.

ONE WAY YOU CAN HELP

HOW often in these days of world stress do we hear people say: " . . . but there isn't anything I can do about it." Mostly they are people precluded by age or sex from military service, who contemplate with bewilderment the possibility of disruption of the even tenor of their lives.

There is something that they — and everyone else not serving directly in Canada's war effort — can do about it. THEY CAN CONTINUE THEIR NORMAL EXPENDITURES.

People who curtail expenditures at this time wouldn't like to be called "Fifth Columnists" but, in truth, they are doing harm to their country and the cause of the Allies.

Our ability to carry on normal domestic trade during the war period will contribute much towards the final victory of Allied arms. Further, it will help to keep this country on an even keel in the reconstruction period following the war.

Stop and consider briefly some of the effects of your curtailment of normal expenditures:

1. You deprive yourself needlessly of things of necessity, utility and comfort.
2. Your local merchant finds his business restricted, may have to lay employees off, and is unable to contribute his normal amount for government and other patriotic purposes.
3. The wholesaler and the manufacturer similarly are affected.
4. Government revenues decline, necessitating more borrowing, with an added interest burden on the taxpayers.
5. Contributes to suggestions of lack of confidence in our ability to win this war

There is every reason to believe we can and will win this war — but it cannot be done with wishful thinking or deploring our lack of ability to do something about it. Even if it is only to it will help towards the final victory. And—as a parting thought — on many articles there is the possibility that you will save a considerable amount by buying now. Raw materials subject to war demands tend to rise in price.

Keep On Buying

FORD INSPECTS "MASS PRODUCTION" PLANE

Henry Ford is pictured here as he inspected a Curtiss P-40 pursuit plane which was flown to the Ford plant at Dearborn, Mich., to determine the possibility of turning it out by the mass production method. Ford, asked whether he found the plane comparable to contraption that he had expected, replied "No." Ford recently announced that given a free hand he could turn out 1,000 planes a day.

Brooklyn Takes Game Lead By Defeating Cincinnati Reds On 2 Hit Hurling by Hamlin

Score is 2-0 and Medwick Singles Home One of the Runs

Johnny Allen Throws Two-Hitter to Defeat Athletics 8 to 0

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

The test of a champion is what is sometimes called "winning when the chips are down."

Brooklyn Dodgers loaded up with Joe Medwick in left field yesterday and passed their examination, shutting out Cincinnati Reds 2-0 and taking a full game lead in the National League's race, Luke Hamlin pitched two-hit ball.

The margin of victory wasn't overwhelming and the clubs will have to do a lot more skirmishing to establish any real superiority. Of the nine games they have played together, the Dodgers have won five.

The fact remains that Brooklyn yesterday was a much stronger team than before Medwick donned a Dodger sunsuit. He got more on his in four chances, but this was a single with two men on base in the third inning and it drove in one of the two runs. In addition Medwick covered left field like a tarpaulin, making six putouts.

While the Reds and Dodgers were in a straighten out the National League angle, the leaders in the American League took another step forward in unison. The Boston Red Sox stifled Chicago White Sox 5-1 in a day game while Detroit Grahelhouse hidking Chicago 10 seven scattered hits.

Cleveland Indians showed they are a dangerous lot by trimming Philadelphia Athletics 8-0 on the two-hit hurling of Johnny Allen. Allen came within five outs of a no-hit game, losing it on a single by Sam Chapman in the eighth.

Hal Newhouser rationed Washington Senators on five pitches in Detroit Tigers slammed out a 10-1 victory on 13 hits, and New York Yankees trimmed a fearsome 17-hit barrage against St. Louis Browns to win 12-3 in a night game. Charley Keller had a perfect night at bat, hitting two home runs, a triple and a single.

The Cards, handled for the first time by their new manager, Billy Southworth, made a triumphant bow in the east by beating Philadelphia Phillies 6-2. New York Giants chalked up their seventh consecutive victory and kept their finger in the senior circuit's pennant picture by outscoring the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6.

Boston Bees downed the Chicago Cubs for the first time this year 4-2, on the four-hit hurling of Dick Errickson.

GOOD PITCHING FEATURES WORK IN LOOP GAMES

Jersey City Takes Both Ends of Twin Bill from Leading Wings

TORONTO WINS

Leafs Take Second Straight from Newark Bears by 5 to 2

By the Associated Press

The salient developments in yesterday's International League race can be summed up in two words—good pitching.

Seldom has the league seen more of its top flight snippers and hotter than they were in the single session that saw Rochester and Red Wings have their league lead cut to 1 1-2 games.

The second place Jersey City Giants made big inroads on the Wings' lead by sealing the league's both ends of a twilight-night double-header, 3-2 and 5-0.

And pitching did it for the winners. Clydell (Slick) Castleman for the New York Giant hurler, stopped the Wings with five hits in the first game, while Alejandro Carrasquel and Manuel Salvo teamed to stop the nightcap, with Alex scattering five blows and fanning eight to get credit for the victory.

Baltimore Orioles took the measure of Buffalo Bisons 10-9 and 6-4, as Orin Collier and Tom Hughes paired to hurl standout ball. Collier allowed the Bisons only five hits in as many innings in the abbreviated opener, while Hughes let them have only four blows in the nightcap.

Syracuse Chiefs called on a pitcher who hasn't been used much save in relief roles—Les Winckler—to down Montreal Royals 7-1. Les showed his annrecation at being named a starting pitcher by letting the losers down with only five hits.

George Washburn of Newark Bears almost got into the night's hero ranks for sterling relief-ing, allowing Toronto Maple Leafs only five hits—but he tired away from chances by issuing 11 passes and that enabled the tail-end club to take their second straight from the Bears 5-2.

Result Creates Three-Way Tie for League Leadership

With 53 runs scored between the two teams, the "Big-Z" nine handed the Corbin "Lockmakers" their first defeat of the season in the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League at the Collegiate Campus last evening when Chuck Barnett's "Big-Z" team scored three runs in their last turn at bat to break a tie and win by the count of 27 to 24.

It was the Lockmakers' first defeat in the league while in winning the Barnett-led nine advanced to a three-way tie for the league leadership with Corbins and the "K"-Nines.

Barney Smith's Corbins took a decided lead when they scored six runs in the second frame and scored in every subsequent inning except the ninth. After opening with two in the first, however, Corbins got ten in the next two frames, adding seven in the sixth and five in the seventh before Barnett's nine rallied in the winning counters in the eighth inning rally.

The Hitters

Bennett, Colden, Adams, Emerson and Hunter counted the majority of the hits in the game while Wilson, Marsh, Reddick, McKenna and Little wielded potent bats for the losers. Bennett, Archer and Wilson hit home runs. The latter was credited with continued errors on the part of both teams as the batters held an upper hand throughout. Betty Adams hurled the full nine innings for the winners, while Evelyn Reid shared the Corbin pitching duties with Sylvia Reddick, the latter going in as relief hurler in the sixth.

Weygand, Miracle Man

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

Paris, June 15 (CP)—Premier Paul Reynaud intimated a miracle might be necessary to win the war —and the people of France believe that miracle is a foregone conclusion with the arrival of General Maxime Weygand, commander-in-chief of the allied armies.

Popularity of Weygand in this country is 100 per cent. There's the peanut vendor who will with satisfaction: "Weygand's the man. Did you ever read about his campaign in Syria? The first day he arrived he fired, revoli and conscript or he just hanged a dozen or so of the traitors and gangsters and he had no more trouble".

AT THE McCARTHY

"21 DAYS TOGETHER"

Now, from the studio that gave you "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington", comes the most exciting romantic story to hit the screen. Academy Award - winning Vivien Leigh and internationally-acclaimed Laurence Olivier, in the year's most fascinating love story, "21 Days Together" which is starting next at the McCarthy Theatre.

Vivien Leigh is the lovely young English actress who scored personal triumphs in 'Fire Over England', "Sidewalks of London" and "A Yank at Oxford". Only he could anything the world has ever known before with her audience-winning performance in "Gone With the Wind". Chosen for the role after a two-year search, her selection evoked a world wide interest. That she meets the calls made the difficult demands of the Scarlett O'Hara characterization is proven by the ovation she received, and by her recent winning of the Academy award.

Laurence Olivier is equally as famed. An international stage favorite, his stellar performances in "Wuthering Heights", in "Rebecca" and "Clouds Over Europe", were only three of the many outstanding characterizations he has given the screen.

Stars of the first magnitude, Miss Leigh and Olivier shine brightly here with Leslie Banks whose most recent success was in "Jamaica Inn".

"21 Days Together" is based on the story by John Slaverchy, "The Temple and the Flame", and is one of the finest productions ever found.

"If I Had My Way."

The new Allan America with Miss Melody, little Diana Lynn and Bing Crosby, supported by El Brendel and Charles Winninger will be the screen's most outstanding comedian characters in Universal's big musical comedy hit, "If I Had My Way" is still showing at the McCarthy Theatre and is a real source of excellent entertainment for the entire family, is highly recommended.

AT THE BELLE

"Typhoon"

South Sea romance and adventure are glorified with technicolor in "Typhoon" which is now on the Bellg Theatre screen.

Dorothy Lamour, singing heroine of "Road to Singapore," has returned to another South Sea setting, but this time she brings less cloth. Instead of a sarong, Dorothy has wrapped her femininity in a seamlier costume, called a lava lava. The combination is most effective and her bright cloth has coined a new word—technicolor!

Robert Preston, who plays opposite Dorothy, and Lynne Overman, who supplies their humor, are marine on the un-inhabited island of Jarvis. Preston is a ship-wrecked sailor, Overman is a beachcomber. Hidden with Dorothy, the sailors avoid immediate capture by the Chief Ires the island.

A terrific climax follows when the calm sea is suddenly angered by the season's typhoon. Palm trees are flung down in sheets. Wind, full-gale force, howls a sweeping devastation. Whole palm trees are uprooted, and go hurling by the screen. Then a mammoth wave, out of island wave bolls in, the final crest leaves the island a wreck. Soul-inspiring scene is hailed as Hollywood's greatest storm triumph, surpassing in realism even the earthquake scenes of "San Francisco"—and ten times more thrilling

AT THE CAPITOL

"BACK DOOR TO HEAVEN"

Down through the years from the long remembered "Over the Hill" to Mother, Human History become a series of motion picture dramas which could be seen with the heart, but never has there been a drama closer to the heart of the average man and woman than "Back Door to Heaven" starts with a boy who might have been any boy, who grows up in a small town—it might have been any small town—but the pattern of his life is not as even one. He doesn't fall into the usual job, marry, raise a family, and become respectable citizen. He tries things. Wallace Ford, playing this boy, grown to manhood, has all the fine qualities of the career marked by outstanding characterization. Around him his life is peopled with characters who try to help him, but who cannot set the pattern of his life is not as even one. He doesn't fall into the usual job, marry, raise a family, and become respectable citizen. He tries things. Wallace Ford, playing this boy, grown to manhood, has all the fine qualities of the career marked by outstanding characterization. Around him his life is peopled with characters who try to help him, but who cannot set the pattern of his life—Stuart Erwin as a friend he makes in reform school, Aline MacMahon as the girl who grows up with him, loves him and stands by him always, and Allen Jenkins as the school teacher who believes in him.

"The Women Men Marry"

Newspaper headlines, and the thrill of the hunted and curbing of gangster activities, again have prominence in the latest to daring motion picture.

It is Robert Montgomery — Golden-Mayer's "The Women Men Marry," featuring George Murphy and Josephine Hutchinson, which brings to light the inner workings of a newspaper, and the thrill, and tragic persons were robbed of millions of dollars. The picture comes to the Capitol Theatre next.

Michael Arlen himself an ace reporter for many years, has produced the picture from a newspaperman's viewpoint.

"It has been our purpose," said Arlen, "to show, accurately and in detail the insecurity, integrity and activities of modern newspapers in protecting society from swindlers and other criminals."

Much of the action takes place in a newspaper office which was built especially to duplicate the city rooms in which Fessler has worked.

Claire Dodd, Sidney Blackmer and Cliff Edwards, head the supporting cast with John Arledge, Peggy Ryan, Helen Jerome Eddy and Toby Wing in featured roles.

NAZIS DELIBERATELY BOMB OPEN FRENCH TOWN

With the sole purpose of spreading terror among civilians, Nazi bombers blasted this open French town until all that remains is crumbling wreckage. This town had no military objectives of any kind, but nevertheless, the Nazi bombers poured a deadly rain of high explosives and incendiary bombs upon it.

These refugees, ever fearful that at any moment a German plane might swoop down on them to do a strafing job, hurry along a road as they flee deeper into French territory before the advancing Nazi military juggernaut. Once, they stopped at Paris, but soon were on their way again. A woman and a nun, ABOVE, use wheelbarrows to carry belongings.

Complete Hog Census Essential

One factor that is causing the Bacon Board much trouble and greatly reducing the efficiency of its work is the number of hogs that are coming to market more than was anticipated.

The Bacon Board is anxious to assist in the marketing of Canadian bacon in such a way that the producer would receive the best possible price for his hogs.

A complete hog census is most essential at the present time and would be of great value to all interested in the efficient marketing of hogs. However, if and when the Board does ask for a definite census the sincere co-operation of all producers will make the job easy and accurate.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of June 14, 1940, are as follows:

Name and address:	GRADE C No.	A	1	2	3	Premium
J. W. Coulter, Roslin	11	1	9	2		$5.00

Butter Lower; Top Grade Eggs Higher

Toronto, June 15 — Produce lines moved through the hands of the previous week during this week's trade, Dairy Produce Commission Eggs showed a firm tone on top grades under decreased receipts, butter prices are shaded down as dealings remained dull.

Though a decrease in production and quality was responsible primarily for the firmer undertone in top grade eggs. Good demand was reported on all grades, with the exception of No. 3 stock, trading lagged. Government inspected shipments totalled 30,000 cases, a decrease of 1 cent to 1 cent premium.

Lack of aggressive buying together with the normal increase in current receipts rather than selling pressure was responsible for lower prices on the butter market this week. Prices were reduced about 2 some points as retarding storing operations, buyers uncertain as to the extent of the drop in the market. The stock report had practically no bearing on dealings as it revealed the statistical position little changed in the last month. Small lots of No. 1 Ontario creamery solids were purchased for current requirements at 20c to 20½c per pound.

'PEACE OFFENSIVE'

Harold Nicolson, Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Information, told a Leicester political meeting that the "main purpose of the French army is defensive."

Unlimited Resources Will Turn Tide

Nicolson asserted that "this war will be won in the seas and in the air "so soon as unlimited resources of the British Empire and of the Americas can be mobilized to turn the tide."

He predicted that Hitler would be unable to compete with those resources and would "turn and twist in the hope of inducing this country and her Allies to make peace."

The Times, editorially lauding Allied forces in France, said:—

"The worst consequence of the fighting in Flanders would be to bring us back to the position we once occupied a year ago, when Napoleon commanded all the European shores opposite to our own and laid his plans for invasion. We were not daunted then, but there is certainly no need to be more apprehensive now."

Wm. Wee Drebrowski Would Encourage All Freedom-Lovers

The News-Chronicle said:—

"A declaration of war by America now would indeed be a mighty and bounding hope into every Frenchman's heart. The effect on the British would be correspondingly depressing.

"Now in this momentous crisis, America may have it in her power to tide civilization over the darkest hour by a strong dramatic act."

The newspaper's correspondent, Vernon Bartlett, citing the odds against France, expressed the view it is doubtful whether anything short of a declaration of war by the United States could materially alter the situation."

The Daily Mail declared:—

"Complacency has nearly ruined us. Men who have proved their individual worth in the past few days are wanted with absolute powers, not men whose minds are still thinking of the Boer war, but men who make light of the cunning of the Germans. We must face the fact that genius directs the German machine."

The editor of the Daily Herald asserted "the resignation of Italy from the fatuous unpreparedness rests on the men who had been powerful and freemasonry the information. We remedy it during the coming months immediately before and after the outbreak of war. We may have now to postpone our victory. But I, for one, have no doubt of the verdict."

FRENCH LAUNCH

Tours Raided.

In Tours, which became the temporary seat of the Government last Monday night, anti-aircraft fire, the roar of planes and bomb explosions were heard several times during the night as the Government prepared to move even further south, presumably to Bordeaux, on the Atlantic coast almost 200 miles to the southwest.

(A single German reconnaissance plane flew over Tours at 9:40 a.m., 1.40 a.m. EDT) today according to a Reuters News Agency dispatch. The plane was met by a gauntlet of heavy anti-aircraft fire.)

Laboring against heavy odds on land, with indications that might fall back to the River Loire as their next natural line of defence, the French sent all units of their fleet to strike its first major blow against Italy.

Industries Shelled

Thursday night and early Friday French warships shelled Italian "industrial establishments," presumably in the Genoa region, of the country, and the railway line which, running from Genoa to Marseille along the French Riviera, continues into Italy and then into the Italian coast through Genoa south to Rome.

At the same time French bombers struck across Italy to the Adriatic coast and set fire to the depots at Venice.

From East Switzerland, came reports of heavy firing by French forts along the Rhine, which was aimed at German troops who had went unanswered except for Nazi machine-gun fire directed at the French observers. The Germans were presumed to be short of ammunition.

BRITISH IRONCLAD CAVALRY RANGES ON ENTIRE FRONT

Tanks, Armored Cars, Planes and Motorized Infantry Perform Heroically

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, June 15 (Saturday) (AP)—British ironclad cavalry, outnumbering the enemy, is ranging today along a front as wide as all France tonight, reinforcements streaming down driving southward from Paris to the next line of defence, the Somme-Loire.

Tanks and armored cars are moving in full quiet through forests in flight—as they gave for months — against the German technical superiority, simply put, consists of a first wave of bombing and machine gunning planes, followed by heavy tanks, and finally motorized infantry equipped with new mortars of deadly accuracy and firing high explosive shells are rushed to the flanks by infantry and support tanks.

The cavalry officer of one of Britain's armored divisions told me that his unit had been in action and fought this flood of iron and death for a whole week. The old dogged spirit of the cavalry still lives encased in armor plate.

"That's the way we fought this flood of iron and death for a whole week. The old dogged spirit of the cavalry still lives encased in armor plate.

"The men called the biggest German tank they met 'Mathilda' and it is certain. "Our tanks are light but we do damned well against their cruisers."

The biggest attack yet launched by a British armored division was at a German bridgehead on the River Somme, in which two light tank regiments smashed and battered throughout an entire day against the glittering German cruisers.

They drew off, badly mauled, as the heavy tanks of the tank corps thundered through and threw the Germans back.

SOVIET THREAT IS ACCEPTED

A second demand was that a new government be formed with "persons who enjoy confidence, who are willing to ensure honest fulfilment" of the Soviet-Lithuanian treaty of mutual assistance and stop activities of enemies of the Soviet Union.

The third demand called upon the Lithuanian government to agree immediately to the passage over Lithuanian territory and distribution to vital centres of Soviet troops in sufficient strength to safeguard the fulfilment of the mutual assistance treaty and prevent provocation of the Soviet Union in Lithuania.

Lithuania is along the border of East Prussia. Lithuania granted Russia the right to maintain a garrison in the country last year when the mutual assistance treaty was signed.

Allege Hostile Acts

The Soviet note said that the government "regards the execution of these measures as an unconditional conditions for the working of the Soviet-Lithuanian treaty."

Reasons given for the demands were alleged toleration and encouragement of hostile acts against the Soviet garrison, such as kidnapping and murder of Soviet soldiers; the "secret adherence" of Lithuania to a military alliance with Latvia and Estonia after conclusion of the Soviet-Lithuanian treaty, and publication of the "military newspaper" in Lithuania "openly hostile and insulting" to the Soviet Union as described as the "organ of the new military alliance."

CROP PROSPECTS BEST IN YEARS

Northern Plenty of Rain Turns Fields Into Lush Green

Reeves State Prospects

Prospects for the best crops in twenty-five years loom ahead for Prince Edward county, according to farmers in all parts of the county, reeves of municipalities, and others. The latest reports stated this week.

The heavy rains that restored the needed early planting season, and retarded to some extent these early crops, have given way to sun in the district, were of estimable benefit to the higher, dryer land of the north.

Hay, it was reported, as to other parts, will exceed all earlier expectations. Fall and spring grains are covering the fields of the north with a lush green carpet. Pastures are heavy with grass and cattle that wintered poorly if anything are improving considerably, the reporters believe said.

Warden J. L. Churcher, was emphatic in his statements of conditions in and about his township of Dungannon: "The crops will be the best in years, while ideal weather conditions have reigned in the county at this time of the year, presenting one of the most beautiful pictures that has been seen in a year."

Tourist traffic, the warden expected, will be much better than usual this year. Roads are better, and other summer resorts have added improvements, which he thought would result in an increased influx of visitors.

First of Season's Strawberries Sell Well on Saturday Market

General Price is 25 Cents Although Some Sell for Less Gooseberries Also Appear

BROILERS HIGHER

Luscious red strawberries, the first of the season, and of quality said to be well above that of the bulk offering of a year ago, made their bow on the Belleville market last Saturday, and were quickly disposed of at prices ranging from 20 to 25 cents per box, prices compared well with those of 1939. Extra quality berries were quoted at 25 cents, but the bulk of general prices ranged in the vicinity of 20 cents.

The War This Week

Canadian Press Cable Editor

Allied defenders rain blow in the midst week of the war. Ten days after the great German break-through the Germans entered Paris and the left wing of their armies veering to the southwest directed their drive toward the Maginot Line from the rear, setting at the moment of the Allies' greatest peril, entered the great fortress without a shot.

These reverses were balanced in part by actions in the air which have practically made that country the non-belligerent ally of Britain and France. Premier Benito Mussolini described Italy's behaviour thus, but Britain's bombers held the dagger has struck it into the back of Germany's ally in the defence of isolation and promised all possible material aid to the Allies.

French Army Not Smashed

In withdrawing from the north of Paris the French Army was not smashed. It was forced back by the weight of numbers and superior equipment. Paris, the heart of France, was saved by the deal of a siege. Its architectural treasures, which the Nazis of Germans marched in, the capital was declared an open city and the government was removed to the southwest, first in Tours and later in Bordeaux.

Italy said she was fulfilling her obligations as a partner in the Axis by declaring war. She began hostilities against France a few hours later with skirmishes and bombing raids on the Italian-French frontier, hitting cities of Milan and Turin and on Italian African possessions. The Italian islands of Sardinia, Malta, northern Kenya and Aden. More than 200,000 tons of Italian shipping was captured by the Allies or sunk by Italian crews.

TURKEY ASKED TO MAINTAIN NEUTRALITY

BUCHAREST (AP)—Diplomatic circles said today King Carol of Rumania had dispatched a note to President Ismet Inonu of Turkey asking that Turkey maintain neutrality in order to prevent the war from spreading to the Balkans.

Through a Rumanian diplomatic courier, stratigorically denied dispatch of the note, reports persisted that King Carol's appeal was transmitted through the Rumanian minister at Ankara, the Turkish capital.

The foreign ministers said the approach simultaneously had sent a note to Prince Paul, Regent of Yugoslavia, making a similar plea.

GERMANS 20 MILES SOUTH OF PARIS

LONDON (AP)—The German armies have reached points 20 miles south of Paris both to the east and west of Nemours, Reuters News Agency reported in dispatch from Tours said today. (Only Reuters reported this.)

In their advance west of Paris, the dispatch reported, the Nazi forces were driving in the direction of Chartres, famous cathedral city, 45 miles southwest of the capital and 80 miles northwest of Tours on one of the main highways between the two cities.

SURRENDER OF PARIS NOT NAZI VICTORY

NEW YORK (AP)—"The surrender of Paris does not constitute a German victory," an announcer stated in a broadcast from the British Broadcasting Corporation.

"Victory will not be won in the Mediterranean, but on the western front," the announcer said. Every person understands that Paris was not defended because it was not vital to the French line of defence and the surrender of Paris does not constitute a German victory."

This informed source said the movement of the French government had interrupted communications and that until transmission was restored no news started again there was nothing to say about the military information.

TURKEY ASKED TO MAINTAIN NEUTRALITY

BUCHAREST (AP)—Diplomatic circles said today King Carol of Rumania had dispatched a note to President Ismet Inonu of Turkey asking that Turkey maintain neutrality in order to prevent the war from spreading to the Balkans.

Through a Rumanian diplomatic courier, stratigorically denied dispatch of the note, reports persisted that King Carol's appeal was transmitted through the Rumanian minister at Ankara, the Turkish capital.

The foreign ministers said the approach simultaneously had sent a note to Prince Paul, Regent of Yugoslavia, making a similar plea.

Greetings Sent to O.S.D. Pupils by English Magazine for the Deaf

Pillowing is an excerpt from the School Magazine of the Royal Cross School for the Deaf, Preston, England received by the staff of the Ontario School:

"Yesterday we received a copy of 'The Canadian Deaf.' It is the magazine published by the Ontario School for the Deaf in Canada. It contained a picture of three pen news items from our school magazine, and greetings from the boys. We were mostly about the war, and fighting raging round us. Several pupils of the Ontario school are due to write not to have to take precautions as we do. Also, German bombers have no chance of reaching Canada as it is about 4,000 miles from their bases."

"We have read with pride how the Canadian troops have come across to help us with the war. The French Canadian troops are on guard at the Royal Palace and at the week-end the Scots Canadians will take guard."

"Canada can also help us very much by sending stocks of timber, which we are in need and aeroplanes and other necessities."

"We are always interested about the activities of the Canadian deaf children, but we never thought they would write to us and to us. We should like to send greetings to the pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf."

Library Club Weiner Roast.

On Thursday June the 6th the members of the Library Club held a delightful weiner roast at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. C. Clapp on the bay shore. The girls, who hiked or went in cars, had a grand time swimming, singing and of course eating, which was by no means neglected. Surprising quantities of weiners, rolls, fresh doughnuts, revels, suckers and soft drinks were consumed. Miss Bunting, who was in charge of the party, and Miss Wallen kindly acted as chaperones.

A meeting of the Club was held and next year's executive was elected. It comprised:—

President—Joyce Watson.

Treasurer—Norma Correll.

Vice President—Phyllis Clapp.

Secretary to be elected from Grade 10.

Reporter—Margaret Coulby.

FRANCE SEEKS ARMISTICE

Britain Resolute To Carry on War Against Germany

Announcement by Marshal Petain, New Premier of France, Has Not Shaken Inflexible British Determination to Continue War

PETAIN'S MESSAGE

New Premier of France Speaks of Seeking Ways to Put an End to Hostilities'

(By J. F. Sanderson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, June 17 (CP Cable)—The capitulation of France will make no difference to the determination of this country to fight on.

Marshal Henri Petain's announcement that he had ordered fighting to cease while negotiations are started with the Germans has shocked Britain, but has not shaken the inflexible determination of the British government and the British people to continue the war.

Prime Minister Churchill will make a statement to the House of Commons tomorrow when he is expected to reiterate the declaration that Britain will fight on alone the sword.

The big question of the hour is: Where do we go from here? This question can be answered only in the broad sense because there are too many missing factors and too many impondrables.

Petain's Speech

The translation of Premier's Petain's speech read from London by the British Broadcasting Corporation and recorded at Columbia Broadcasting offices in the United station follows:-

"French men and women: At the call of the French President I have assumed the leadership of the government of France. I have been thinking of those who have been fighting since the old glorious traditions, against an enemy of huge numerical superiority. I also think of those old combatants whom I commanded during the last war. I have given myself to France to better her situation at this grave hour.

Why The Weather?

(By Major A. H. Thiessen, Science Service Meteorologist.)

Heating the oceans! How the oceans are heated is of interest because of the great role they have in moderating the temperatures over the continents. On a hemisphere of about 50 per cent of the sun's radiation reaching the surface, 70 per cent oceans absorb about 95 per cent to calm weather reflecting only the remainder. The oceans heat very slowly as it takes volume for volume about 3000 times as much heat to raise water one degree as it does air. The oceans are also warmed somewhat by the atmosphere which is heated is warmer. If some parts of the oceans are warmer than others, distribution is effected by the ocean currents.

War Planes For Britain May Now be Flown Across U.S.-Canadian Border

Washington, June 17 (AP)—The United States acted today to facilitate the delivery of war planes to the Allies by authorizing the ships to be flown across the Canadian-American borders.

Formerly, planes bought in the United States by the Allies had to be shipped at the Canadian border, and towed across.

A new interpretation of the Neutrality Act, drafted by the Treasury and approved by the State Department, said that the border stops are no longer necessary.

The ruling means that after the Allies pay for a plane at an American factory, they can have it flown across the Canadian border, and legal title to the plane will automatically be transferred as the ship soars over the boundary line.

Theoretically, the ruling made it possible for Allied planes to take off from the United States directly for Europe, although this flight would be too long for most of the ships purchased.

FIRST DIVISION, CANADIAN TROOPS IS IN ENGLAND

A Small Advance Party Sent It Was Impossible to Disclose Whereabouts of Division

Ottawa June 17—(CP)—The 1st Canadian Division of the Canadian Active Service Force is in England, it was learned here today.

According to reports here a small advance party of the Canadian 1st Division actually reached England Friday, but information available as to whether it was ordered to return.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King is expected to make a statement on the movements and activities of the Canadian troops in relation to recent war developments in the House of Commons this afternoon.

When the British Expeditionary force was ordered to France to aid the hard-pressed French army about a week ago, conjecture was as to whether the 1st Canadian Division would go with them. It was known that the division was at the disposal of the British authorities and that it was one of the better equipped and trained forces available in England.

The dictates of military secrecy, however, made it impossible to disclose what troops went to England at that juncture. Thus the whereabouts of the Canadians remained wrapped in secrecy and still remain so, except for the brief announcement that they are now in England.

Chungking, June 17 (AP)—Bombs dumped from raiding Japanese planes endangered the United States gunboat Tutuila yesterday, one projectile falling so close that the crew was ordered to take cover.

The Tutuila carried a complement of 58 officers and men.)

Lieut. Robert Dorsey, commander of the gunboat on Yangtze River patrol duty, said bomb fragments pelted the deck. The Tutuila is lowing over the river from shore fires almost obscured the ship from view.

ARK OF JUNEAU NOW IN ALASKA

Praise Heaped Upon Paul Sakto Who Piloted the Foot Boat from Tacoma With Family Aboard

Ketchikan, Alaska, June 17—(CP)—Praise for his pioneering spirit was heaped upon Paul Sakto today following his amazing voyage here from Tacoma, Wash., with his wife and seven children in a 30-foot motor boat, the "Ark of Juneau."

The Sakto welder from Richmond, Va. who carried his boat cross-country on a trailer, chugged triumphantly into this port yesterday to complete a voyage which many veteran seamen predicted would end in disaster.

Sakto is seeking a "new life" for himself and his family on an Alaskan homestead. Eventually, he planned on staking out a Coal Inlet, but when he learned that Ketchikan was the 186 boat-miles last year he abandoned the idea.

Mayor Harry McGee welcomed Sakto when the "Ark" arrived here and a dock before it was expected.

"We see by the papers," the mayor said, "that you had some trouble getting here (Puget Sound etes). Those fellows out there must be pretty salty." They ought to remember 96 Alaskans have not forgotten."

"Like doubters of all pioneering ventures, they said you couldn't do it. But you have proved you came through. Alaskans think more of people like you than those who wait around for something to turn up. Alaska is full of opportunities, and we wish you the best of luck in forging them out."

The "Ark," powered by a 12-horse automobile engine, completed the 1,000-mile trip of some 900 hours in 56 days. Much of that time was spent in Seattle where the juvenile court issued an order prohibiting the young miner from further boarding the craft. Sakto picked them up later at Anacortes, Wis., and headed north.

Governments Reorganized in Line That Full Implements be Given Mutual Pacts

Stockholm, June 17—(AP)—Tallinn, Estonia and other cities were occupied today by Soviet troops who marched in shortly after the government accepted Moscow's ultimatum.

Latvia was also occupied by the Soviet soldiers. (The Berlin radio said Riga, Latvia's capital, was occupied.

President Antanas Smetona of Lithuania was reported to have fled to Germany and been interned at Koenigsberg. The newspaper Aftonbladet said in a Kaunas dispatch that he had asked to be returned to his own country.

Soviet intentions roused much speculation as Berlin reported it was argued that troop concentrations were considerably larger than necessary for domination of the small Baltic states where Russia already had been.

Questions left unanswered were: Is Russia merely reaching out to regain territories she once held, while the world is engrossed and undistracts major attention from her actions?

Is she strengthening military preparedness in anticipation of a break with Germany?

Is she acting in co-operation with the Nazis?

VETERAN FLIER DISCOVERED SAFE

Three Miners Who Are on Weekend Fishing Trip Find Albin Dixon

Cavendish, Ont., June 17 (CP)—Flying Officer Edwin Albin Dixon, 40-year-old veteran of First Great War air service, is in Minden Hospital recovering from the effects of six days' wandering in the rugged Canadian wilderness of northwestern Ontario after his Royal Canadian Air Force plane crashed.

Three miners on a week-end fishing trip to Kamaniskeg Lake found Dixon yesterday and they took the flyer to hospital at Minden. Physicians said he was suffering from exposure, lack of food and shock, but added that his condition was not serious.

Dixon was missing since last Monday while flying from Kapuskasing, Ont., to Winnipeg with a squadron of twelve R.C.A.F. planes. He told his rescuers that fuel shortage forced him to "bail out" in the bush "some miles" from where he was found.

Dixon, formerly of Vermillion, Alta., and Edmonton, was not certain of location of the lake on which he left his plane but said that the Canadian Shield it was surmised it was Big Long Lac.

Alone in the wilderness, Dixon decided in an attempt to reach the railroad on foot and he was only about six miles short of Minden when found yesterday when he hailed the three miners, Wm. Cox, Jack Martin and Art Agombar.

Fierce Battle Rages at Pontarlier After Broadcast of Armistice

Les Berters, Switzerland (at the French Border), June 17—(AP)— Two hours after Premier Henri Petain's broadcast announcement that he had asked the German for an armistice, a fierce battle began today on the plain behind Pontarlier, where large numbers of German troops reported found their path to the south blocked by French infantry.

Pontarlier is 30 miles southeast of Besancon, in the rugged Doubs region.

A great rumble of field guns was heard on the Swiss side of the Les Verriers Valley, through which hundreds of refugees were streaming, fleeing into Switzerland.

They reported the battle started when the Germans tried to enter Pontarlier. The French, they said, were fighting stubbornly. The Germans were trying to fight their way into the town after practically surrounding it with motorized troops and light field pieces.

About 5:25 p.m. (11:25 p.m. E.S.T.) watchers on the Swiss frontier saw several hundred armed uniformed figures appear on the crest of a hill on the French side of the frontier and start to move across the grassy slope toward Switzerland.

Swiss frontier soldiers advanced to meet them. They were exhausted French Alpine Chasseurs, who said they had been cut off from the rest of the army by large numbers of German troops east of Pontarlier.

The men handed their arms to the Swiss without a word. Many fell exhausted on the grass just inside the Swiss frontier and fell into deep sleep. Others, unable to sleep, threw their uniforms in rags, and some had no shoes. Others had no jackets. Some of them bore minor wounds.

France Near End Military Resources Asks For Peace

FIGHTING GOES ON

French Fleet Declared Intact but Its Disposition Was Uncertain — Announcement of New Cabinet Comes After Night of Conferences

Bordeaux, June 17 (AP)—France, near the end of her military resources, asked Hitler for peace today.

Marshal Henri Petain, hero of the battle of Verdun, broke the news to his countrymen in a broadcast.

"It is necessary to try to end the fighting," said the 84-year-old premier.

He made contact with the adversary last night, asking him as soldier to soldier to seek with me the means to stop the fight."

Paris had fallen. The industrial cities of the north were in the hands of the invader. The Swastika flew over Versailles.

The Maginot Line, France's hope for defense against war, and the German army of more than 2,000,000 was sweeping southward.

Petain, whose defense of Verdun 24 years ago gave France her watchword: "They shall not pass!" took over the government from Paul Reynaud last night after a day of cabinet discussions on what help the United Statesmi ght offer.

No Immediate Response

(There was no immediate word of a direct response to Petain's offer. The German High Command announced Hitler was to see Mussolini.)

London, June 17 — (CP) — A group of members of parliament has been called to meet tomorrow to consider "arming the population" of Britain against invasion.

The call was issued Saturday by Thomas Davies, an Independent member of Parliament.

FAMED MAGINOT LINE ABANDONED

500,000 French Troops Ordered Withdrawn by Weygand in Nick of Time

Basel, June 18 (CP)).—The famed Maginot Line—one of the greatest fortified systems the world has ever known—was virtually abandoned by the French approximately a day before Marshal Henri Petain, new French premier, had ordered hostilities to cease while negotiations were started with the Germans.

Reports reaching here indicated the French had withdrawn their 500,000 troops out of the German jaws in the nick of time. These French forces were reported engaged in fierce rear-guard action as they withdrew. Motorized Nazi columns plunged forward toward the Swiss frontier through the Jura Mountains.

It appeared to military observers here that General Maxime Weygand, Allied commander-in-chief, had issued the order too soon in ordering the withdrawal of most of the Maginot defenders.

The inhabitants of Basel, accustomed to being awakened during the night, by artillery exchanges along the Rhine, felt something unusual was afoot by the lack of activity over the week-end.

TRUE ATTRIBUTES OF FREEMASONRY FAITH, HOPE, LOVE

Dr. James Semple Speaks to Members of Local Lodges at Annual Church Service

200 MEMBERS PARADE

The true attributes of Freemasonry—Faith, Hope and Love were the basis of the discourse delivered by Rev. Dr. James Semple at Bridge Street United Church yesterday, when speaking to the three Masonic Lodges in the city attached for the annual Masonic church service. Upwards of 300 members of the Craft paraded from the Masonic Temple headed by Wor. Bro. Fred Chapman, marshal. The lodges present and their respective ruling Masters were: Moira Lodge No. 11, Wor. Bro. E. Bateman; The Belleville Lodge No. 122, Wor. Bro. E. S. Hartman and Hurwitz Lodge No. 383, Wor. Bro. M. Davidson. During the service Dr. R. J. Deacon, M.P.P., D.D.G.M. of Wellington, read the Masonic lessons.

Taking part of the 13th Chapter of Corinthians "as to the abiding of faith and Hope and Love, these three, but the greatest of all is Love," which was the basis of the faith's translation.

"This is the greatest, strongest, deepest thing Paul ever wrote and exemplifying the Brotherhood of man in the world's supreme need today; more than our eloquence, or our knowledge; or our wealth of all else besides, it needs our love. True love is not sentimental, it is the cure for love's mistakes is more love, more understanding and more love we often blunder because we do not love enough.

"Let us look first—Faith. We have faith in God as the Supreme Ruler of the Universe, the First beginning, God of the end, the Eternal is the Supreme cause. We must have faith in God as a God of love and justice and in the immortality of the soul.

"Hope Immortality a Certainty.

"The savage hurles his spear with his weapons. Greeks, Babylonians and Mohammedans all lift their eyes beyond the present and into Greater things. The very fact of atonement to come is an inevitable issue," stated the speaker. He also made several Christian parables in connection with his text.

"Pregnancony has its object in seeking after truth and truth is truth, truth to God and God is Truth. In finding or 'truth we find God. The noblest and greatest of the Unseen virtues are sustained by vice and unspotted by sin; having put on Faith," was the theme of the remainder of the speaker.

Bro. Asmo Bankier sang a solo, while the church choir sang "Where Will Thou Have Us They People" by Francis Shaw with Miss Leona Riggs directing.

RALSTON'S BUDGET COMES THURSDAY

Higher Taxes and Slashed Exemptions on Personal Incomes Expected

Ottawa, June 17—(CP)—This is budget night in the House of Parliament Hill centres for the most part around the fact that Finance Minister Ralston will give the Commons, at 8 p.m. (EDST), showing how he proposes to raise new revenue for prosecution of the war.

As much as possible this is going to be a pay-as-you-go financing, to a government announcement when the budget was brought down at the special session last fall. For that reason Canadians may expect new imposts.

Col. Ralston, after delivering the budget, moves to the National Defence Ministry, succeeding Hon. Norman Rogers, killed in an air crash last ago today in an air crash. Thus Col. Ralston, who entered the Cabinet as minister at $7000,000,000 will have considerable say in how it is spent.

Higher taxes and slashed exemptions on personal incomes are considered consideration in the framing of the budget together with higher taxes on liquor, beer, largely those imported, and a Federal gasoline tax.

Taxes Remain Secret

Just exactly what the new taxes may be remain a secret. But it is known that Ralston has had an ordnance Department, the National Revenue Department and the Treasury Board at work during the past few days in the pre-war period. Prime Minister Mackenzie King and all his colleagues having to do directly with the war effort kept in close touch with their offices, or remained in them, during the Easter week-end when the news of war in France became known.

Air Minister C. G. Power, acting Defence Minister, and Col. Ralston as Defence Minister designate, left for Montreal on the week-end, held conferences with the chiefs of staff and the war cabinet.

A new piece of machinery is to be tried out on Mr. Chester Sills farm this week. Called the "Tripod method. These Tripods are made of poles and approximately one half ton of hay is built on these. No doubt if this method proves successful it will become the modern way.

The League for Patriotic Action believes the Government needs the support of a strong public opinion if it is to adopt the vigorous measures that are necessary to achieve ultimate victory.

Canada Urgently Requires:

1. To meet the armed enemy forces and to guard against "fifth column" and other internal dangers:—

1. The mobilization of the Non Permanent Active Militia as constituted at the outbreak of War so as:
   (a) To bring the Canadian Active Service Force immediately to four full divisions, to be increased to six divisions as training and equipment facilities permit;
   (b) To provide reinforcement depots for the Canadian Active Service Force units by incorporating in the Non Permanent Active Militia the existing depots;
   (c) To be available for Home Defence purposes.
2. (a) An immediate increase of the Home Defence Force of veterans to 25,000 all ranks;
   (b) Enrolment at once of auxiliary Home Defence Units within the structure of the Non Permanent Active Militia.

Let all citizens make known to the Government that they support the above measures as the minimum immediate action leading to the exertion of Canada's full power at home and abroad.

2. To make effective Canada's full strength in money, material resources and personnel:—

1. Mobilization of wealth, industry and labour under a single authority so as to provide tanks, guns, aeroplanes and all necessary armament and equipment for our overseas and home defence forces;
2. Organization of our agricultural resources so as to bring to the assistance of the Allied nations the products which they most urgently require;
3. Organization of the women of Canada under Governmental direction so as to make their energy and loyalty productive of the contribution of supplies and services of which they are capable.

BRITAIN WILL FIGHT TO THE END AGAINST THE FOE

Today's news of a request from France for an armistice was unpleasant news for the world. While Britain naturally felt the shock, it was known that the French situation has been very serious for some days and there was no surprise.

But Britain is grimly determined to fight on against Germany. She will defend her island home from the invader, she will trust in the strength of her soldiery, of her sea power, of her air force and defences. With the fleet she will blockade a good share of the nations of the continent of Europe through which Germany and Italy, the warring dictatorships, obtain supplies and has confidence that in the end the aggressor nation will be repelled and Britain will bring peace.

British troops will be carry on the struggle against the foe, for there never has been any intention of letting up in the conflict.

FRANCE

France has asked Germany to seek the means of stopping the fighting. A despatch from Bordeaux, the provisional capital, states that France near the end of her military resources, has asked for peace terms. A despatch from Madrid added that the Foreign Minister asserted that Germany had invited Spain to take part in the peace negotiations which France is being disclosed that Spain was acting as intermediary in transmitting France's request for terms on which it would base her arms. Despite these reports it was reported that the light artillery of the French on the Maginot line this morning began shelling German positions, the German guns replying.

If the reported request for an armistice is granted, there will probably result from participation in the war the great Republic of France, Britain being left alone intact to fight the combined power of Germany and Italy.

The Nazi armies have put up a magnificent great struggle against the enemy. Through the misfortune which took place near the northwesterly extension of the Maginot line which allowed the Germans to open a way through on a front of sixty miles, and compelled the retirement of the French armies and resulting in the surrender of the greater part of the Belgian army on the order of King Leopold and the later Battle of Flanders in which the British and French fought their way out to the coast to be transported to England, Britain has been compelled to bear the tremendous weight of the German army, hurled with a recklessness to force an immediate decision. Paris was left to the enemy and at the weekend the first action became worse. The result is the reported request for a means to end the fighting. Britain had poured in an expeditionary force in the past few weeks to support the French.

COL. RALSTON'S APPOINTMENT

Col. J. L. Ralston has succeeded the late Hon. Norman Rogers as Minister of National Defence. The appointment to this strategic office in the war effort of Canada meets with general approval and brings the realization that Col. Ralston will fill the office with great ability. The duty devolving upon the Minister of National Defence in these days is great and Col Ralston's natural gifts, his knowledge, his ability for hard work and his realization of the importance of the demand, give the assurance of an able administrator in this particular branch of the public service at this time.

Col. Ralston has had a long and able career before the public.

VERSE AND PROSE AS INSPIRATION TO WAR EFFORT

Mr. Wallace Havelock Robb of Abbey Dawn has written some verses to inspire the people to the greatest effort on behalf of the prosecution of the war. His poem is as follows:

MARCH! PEOPLE! MARCH!

March, march, march, People, march!
Hell strikes, and 'tis your hour.
March, march, march, Fury march!
Calm rage—defiant power.

Stand! solid stand, People stand!
So be our clarion ring!
Retreat from Flanders answer now—
With bayonet, bomb and wing!

March, march, march, People, march!
Cold point both quill and plow;
March, march, march, People march!
For freedom—Forward now!

Among the most powerful words written in this connection is that of Miss Vincent Millay, American poet, who has made a powerful appeal to help the Allies and against isolationism. Some of her lines as published read:

"Oh, God! Let not the lovely brow
Of England be trampled mud Grow cold."

Again she says:

"Oh bold, assemble, transport
give,
That England, France and we may live
Before tonight, before too late."

Shelley once said that poets are the trumpet notes that call to battle. The poet's voice is potent, for poetry says in few words and easy music what others say in prose. Lines of verse can be remembered more easily than prose because of the rhythm and rhythmic expression.

Yet there is some prose which shines with gems of thought and expression, modulated phrases which are as great as verse. That prose is found in some of the great expressions of the great leaders these days, which are truly inspiring which inspire Britain to the greatest task of her history in prosecuting the struggle for liberty and the progress of centuries against the Nazis and Fascists.

BRITAIN AT WAR WITH ALL HER MIGHT

Britain will strike with all her might to down the enemy. She has given the "blank cheque" to the United States for the purchase of all kinds of military equipment which will be of use in the struggle. Present effort is to be such that future production while in progress for and carried on will not interfere with the potent immediate program.

Britain is raising her armies with all the rapidity of which she is capable. These will soon be of considerable modern equipment and much of this will come from the United States and the Dominions.

The Allied plan is deadly blows at the power of the Nazis, deadly blows continued until Nazism and Fascism are prostrate in the dust, crushed so that they can never more shall disturb the fair face of the earth.

Thoughts After the Fall of Paris

New York, June 17—For many generations the Governments of free peoples, the democracies, have been the protectors of Western civilization and have had the power to determine the policy of the world. Now they have suffered the worst disaster in their history. Their very survival is threatened.

This disaster involves us. It involves us in the sense which Mr. Lippman set forth with admirable lucidity at Atlantic City. We should face that fact with complete clarity in order that out of it we may draw tomorrow's strength and wisdom.

There are simple, realistic reasons why Hitler has so far won this war. We must understand those reasons and look at ourselves in the light of those reasons.

First: His observations regarding the internal weakness of democracies — observations which formed the basis for his conquest of Germany itself, by the Nazi revolution.

The democratic ideal, which began as a noble and heroic conception, as an attempt to liberate mankind, could offer them the opportunity to develop and grow fact fashion, and to grow from individuals into persons, has degenerated even further into a self-protection through effort, away from the task of and responsibility for initiative, into the idea of self-interest. The pursuit of happiness which is the concept as it represents an accrual of joy through possessions, has become the pursuit of pleasure.

The concept of the laborer is that of his hire has been supplanted by the idea that work is a commodity, to be bargained for and sold at the highest price that can be obtained, irrespective of product. And the same is true of capital. Both have become secondary to its safety. Capital—the creative activity upon which new creative activity can be based—has also come to be thought of as something whose worth and use depends upon the market.

x x x

Higher education has been diverted from the idea of training the whole man, into the training of specialists, possessed of immense amounts of specialized knowledge, but without the ideas with which they were born. Secondary education has become a kind of training youth by words rather than by relating it to life, which is reality. Every June our high schools and colleges cast out youngsters who are completely unfitted for the reality of the world into which they emerge. An age that needs creative workers, inventive workers, men whose hands and brains have been co-ordinated by life, has produced clerks. Flooded with young people who cannot read a simple contract, or write a decent letter, let alone an exquisite machine.

x x x

A social security which belies every democratic principle perpetuates the idea that a man's security is in a pension, adds up columns in a book, or a girl who "gets" a husband. To "get" is somehow of superior status to the driver of a car, who has to "get" a first-rate cook.

We educate our children to come to us for help instead of to live in it.

We belie our own democracy at every step. We classify people according to their economic status, become—rather than achievement; according to race, instead of according to quality.

Nothing is dearer than to ourselves than the ideal of ourselves in comfort.

We are destroying democracy by the sword, and by revolution, because democracy itself has been far on the road to self-destruction.

x x x

Second: Hitler is winning the war because he is fighting it with an industrial and engineering technique. The democracies have been fighting it with a money, or financial technique. It is fighting it stingily. We are now following Britain and France in their footsteps.

The Germans did not vote themselves four billions dollars for defense. They voted—had voted for them—thirty billions and more, so and so many thousand tons of tanks, so and so many thousand planes, so and so many guns, and so many thousand tons of steel, and so many of other materials. The German economy is an economy of the future. The German economy is an economy of symbols: money. The German economy recognizes that all wealth is in goods, and that money is created by money, which is only a medium of exchange, but by the organization of goods and men.

The Allies had money, but failed to produce goods. The Germans had no money, but did produce them.

To recognize this is not to accept the mystic, semi-religious, semi-idolatrous worshipping security, religion of nazism. This economy was not designed by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, an American, knew all about it. So far as Germany is concerned, the man who first saw and practiced the idea of a vast industrial and engineering economy was Walter Rathenau, who created the German war economy during the last war, and who was shortly after that murdered. The Germans were forced into it, because they had a will to conquest and no money. But the lack of money proved to be a godsend to them.

x x x

Third: The Germans are winning the war because, in spite of the cynicism of their dictatorship, they have devoluted power to the places where power exists. Power is knowledge.

To take an illustration: Hitler knows that the place to put planes is in the highly organized industries. In those industries were the scientific, technical and engineering brains, and the skilled labor. Germany's Air Ministry and Government demanded the planes and demanded of the industries that they produce them—produce the blueprints, the models and the planes. The designs were not made by bureaucrats, or tin hats, but by the industrialists. Hitler knew that had Mr. Ford, he would have told Mr. Ford to turn out the model he claims he can produce in a short time, because he would produce to the fullest the energies in Mr. Ford's remarkable organization, and he would give Mr. Ford full freedom to see whether he could deliver the goods without interference from bureaucrats or politicians.

The speed with which Germany rearmed lay in the use, co-ordination and organization of the existing plant, and the placing of responsibility for the initiative where the power is. It does not reside in dictatorship and a Gestapo to do this.

x x x

Fourth: The Germans are winning the war because they have a vision. That vision is organized in us. They envisage Germans as the master race, with space in which to living for all the peoples of the earth. They envisage the permanent the seals of their communal morale, but before this world revolution, they envisage the Nazi party as the Nazi defeat. For it is not to be conquered. It is the spirit. They are not "the" superior people, as the Germans are to the French, or the British. They are merely in America, organized in the nationalist and those things that are the special cultural values of the democracies, and which the freest expression, was a condition of the democracies, and which it has failed only because of the failure of our political system to create a complacent, provincial and comfort-loving.

The news is heartbreaking. But let us not think of today. Let us think of the day after tomorrow. Let us find each other — all of those who are not discouraged, and do not intend to be discouraged, either for this country or for the world.

The Chinese write with symbols with what they call "connotations." And the Chinese word for "crisis" is one that is composite.

We live in the greatest epoch of human history. We have the greatest possibilities for evil and the greatest possibilities for good, if we can be mankind into chaos or liberate him into light. And everything is in the balance. The choice is either given to us in and by nature, by the mankind into chaos or mind, and imagination, intellect and soul of human beings.

What is sown in tears can yet be reaped in joy.

The Blow is Struck

The fourth horseman has entered the ranks, and death and destruction will now be spread in the world by the fourth evil, strangle of the evil forces of the world to conquer the free forces of democracy.

Mussolini has cast the die. The traitor of his people, and of civilization has decided that now. France is fighting desperately for her very existence, and Italy, Hyena, the time is opportune for the latter days of the days of a quarter spent at sea with a powerful fleet, Italia to Europe. And when in harbour always on the alert ready to be called at short notice.

When Commodore Jones (who has been promoted to that rank from Captain) and a flotilla were in Ragusa harbour on Yugoslavian Island at the commencement of war they received word of the entry of the East coast immediately. In two hours they were on their way, and Italian ships were sunk and burned on the shores, getting a brief glimpse of them as they pushed out of harbor. From that day to this Italian ships have not even their families. Commodore Jones among them. They spent their Christmas and a waste of waves, on convoy duty to some vessels carrying Canadian troops to England. Commodore Jones remembers that Christmas Day when he had his usual breakfast, supper and dinner in forty-eight hours. And he doubts if the troops in the comparatively

DETAINED

James Francoschini, president of the Dufferin Republican Company in Toronto has been taken into custody in the roundup of Toronto Italians following Italy's entry into the war, it was revealed in the House of Commons by Hon. C. D. Howe. Munitions Minister Howe informed the House that Francoschini's detention would not delay the construction of four mine-sweeping ships built by the Dufferin Shipbuilding Co.

with Hitler and his Huns.

The hour comes at an inopportune time for the Allies, but they have been geared to treachery and are facing the new situation with only added determination to win or die attempt.

The stab-in-the-back by Italy emphasizes the whole French problem of defence. The gravity of the situation on the west front is increased by the possibility of having to face a fresh Italian army.

However, will suffer for Mussolini's dastardly action. There are going to be cooked alive from the Allied navies, air raids on ports and industrial cities and, doubtless a drive by the French army towards the Valley of the Po.

The best defence of the Italians is their navy, which has long since been disposed for an Allied counter-attack. It is hoped to close the Adriatic entirely to enemy vessels and in that way protect the whole eastern coast. Italian naval strategists like-wise talk of sending Malta sailing and ting the Mediterranean in two.

If the west Italy has her Alpine Line defence. In the old days of strict non-belligerency this was extended and strengthened all around to include the Brenner Pass but now other fortifications are going to be opened wide to the German Army.

The concentration is on the north Italian plain and there the Italians claim to be as impregnable as possible.

The Alps themselves offer a formidable barrier, although geographically speaking it is safer to get to Italy from France than to do the reverse.

Italy is gambling on the result, but if her armies are no better than they were in the Abyssinian and Spanish campaigns she has already lost. The people of Italy must suffer the Mussolini's fateful action.—St. Catharines Standard.

Italy and the Suez

One of Mussolini's complaints in his declaration of war against Italy's insignificant measure of control in respect to the Suez Canal. He has contended that the profits are too great, dues excessive and that Italy is entitled to a larger representation on the board of directors. Status of the Canada waterway sometimes called Britain's "life-line" to the East, is therefore an important factor in the conflict.

Ships of all nations have the right to pass the Suez in wartime as in peace, but Italy is now a belligerent, with her representation on the board of directors by Allied warships—and numerous vessels lost in that way on the first day after declaration of war. Her normal route to the East, it is therefore barred right now by Allied naval forces which have been in the eastern Mediterranean for years.

Events of this war leave no doubt that it is controlled by sea power. Such an objective as the Suez Canal, a hundred miles long, would be of defence, but it would certainly lose heavily in doing so and it would be a long time before it was any good to damage the canal. British merchant shipping in the waters of the Orient was directed some time ago, when Italy got nasty, to take the round-about route. Besides, the Allies are reported to be strong in the Red Sea area. Yesterday, R. A. F. spared a squadron yesterday, right after the war declaration, to bombard airdromes in Libya). And the reputation of Italian flyers, according to an American observer who fought in Spain is that they do all their fighting at extraordinary high altitudes, out of the range of guns of the enemy, but are "like homing pigeons when the odds are anywhere even."—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

"No Cinch, This Job"

There are things about the Navy too, Commodore George C. Dyer, Senior Naval Officer afloat of the Royal Canadian Navy, will tell you that are not so desirable. For instance on the high seas (the sea cent being definitely not in perspective) in a destroyer treated so terribly that no meals could be cooked. So there was more than a touch of irony in the Premier's Rideau Hall when Commodore Dyer was presented with a flock of merchantmen. Another thing is the monotony of days on end, days of a quarter spent at sea with a powerful fleet, Italia to Europe. And when in harbour always on the alert ready to be called at short notice.

When Commodore Jones (who has been promoted to that rank from Captain) and a flotilla were in Ragusa harbour on Yugoslavian Island at the commencement of war they received word of the entry of the East coast immediately. In two hours they were on their way, and Italian ships were sunk and burned on the shores, getting a brief glimpse of them as they pushed out of harbor. From that day to this Italian ships have not even their families. Commodore Jones among them. They spent their Christmas and a waste of waves, on convoy duty to some vessels carrying Canadian troops to England. Commodore Jones remembers that Christmas Day when he had his usual breakfast, supper and dinner in forty-eight hours. And he doubts if the troops in the comparatively

The Canadian fleet has been increased greatly however, and mine or two prowling off Halifax or starting up the St. Lawrence to attack the troop ships and carriers. BOUND FOR ALLIES, U.S. PLANE WRECKED

This shattered wreckage is all that remains of a former U.S. navy dive bomber, turned over to the Allies, which crashed near Marieville, N.Y., while flying to a border base to be transported into the Canada.

PLANE ENGINES CREATE PROBLEM

Canadian Plane Makers Entirely Dependent on Outside Sources for Engines

Ottawa, June 17—In a war fought to a great degree in machine shops far from the firing line, Canada has had a hard battle these days to provide aircraft for the war against the enemy.

While the Canadian aircraft industry has been greatly expanded and bounds to provide planes to meet enemy numerical superiority, production of the complex but necessary aircraft engines to power Canadian-built aircraft presents a great problem.

Canadian plane makers are entirely dependent upon outside sources for engines. In years of peace, the majority of engines for larger types of aircraft came from the United States and the small engines for light sports planes from factories in Britain.

But even before the war now raging in Europe, Canada's aircraft factories began construction of heavy bombers and fighting planes of British design for the Royal Air Force and the Royal Canadian Air Force. Specifications called for British engines of various types.

While no aero engines are manufactured in Canada, subsidiaries of United States and British manufacturers export parts and assemble engines in the Dominion. Canadian branches of two of the largest British aero engine manufacturers have recently enlarged their plants and turned out, all within a few weeks be able to double their capacity.

One type of elementary training plane, the Fleet Model, under construction in quantity by the De Havilland Company near Toronto for the British Commonwealth Air Training plan, is customarily powered with a British-built engine. The two other types of trainers to be built in Canada, the Fleet elementary trainer and the Harvard advanced or intermediate trainer, use United States engines.

British-designed aircraft under construction in Canada or shortly to be built in Canadian plants are the Bristol Bolingbroke bomber, the Stirling four-engined bomber, the Vickers-Supermarine Stranraer twin-engined flying boat, the Blackburn Shark torpedo plane, the Westland Lysander army co-operation plane, and the Bristol Bolingbroke twin-engined medium bomber and reconnaissance plane.

All are designed for air-cooled engines. It is believed that it is considered possible that United States radial engines could be used in an emergency.

Single-seat fighters in construction in Fort William, Ont., are numerous two-seat fighter-reconnaissance aircraft twin-engined in some numbers, are both powered by Rolls Royce liquid-cooled inline engines of 1,000 horsepower each available in Canada at present. United States engines, however, produce engines of somewhat similar design.

Growing tendency towards United States production methods. United States tools and United States manufacturing standards as announced in Parliament by Supply Minister Howe, will bring Canadian aero engines into the orbit of United States military aircraft design, it is generally believed.

JUDGING BY the lunar transits, this may prove to be a day on which things move at high tempo and with considerable nervousness, if not wholly drastic force. And this with reference to world affairs, business and progressive channels of thought, as well as social affairs, with groups, for social or welfare ends, is particularly active and emphatic.

Those whose birthday it is may have a tendency to fear of swift action, with matters of fresh inception, but should not be misled into prosperous and progressive fields, especially when in progression with groups for welfare or social advancement.

A child born on this day may have a high order of intelligence and creative ability. Not overly impulsive, tempestuous and critical, yet will have active interest in promoting the advancement and well-being of its Fellows.

Full-Cheeked Charm

By HELEN FOLLETT

Jeanette MacDonald—"the deft with rouge, placing it high on cheek-bones."

One girl who could increase her face value is the one with hollow cheeks. Just because the ladies seen by fashion artists look as if they are on a hunger strike is no reason why you should try to copy them. For a time the stars of the silver screen tried to make themselves appear as gaunt and, of course, some of the pretty misses that go to the movies fancied the type. They should know that health is fashionable, too.

To fill out hollow cheeks, apply a heavy massage cream every night and put it on a clean surface. Spread fingers and thumbs over the cheeks, do a clawing movement, pulling out the trumpeter's cheek muscles with a brisk slapping. Pinch the flesh lightly to stimulate circulation. Finish the day with a serving of hot cereal, well garnished with sugar and cream: have a bowl of crackers and milk at bedtime.

Go Path with Rouge

When applying rouge, put it on the cheek bones and temples, blending it well into the hairline. Placed in the center of the cheeks it will form a shadow, make the face look thinner.

Ironing with an ice cube twice a day stimulates facial muscles and develops adipose padding. Yes, my maudlin, you should get up early. The average skinny is too active, doesn't get enough sleep.

Designers of foundation garments declare the new flapper trend is toward neat, small hips, rounded thighs and a modest incurve at the waist. Nothing waspish, as reported in the past.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Engagement Party

Dear Miss Beckman:

I am going to announce my engagement next month, and am also having a shower party. I am anxious that the guests will not feel that they are supposed to bring gifts, and so I have tried to emphasize the fact that this is a very informal and casual gathering of friends. However, I have been told that many of the guests insist on bringing gifts.

1. In this event, shall I open the gifts in the presence of my guests and thank them at that time, or shall I only thank them and leave the gifts unopened?

2. Would it also be kind enough to tell me whether the engagement ring should be presented in the presence of the guests or at some time previous to the party?

Gloria

1. Although you have done your best not to have the guests feel that they should bring gifts to your party, they obviously are so devoted to you that they want to express their devotion in this gracious way. So, to show your gracious appreciation, do open the gifts as they are given to you, and say your sincere thanks and thanks for the thoughtfulness and for the gift itself.

Dear girl, if you don't open the gifts while your guests are there, they will be sure to feel that you are pretty casual about their gifts and their thoughtfulness. Don't dim any of their joy in giving. I am sure that the friends who don't bring gifts will understand and must show your enthusiastic appreciation to the friend who does.

2. There isn't any rule about when the engagement ring should be given, and so all one can do is to give one's personal reaction about this. In my judgment, the giving of the engagement ring is such an intimate moment between the fiancee and the fiance that the ring should be given when only they are together.

Graduation Exercises

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son is being graduated from a university, the exercises taking place in the afternoon.

1. Is a black sheer dress, street-length, or a dressy print dress appropriate for the mother of the graduate?

2. Is it customary in this country, as it is abroad, to send engraved announcements to friends that the graduate has received his degree?

Mother

1. Either costume is correct for the graduate's mother, to wear to the graduation exercises—either the black sheer dress, street-length, or a dressy print dress. Personally I prefer the latter —very sun this splendid "many years" to the afternoon.

2. While it is not customary to send announcements that the graduate has received his or her degree, it is entirely proper to do this, if you wish.

Ambition "Credits"

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.
Brains, health and willingness to study hard should be the only prerequisites necessary for the privilege of a college education. Unfortunately, many a deserving youth is denied college because his parents haven't the necessary cash. There is a real fear of these if all would be for fear of these if all the money wasted on both children and those who are sent to college without having acquired the will to work hard could be turned to helping more deserving students. The poor, but by no means dull, and boys get the chance to go to college.

Fortunately the right school is available to many working youths who care to take advantage of it, though many fail to take this opportunity to learn while they earn.

Parents whose sons and daughters are sent to college with money for luxuries and items the amount needed for essentials might, if they cared, render a valuable service if they put their child on a reasonable basis of allowance and were to divert some of the money to scholarships for ambitious boys and girls. I believe that some of these well-to-do parents of son or daughter about to enter college, who would think this matter through, might arrive at the conclusion that such procedure would bring them a sane and profound satisfaction. What is more, they might consider it favorable to the best moral effect on their own child, enabling him to grow less selfish.

Let me add that I believe many parents are making unwise sacrifices in order to send a son or daughter to college. Too often their reward is only an unappreciated selfish child. Often the most selfish and ungrateful children are those whose parents have made the greatest self-denials for them. What do you think about it?

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My baby, 13 months of age, refuses to take milk from a glass but will drink orange juice or plain water from it.

A. Keep on trying, patiently, encouraging him to help hold the cup or glass. Try him with very little in the cup, again with a little full. Also try to get him to drink from a full nursing bottle of milk, before putting the nipple on it. Show no emotion whatsoever. It will be a success after six months of patience, have the bottle disappear, then a secondary one of its disappearance. Throw it out of sight or destroy it. It looks on—never bringing it back.

Goes to Dances With Her Mother

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married for three years to a lovely girl, she's 22 and I am 24. But all she cares about is dancing. I don't dance very well, and I'm a splendid dancer. I go with her occasionally, but though I've asked her a few times she leaves me flat and dances with some one else.

We've been invited to a dance at a club, but I don't want to go if she's going to take her mother. Do you think that's fair to me?

Disgusted

I'd advise you, my dear, to learn to dance well and then you'd enjoy it more. You may not care about it, but it's a pretty mean (or woman) who cultivates the facts and fancies of her husband to which, of course, a wife can't be more than wrong, for your wife is not a dancer without you, but as long as she is so well chaperoned, I wouldn't worry. Undoubtedly she will introduce your friends to her mother, and they will understand.

Gossip Says He's Engaged to Another Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've met a young man recently who has been very good to me, and who always acts like a gentleman. I've gone out with him a few times and have been interested in no places. I like him very much but my friends tell me he is engaged.

He and my family like each other a great deal and from what he's told me about his folks, they seem to be very nice people. When I told him what my friends have said about his being engaged, he denied it. Who am I to believe?

It

Inasmuch as the man has denied the engagement, you might give him the benefit of the doubt. You like him, and your word is as good as the gossip you have heard that he is engaged. The best suggestion I can give you is not to lose your heart until you find out whether he is engaged or not.

Mother's Problem

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Before my daughter was married she had been a constant visitor at our home. But shortly after their marriage, he stopped coming altogether, for no apparent reason. He always treated him well, and made his visits as pleasant as possible. My husband and I have invited them to come home frequently and easy to get along with; that's why I can't understand him.

Now, whenever my daughter comes over to visit us for a few hours, he starts a row and says the meanest things about me which, of course, are not true. It makes life so miserable for my daughter, and I'm at my wit's end to know what to do. Undoubtedly he will introduce your friends to her mother, and they will understand.

Lebrun's Statement

Bordeaux, June 17—(CP)—(Havas)—The office of President Albert Lebrun today issued the following communique:—

"In the present grave circumstances the cabinet, on the motion of Premier Reynaud, deeming that the government of France had to be entrusted to a high personlity enjoying the unanimous respect of the nation, Paul Reynaud submitted the collective resignation of the cabinet. «President» Lebrun accepted his resignation, without however the patriotism which dictated this feature, and called at once upon Marshal Petain who agreed to form a new ministry.

"The president of the Republic thanked Petain who, in assuming the heaviest responsibility ever undertaken by a French statesman, demonstrated once again his total devotion to the country."

Edward Taylor, CBS correspondent with the French government, said in a broadcast from Bordeaux over the facilities of Paris Mondial the official French radio:—

"Just 35 minutes ago Marshal Petain broadcast in a blinding thunderstorm from this very same studio an announcement to the French people that last night he had asked for an armistice."

Translation of Address

Then Taylor gave a translation of the address and continued:

"As soon as he finished this speech Marshal Petain left the studio and entered a waiting limousine which waited at the door. He had a French admiral and a general at hat. His face showed no emotion whatsoever."

Taylor's report concluded at this point and Eric Sevareid, another member of the CBS staff in Bordeaux, came on the air to say:—

"You have heard the unofficial translation of the Marshal's speech who told the people of the nation that the war is ceasing; and, as we told you last night, the honorable thing to expected to be the Ambassador of Spain. What the German terms will be, if they will be terms nong of us knows as yet.

German Troops Near Paris

"We understand that German troops are not very far away from the place from which the French radio is now operating.

"The control in the French radio is to stand by until the last possible moment in that the world may go to America and the rest of the world."

"The American consulate is swamped with calls from Americans, French, British and others who are attempting to get accommodations on the last boat. Many Americans here — correspondents and others — hope to get on the last boat provided by the United States government. If available, and whether passage has been made is not known as yet; for they will try to get into Portugal through Spain, which is technically neutral, as is Mr. Sevareid.

"When, and if the Germans will arrive in Bordeaux, the present capital of France, none of us knows at the present moment."

Britain Determined to Fight Until Victory Has Been Won States the British Press

London, June 17 (CP)—The stunning news of France's decision to give up the fight brought demands from the British press today that everything be done without delay to buttress United Kingdom defences to carry on the struggle to a victorious end.

"The full brunt of the war must now fall on this island," Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard said in urging that the British Isles be converted into a floating fortress.

The news that there is no need to be dismayed "if the nation rises as one man to the towering height of the struggle."

Both papers repeated the authoritative statement issued in London last night that authoritative statement issued in London last night that "Britain is firmly and resolutely determined to continue until victory has been won."

The News expressed confidence that Germany can be brought down if the Empire's every effort and resource is put behind the war effort. As a starter it suggested the slashing of all imports except food and raw materials, and the re-imposition of fuel rationing.

The Standard presented the same idea in these words: "No strong nation must be left ungoverned. No resource must be left unused. No man must be without duty. No man is still our strength. This island which floats upon it must become a fleet of smaller craft.

Factories in this country are turning out the "oranges" of the barrels for anti-aircraft guns. Extension and expansion in the order of the day for industry all along the line.

United States production methods, design and tools are being used as far as possible, Mr. Howe recently told Parliament, in order to hurry production without making demands on British war industry.

Purchases of aircraft, guns and munitions in the United States swell the flow of Canadian supplies overseas to a hard-hitting fighting line. An unending procession of heavy laden merchantmen daily ploughs the Atlantic under convoy of naval forces.

Canadian Wartime Industry Steps up Production One-Third

Three Anti-Tank and Anti-Aircraft Shell Plants Working at Peak

SEVEN-DAY BASIS

Ottawa, June 17—(CP)—Impetus lent by the dire need of a British Empire compelled by capitulation of its allies to face its foes alone has sent Canadian wartime industry into a crescendo of production. Munitions Minister Howe announced today in the House of Commons.

Munitions Minister Howe also made known that three factories for the manufacture of anti-tank and anti-aircraft shells had just been completed and that the output of arms and munitions for the British Commonwealth.

Just before the Munitions and Supply Minister joined Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his colleagues in a cabinet conference on the progress of France's decision to cease hostilities, his department announced production of anti-tank and anti-aircraft shells had just been increased by one-third and that even that rate would be stepped up as soon as possible.

While the three anti-tank and anti-aircraft shell plants "somewhere in Canada" turn out large supplies of shells, the announcement said, Bren guns are in capacity production on a seven-day week basis and the contract is six months ahead of schedule.

Rapid Progress Made

Rapid progress has been made recently in every sphere of the munitions program, the department said. The government by order-in-council has already given Mr. Howe wide powers to mobilize industry so as to speed production of the shells, guns, aircraft and other war materials Great Britain needs so urgently to halt the Nazi mechanized war machine.

Parliament has given first reading to a bill sanctioning such powers for the Munitions and Supply Minister, "all the powers I could think of" Mr. Howe told the House.

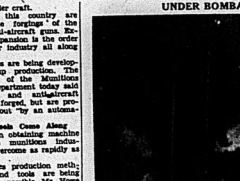
The measure will give authority to the government to finance and control war industries operated by private interests, and work is already under way under such an arrangement, it was announced.

The Munitions and Supply Department has complete details of all Canadian industrial plants and their potentialities for war production, and Mr. Howe last year announced that two large explosive manufacturing plants and a shell-filling plant are being completed.

Forgings for Guns

Shells and smaller ammunition of various types are already in production in various Canadian plants Canadian factories are working on orders for a variety of military aircraft and also constructing "several hundred" Bren gun carriers, small and fast caterpillar tread vehicles carrying machine guns.

Military trucks daily roll from the production line of Canadian automobile factories and Canadian shipyards across the country are busy building anti-submarine patrol vessels and



The French ministry of marine released this photo which carries the meagre information that it shows French sailors of an anti-aircraft gun post under bombing at some where on the northwest coast of France. Accuse Seamen's Club Of Delaying Sailings

London, June 17 — (CP) — A shipping ministry spokesman disclosed today the Norwegian Seamen's Union here had complained that the Scandinavian Seamen's Club in the United States was delaying sailing of Scandinavian ships from American ports by creating disaffection among the crews.

The spokesman said the British embassy in Washington would decide whether to ask the United States Government to take action against the club, "originally a Communistic body now financed by Nazis."

Efforts of the club to delay and prevent sailings have been aided, he asserted, by the fact Norwegian seamen, now working under the British Government, are paid the same rates as other Allied seamen. Before the invasion of Norway they received "fifty high rates."

British Tommies Escape Capture Wearing Belgian Refugee Disguise

(By Harold Ross for Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 17 (CP Cable) — Pour bedraggled young Tommies who wandered without food for days, disguised as Belgian refugees after escaping from German guards in France, arrived home today with a story which makes any adventure thriller as dull as yesterday's newspaper.

With two French soldiers picked up as they launched their boat they landed after being at sea two days without food or water. Their uniforms were in rags. A coaster spotted them several miles from land and brought them ashore.

Their spokesman, Corporal Patrick Hanley of Deal, said they were kept eight days and in a church, after capture by a German mechanized column. A sentry came around hourly, but on the eighth day Hanley took his pals that if the sentry came that night he was going to clout him. "Well," said Hanley, "no sense in suicide if we can escape."

For four days the men hid in the woods without food or water. They obtained a little milk from cows.

They stumbled on a barn where they met a farmer who provided them with food. Then they met the Belgian refugees who gave them civilian clothes. They inquired the international line was. The British, the French armies and walked miles as they made back another one place to another.

Blisters on Feet

"One of our little party got blisters on his feet," Hanley said, "so we hired a hiccup and sent him ahead as a sort of observation" post. We thought our last chance to get away was to get to one of the channel ports and obtain a boat. Eventually we reached the coast after nine days and after stealing another bicycle."

In one village they were challenged by German sentries who were looking for spies, and when they were unable to produce refugee papers they were taken to the commandant. Hanley said he did not speak German. Neither did the commandment who gave them the benefit of the doubt.

We got to the coast in time to see three British bombers destroy the German headquarters," Hanley continued. "Our problem was to find a boat. We recommended beach disguised as beachcombers with our trousers rolled up and pieces of seaweed across our shoulders."

Two French girls showed them where to find a boat. As they were about to launch the boat they heard a shout. They thought they were spotted but it was a French soldier whom they took aboard with a lieutenant.

The man sat in the stern with a compass as we rowed," Hanley continued. "The French girls had given us food but we did not need it—we were all sick except one. They even gave us a Union Jack to wave in case we were seen by British planes and a bag full of corks to plug the boat in case it was machine gunned.

Rowing fiercely and accumulating a fair amount of blisters, they managed to get clear of the coast before daylight."

Suggests a Mortgage on Material Resources of the Colonial Empire as Means of Meeting the Nazi Threat

London, June 17 (C.P. Cable)— The Financial News in a front page article analyzing the ways and means of meeting the Nazi threat urged today the placing of the greatest possible amount of orders in Canada and the United States and paying for them in sterling, with a mortgage on the material resources of the colonial empire."

The paper said that Britain's chief strength lies in her sea power, which is unimpaired, and in her economic resources, and she can replenish her supplies through sea routes open to her alone.

Citing these as "solid grounds for hope" the newspaper said: "If we can hold on until Autumn, however much European territory is lost in the process, our prospects will be bright. Germany's strength, tho' great, will be waning whereas the Allies will be growing."

In a similar statement by Henry Ford that his plant can produce 5,000 planes daily after 1941 the paper commented: "an order must be placed whatever the cost."

Letter Urges Shifting Of Empire's Centre Of Gravity to Canada

London, June 17—(CP Cable)— The News Chronicle published a letter today signed Edward Poor, urging shifting the Empire's centre of gravity to Canada and calling for political changes under military governorship which "must be held as an advance base for civilization at all costs."

Poor wrote the collapse of French resistance would leave the Isles the last outpost of western civilization. Britain and the United States will in self-defence have to declare war on Germany and Italy. He argued that United States military help plus the Empire's production of aircraft and munitions cannot be sufficiently strong to undertake freeing Europe until spring.

Therefore, he maintained the island fortress for the moment

"We must at once cease to think of these islands as the centre of the British Empire," he wrote. "We must think of them as the last stronghold of the Empire in Europe."

Yankees, Dodgers and Giants Take Double Shellacking in Twin Bills Staged on Sunday

Lowly Browns Turned on Yankees and Beat Them 12-6 and 6-5

REDS WIN TWO

Wyatt Beat a Tough One When One of Two Hits Allowed is Home Run

(By Bill White, Associated Press Sports Writer)

There certainly was no joy in Mudville when mighty Casey struck out, but Mudville was a gay carnival town in comparison with the gloom that belonged New York after the double shellacking the Yankees, Giants and Dodgers took in Sunday's tussles.

Historians could recall no time when all the three, either favored or even-money chocks, went into a set of double bills and came out empty-handed.

Most amazing of the day's doings was the way the lowly Browns turned on the world champion Yankees and beat them 12-6 and 6-5.

Yet, paced by pitcher Vernon Kennedy's home run, they outslugged the champs in the first game and then punched their way south agreeably at a clip to win the second game in the late innings.

Saddest case of the day was the fate of Brooklyn's Whitlow Wyatt. He twirled his best game of the season—a two-hitter—but had to accept a 1-0 defeat when one of the two hits turned out to be a home run from the bat of Cincinnati's Lloyd Lery. In the second game the Reds hopped on Curt Davis, making his debut as a "reliever," in the early innings, and the befuddled Brooks never caught up, going down 5-2.

The Giants, as cheaply as a pigeon over their eight-game winning streak were talking about charging the Pirates admission to get into the Polo Grounds. However, Max Butcher gave a two-hitter at them and Truett Sewall followed with a creditable performance and the Giants down 5-3 and 4-2.

Otherwise in the National League St. Louis Cardinals made it four in a row over the Phillies, winning by 2-1 at Philadelphia as Gee and Jack Russell combined on an eight hitter in the opener and Lon Warneke did some fine pitching and Johnny Mize clouted his 18th homer to win the afterpiece.

The Cubs and the Bees split their twin bill, the Cubs getting enough inspiration from Claude Passeau's five-hitter to win 3-1 after losing the first in 11 innings by dint of some sloppy fielding, 5-4.

Boston Red Sox kept atop the American League, via the home run route. Ted Williams' 12th-inning homer gave them a 4-3 victory over Chicago White Sox and clusters of homers by pitcher Jack Wilson and Manager Joe Cronin were potent factors in taking the second game, 14-5.

Cleveland Indians paved the way for a reconciliation with Manager Oscar Vitt, by socking the Athletics 4-2 on Bob Feller's three-hit 13-strikeout hurling and 4-3 on Al Milnar's eight-hit performance.

Detroit Tigers made a mockery of their series with Washington Nats claiming 2-1 victory on Tommy McCosky's pay-off single in the eighth inning and then two runs in Saturday's American League games, the Yankees eked out a 3-2 victory over Jim Browns, coming from behind in the eighth innings with a four-run attack. Detroit took two games from the Senators, 11-1 and 6-0, Boston trimmed Chicago 5-2 and Philadelphia overcame the Indians 7-4. In the International, St. Louis hammered out 19 hits for a 14-1 victory over the Phillies, Chicago took Boston 11-4, the Reds succumbed to Brooklyn 11-4 and the Giants hit freely to beat Pittsburgh 13-1.

Training Grind Ends Today For Louis and Godoy

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 15.—(AP)— Joe Louis, the heavyweight champ, and Arturo Godoy, his Latin-American challenger, will complete preparations today and tomorrow for their return 15-round bout in Yankee stadium on Thursday night.

In recent weeks, while the world was shaken, the pair have been off in the woods training hard. Despite the comparative secrecy of their operations, Promoter Mike Jacobs still believes the fight will draw $200,000. Ringside seats cost $27.50 a copy.

Godoy, a rugged number from Chile, lasted the full 15 rounds with Louis in their first meeting four months ago, but it was pretty fast entertainment.

The burning question seems to be whether Godoy has straightened up from the super-crouch that caused the champion so much mental anguish in their first tangle. The fans have been led, subtly, to believe that Arturo will draw himself erect this time and punch it out with the bomber.

Godoy has impressed visitors to his camp with his rugged vitality. He has both that and a lack of fear of Louis, so he must have some sort of chance of winning the title. After all, Louis is bound to lose his championship one of these days.

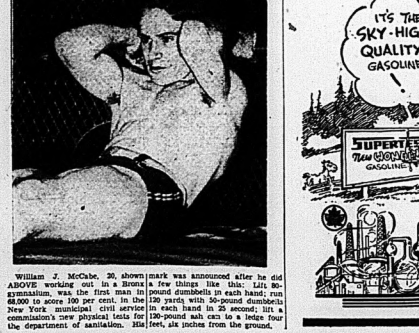
JOE MEDWICK

In the biggest deal in baseball history, Brooklyn Dodgers obtained Outfielder Joe Medwick and Pitcher Curt Davis from the St. Louis Cardinals for $250,000.



William J. McCabe, 20, shown ABOVE working out in a Bronx gymnasium, was the first man in 68,000 to score 100 per cent. in the New York municipal civil service commission's annual physical tests for the department of sanitation. His mark was announced after he did a few things like this: lift 80-pound dumbbells 10 each hand; run 120 yards with 50-pound dumbbells in each hand in 25 second; lift a 120-pound sak can to a ledge four feet, six inches from the ground.

Jersey City Held to Even Split in Double Bill Sunday

(By the Associated Press)

The "pressure" in any sort of a race is always on the guy who has to make up a few yards—or games —to catch the leader. And in the international league's pennant race it begins to look as if that pressure might keep Jersey City Giants in second place.

The Jerseys couldn't make any appreciable gains on Rochester Red Wings in a five-game series with the league leaders, find the indications are that pressure, more than anything else, was the cause.

The Giants got only an even break Sunday in a double header after belting the Birds all over the lot in the first game. They won that one 8-6 with an 11-hit attack, concentrated largely in a six-run second inning.

The they were shut-out 1-0 on three hits.

Charlie Brumbelow applied the whitewash in a fine duel with Bill Harris and Lou Fette, each scoring the winning run himself with two out in the seventh.

Dropped Both Ends

The Orioles dropped both ends of a doubleheader to the last-place Toronto Maple Leafs, 6-5 and 8-6, for their sixth loss in nine games. That left them only a game ahead of Newark, which divided a pair with Buffalo and put the Leafs only a half game behind the Bisons. The status of Montreal and Syracuse remained unchanged as these teams also split.

The Orioles got only four hits, off three Leaf pitchers in the opener but remained in the running through a last-ditch rally. Leafs piled up 16 hits in the second clash but still had to go into the extra inning, winning out on Latsha's home' with one aboard in the tenth.

Buffalo's especaies Freddie Hutchinson went the route 6-2 with eight hits and lost a shutout when Mud Merkens hit the fence for two home runs. Hank Borowy marked up his first mound victory since April 26 in the nightcap, winning 7-2.

Gene Hasson did a notable hitting job for Syracuse against his former Montreal teammates with a home run in each game. He clouted one with the bases full as Cecil Dolles pounded Lee Grissom for eight runs in the second of the first game and won 12-8. In the second contest Hasson homered with one aboard, but the Royals had sewed up a 4-3 decision in the first inning.

Ralph McGill, who wrote baseball for years as a sports writer and editor, now looks on the game through the eyes of a man, as executive editor of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, and finds a new and different thrill in the sport. Writing in a recent issue of his paper, he commented:

"There is more genuine skill and finesse in baseball than in any baseball game than on the stage when some drama is unfolding.

There is keenness almost all the time. The batter is going to hit or he isn't; the pitch will be a strike or a ball; the ball, if hit, will be caught or missed.

The shortstop, going far to his right or left for a hard-hit ball, has a fleeting second or so to pick it up, turn and throw accurately to first base.

"I suspect few fans realize the amazing amount of balance, skill and timing shown by a good infield in one day's play. A double play, for instance, in which the shortstop, second baseman and first baseman handle the ball, involves timing and speed to a degree unsuspected.

"Consider the batter, waiting at the plate. The pitched ball is but six inches from the batter. The batter has but a split second in which to estimate the pitch; to see if it is over or wide, low or high, a fast ball or a curve. He must size it up, decide his course, and swing all within the fleeting fraction of a second.

"Or, of course you must go to the ball game.

"The very finest game—and the really American game."

Whenever Manager Fred Haney of the St. Louis Browns appears at the Yankee Studium, the boisterous Yanks really give Haney a true American baseball verbal reception. They call Haney "chatterbox", and the wily Browns' manager merely looks and grins.

"There's the world's champion talker," predicted Art Fletcher, who has known Haney for years. "When he shows up for spring training in the Browns' Florida camp he says hello and when he goes home in the fall he says goodbye and nary a word between" explained Fletcher.

x x x

It seems Charlie Keller and Lefty Gomez were engaged in a pre-game verbal bit of kibitizing the other day. Picking up a few bats, Gomez announced he was going to hit to the outfield. "Keller," he said, "I suppose you've been around here for ten years and still don't know where right field is. Why you don't know which way is up," kidded Keller.

"Could be, but I never went to college like you did," snapped back "Goofy," as he whipped a sly—"and which way is up?"

The average man of 77 isn't very daring. But Connie Mack always has been an exceptional person. At an age when most men have settled down to peaceful retirement, Mr. Mack is still pursuing the thought of another pennant. That is daring enough, but more daring than that is his forecast that the Yankees are not going to repeat this year.

Connie Mack's daring thought has started others thinking that the law of averages has held off on the Yanks long enough and that something is just about to happen. There is some logic in this reasoning, but when you stack up against the Yankee roster you still must pick the Yanks, unless you're simply guessing.

Do you remember when—Harold Webster, 52-year-old Hamilton runner, romped home in the Empire Games marathon trial six years ago today—"Iron Legs" climaxed his career less than two months later by winning the British Empire championship in London.

The top-flight teams were slapped down with regularity in the Major Leagues over the week-end. The Yankie lowly St. Louis Browns rose up to wallop the Yankees twice yesterday, the Reds took two from the Dodgers and the Giants lost a brace to the Pirates. The Boston Red Sox added to their lead by taking two games from the Chicago "Pale Hose," while even with Oscar Vitt still in harness, the Cleveland Indians won two over the A's, with Bob Feller chalking up his ninth win of the season.

SPORT SPICE—Peterborough and Oshawa won their respective games in the Senior International Baseball League. Newt Kimball, one of Brooklyn's brightest spring pitching prospects, has a flair for outstanding performances, and the Dodger management hopes he may furnish something unusual on the hill.

At home, in California, Kingball is a golfing star, qualifying in the Los Angeles open last winter. In baseball he twirled a no-hitter for the Pasea City club. He's an aviator at the Douglas airplane works.

Dismissal Demanded

Veteran players of Cleveland Indians have asked President Alva Bradley to dismiss Manager Oscar Vitt, ABOVE, be fired. The players charged that Vitt's constant ridicule and caustic comments made it impossible for them to play the brand of ball they were capable of.

Dull Trading on Produce Exchange

Toronto, June 17—Dull trading and easing prices were still in evidence for butter on the Toronto open produce market Saturday. Prices were weaker on C's and firm on top grades.

Weight of the seasonal increase in fresh receipts without any buying support caused prices to drift and lower on the butter market. Top grade creamery prices were down a cent in light volume at 32c per pound.

Although arrivals of fresh receipts were on the decline, supplies were sufficient to cover all requirements on the egg market. A gentle tone was noted for dealers' grade C's occasioned a further price reduction. Wholesale inspection shipments of top grades moved at 1-2 cent per dozen higher.

Father's Day

Father's Day was Sunday, and I think this is an appropriate time for me to say something about them. I write a good deal about Mothers, but it's very seldom I have anything to say about fathers, and this is hardly fair or wise.

A father shouldn't just be the man who brings home the potatoes and meat in a family. But a great many fathers don't seem to achieve the place in the home that is rightfully theirs, either, because they don't know how to take the place they should, or because the mother thoughtlessly overshadows him in the home with her more spectacular role. Fathers seem to get but little credit in this world for their share in bringing up the family. I compare the father to a linesman on a football team on which the mother is the star quarterback. She carried the ball, and makes all the spectacular plays. He just works away there in the line, giving the mother protection so she can care for the children.

Even at the birth of a baby, the father's traditional place in the opinion of others is anything but impressive. Cartoonists and joke-sters love to depict him pacing up and down the corridors outside the maternity ward and the whole idea seems to be that he is a wholly unnecessary by-stander in the birth process. Here in this parthe of the country, my experience with fathers at the birth of a child is entirely different. In this sparsely settled country maternal help to search if the father does not actually attend the confinement, for at least has the other children to look after while the new baby is being born. Often he is given the new baby to care for too, almost as soon as it is born. More than once, when no nurse or assisting woman was available I have had to call on the father to assist me. Some proved to be splendid assistants too.

Not always, however. I remember one father who fainted on my hands just when I needed him. On the other hand I recall that I was called out to attend a birth in a distant section of the country. It was spring and the roads were very bad. So I was a long time getting to the home. When I did, I was met at the door by a very pale husband, with a baby in his arms. He had delivered his wife of the child, and he had done a very good job of it too. He hadn't had much idea of what to do but faced with an emergency he had done it anyway. He hadn't lost his head, he had used it. It is my experience that fathers are usually like that. They do quite as much, and sometimes more, for the family as mothers. But, being gallant, they allow mothers to have most of the credit.

All War Supplies Bought by France Taken by Britain

New York, June 17 (AP).—Reliable Wall Street sources today disclosed that the British government intends to "take over" all war supplies contracted for in this country by France "and to buy as much more here as the United States can produce."

These same sources said sellers of war supplies took "at its face value" Prime Minister Churchill's statement that Great Britain would carry on the war.

Something more than $1,500,000,000 worth of war supplies — mainly airplanes — are known to have been ordered by the British-French Purchasing Commission in the United States up to last Friday when the French, according to official announcement, placed "many millions" of additional orders.

The financial district understands more than 6,000 airplanes ordered in the United States by the French and British still are undelivered of original orders for more than 8,000. These, it was assumed, now will be diverted to Great Britain.

Grand Orange Lodge Of East Ontario Wants Manpower Conscripted

Ottawa, June 17 (CP). — The Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East sent a telegram to Prime Minister Mackenzie King yesterday urging the Dominion government to conscript manpower, wealth and industry in the present emergency.

The Lodge, meeting in Kingston over the week-end, passed the resolution and sent it to the prime minister. It was signed by S. C. Hudson, Grand Master.

AT THE BELLE

"Typhoon"

All the riotous color and gorgeous beauty of the romantic Sulu Sea are alive on the screen in Paramount's greatest technicolor production, "Typhoon," which is now at the Belle. More glamorous and more gaily dressed than ever Dorothy Lamour is the vibrant castaway on an uninhabited island, while her companion is a chimpanzee she has raised and trained. Then lucky Robert Preston and Lynne Overman are forced to abandon ship on her paradise shore. The tempestuous romance and the traitorous actions of J. Carrol Naish, Polynesian chief, who is chasing the ladies, mount up with terrific suspense to the terrifying climax of a tropical typhoon.

Four Grand Shorts

"Room Cea the Croon" a funny multiple-reel all-star comedy, the popular Belle newsreel, Gaumont Sen and his famous orchestra presenting a smart musical revue and a funny popeye cartoon "Females is Pickle" precede the feature attraction.

"Waterloo Bridge"

It was like homecoming for Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor when they were starred in "Waterloo Bridge" picturization of the famous Robert E. Sherwood stage play, which comes next to the Belle theatre.

The setting of the picture is London, where Miss Leigh and Taylor met three years ago to make "A Yank at Oxford" the film that started the English actress on the way to fame, realized with her Academy Award, performance as Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind" but their new romantic teaming takes place during more graphic and exciting period than the stars experienced when last in England, with the scene of "Waterloo Bridge" laid in wartime London of 1917 and 1940.

One of the tenderest romances brought to the screen since "Seventh Heaven," the story is woven around the whirlwind courtship and love affair between a ballet dancer and a handsome young officer. They meet on Waterloo Bridge during an air raid, are engaged in twenty-four hours, and then are separated on their wedding day when he is suddenly called back to the front. She reads that he has been killed in action. But in a year later, they are brought together again at Waterloo Station, when he returns after having been held in a prison camp.

Both Miss Leigh and Taylor have vital, sympathetic roles in the dramatic film, which damns the evil forces of war for what they are, destructive, senseless and brutal.

Supporting the stars in an outstanding cast are Lucile Watson, Virginia Field, Maria Ouspenskaya, C. Aubrey Smith and others. The picture was directed by Mervyn Le Roy, who gave the screen "The Wizard of Oz" and "Anthony Adverse." It was produced by Sidney Franklin, noted for his direction of such hits as "The Good Earth," "Smilin' Thru" and "The Barrets of Wimpole Street."

ANOTHER "OPEN TOWN" BOMBED BY NAZIS

Buildings and a truck are shown wrecked and burning after a German air raid on a French "open town." Undefended and with no military importance, scores of French villages, towns and cities have been wantonly bombed by the Nazi air force in an effort to terrorize the civilian population.

BRITAIN POURS TROOPS AND MUNITIONS INTO BATTLE OF FRANCE

Passed by the British censor, this photo shows British troops embarking at an unnamed English port for the trip across the channel to take their place beside the French in the greatest battle in history. Fifty of these ships and maybe more, will be rushed to the Allies immediately.

FRENCH TUNISIA WELL DEFENDED

Since Italy first began the outcry for Tunisia, France has been strengthening the defences of her African colony. Today, threatened by Italy, Tunisia is well-equipped for defence. This parade of heavy tanks was photographed during the visit of then Premier Edouard Daladier in the early days of the crisis that has become the bloodiest war in history.

One of the shipment of Northrup A-17A army attack planes which will be used as dive bombers by the Allies is shown being overhauled by mechanics at Mitchel Field, L.I. Mechanics installed machine-guns and obliterated all U.S. army markings. U.S. army and navy planes are being turned back to manufacturers for subsequent Allied purchase.

AS BRITAIN SPEEDS HER TANK PRODUCTION

Great Britain is making a mighty effort to meet the Nazi tank menace by putting her factories on a 24-hour working schedule. At TOP here you see an assembly line in one of the big English plants where these juggernauts are turned out. BELOW, a new tank is put through its paces on the testing grounds. It is reported that English factories are rushing production on a new tank, one with a revolving turret whence cannon can be fired at all angles and in all directions.

American Aids England

Charles Sweeney, shown here, has completed formation of the first unit of an American-manned mechanized defence force to aid in defending England against possible German invasion. The unit, comprising 40 armored troop cars, will be stationed in London. Mr. Sweeney is an uncle of the American-born golf star Robert Sweeney, whose name has been romantically linked with that of the former Barbara Hutton who is now Countess Reventlow.

LAST PHASES OF EPOCH EVACUATION OF DUNKIRK

These pictures passed by the British censor show the last phases of the great Allied evacuation from Dunkirk during which 350,000 Allies were removed from the ruined port in an operation called one of the greatest exploits in military history. Troops of the B.E.F. are shown LEFT, marching through the ruined port en route to the water front. By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 18 (C.P. Cable)—Britain is ready on land, in air and on the sea for the "Battle of Britain" which is about to start and on the result of which depends the future of civilization the world over, Prime Minister Churchill declared in the House of Commons today.

Like a company director addressing a board meeting, Mr. Churchill drew on his great military experience to assess in a cold, factual way the dangers facing the country, its probabilities and eventual victory, and gave his studied judgment that Germany would be crushed in the end.

"IF WE FAIL, NEW DARK AGE FOR WORLD"

"Hitler Knows," Mr. Churchill said, "that he will have to break us on this island or lose the war.

"If we can stand up to him, all Europe may be free and the life of the world may move forward into a broad, sunlit upland.

"If we fail then the whole world including the United States and all we have known and cared for will sink into the abyss of a new dark age made more sinister and perhaps more prolonged by the lights of perverted science.

"Let us therefore so brace ourselves to our duty and so bear ourselves that if the British Empire lasts for one thousand years men will still say 'This was their finest hour'."

BRITAIN DECLINES TO RELEASE FRANCE

Mr. Churchill emphasized that the French had not stopped fighting and that it was not yet certain they would capitulate. He also disclosed Britain had declined to release France from treaty obligations not to negotiate a separate peace.

"I see great reasons for intense vigilance and industry but none for panic and despair," he said.

Mr. Churchill said that seven-eighths of the British troops sent to France since the beginning of the war—about 350,000 out of 400,000—now are safely back in England. "Others are still fighting with the French and with considerable success."

SUDDEN COLLAPSE OF ENEMY IN 1918

"More than 1,250,000 men now are under arms in this country," he added, stating that a great mass of stores, rifles and munitions have been saved from France.

He recalled that in the first Great War no one knew how it was going to end until "quite suddenly and unexpectedly, our terrible enemy collapsed."

He said he advised France to continue the fight and pledged that "we in this island and in the British Empire will never lose our sense of comradeship with the French people."

He said Canadians had been landed in France but had been safely withdrawn although disappointed.

"In view of the troops now in this country, invasion of this country would require hostile armies on a very large scale" he said, "and we have a navy."

THREE-BRITISH DIVISIONS IN LATE BATTLE

In the final battle for France, now lost, Mr. Churchill asserted there were only three British divisions, because of the time it took to replace supplies and equipment lost in the disaster of Flanders.

"We sent every man we could to France as fast as we could re-equip and transport their formations," he said.

The Prime Minister recalled how the British army and 120,000 French troops were rescued by the Royal Navy from Dunkirk but only with the loss of "all their cannon, vehicles and equipment."

"This loss inevitably took some weeks to repair, and in the first two of those weeks the battle in France had been lost," he said.

2" DIVISIONS POSSIBLY COULD HAVE TURNED SCALE

Mr. Churchill added that considering the heroic resistance made by the French and the enormous losses and inevitable exhaustion of the Germans that "it might be well thought that twenty-five divisions of the best trained and best equipped troops would have turned the scale."

Only three British divisions were able to stay in the lines with the French, Mr. Churchill said.

U. S. Admiral Urges 4 Billion Dollars Naval Expansion

Admiral Stark Would Give United States Greatest Fleet World Has Ever Seen—Naval Chief Would Add 200 Ships

Washington, June 18 (AP).—Admiral Harold R. Stark unexpectedly recommended to Congress today a $4,000,000,000 expansion of the Navy to give the United States the greatest fleet the world has ever seen.

Testifying before the House of Representatives Naval Committee after a closed session, Chief of Naval Operations said the proposed program would add about 200 fighting ships to the navy and 1,250,000 tons to the navy's authorized combat tonnage. That tonnage now amounts to about 1,724,480 tons, he added.

Stark's public testimony on the new proposal was confined to bearen details but, in response to questions by Chairman Vinson (Dem.-Georgia) he said he considered it "essential" to the defence of the United States and insular possessions as well as the defence of the Monroe Doctrine.

"We Shall Fight On Until the Curse of Hitler is Lifted from Brows of Mankind," Pattullo Promises in Radio Speech

British Gov't. Offers France Union With One Government and Common Agencies for Defence and Foreign Relations

London, June 18—(CP)—Great Britain rallied today behind the defiant assertion of Prime Minister Winston Churchill that the Empire will "fight on unconquerable" regardless of the French exit from the war.

Press and public acclaimed the Prime Minister's declaration, made Monday in a two-minute radio speech.

The outstanding question was what would become of the French fleet in the event France surrenders, a question rendered more urgent by the certainty that Britain is facing imminent threat of an attempted invasion.

It was considered probable that Germany and Italy would demand the French navy as part of the price for peace, but doubt was expressed whether the first—under British command since the start of the war—actually could be surrendered.

No Obstacle in Way of U.S. Tourists States Ralston

Canada Will Likely Maintain 'Open Door' Policy to Visitors from States

NEVER MORE WELCOME

Ottawa, June 18—(CP)—Publicity was seen today in the statements of Finance Minister Ralston that Canada might not take "reciprocal" action in connection with the United States regulation requiring Canadians travelling in the United States to have passports after July 1.

The minister, speaking in a radio address launching a tourist drive sponsored by the young men's section of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, invited American tourists to come "as freely and as fully" as they did in the past. "Our country door will be open to you," he said. "Never in our history have you been more welcome."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, speaking in the House of Commons the day after the United States Government announced the new regulation recently said the government might effect "something in the nature of reciprocity" in the matter.

He said conferences between Canadian and United States Governments would be held on different questions as they arise.

Seven Rules Given For Guidance Of Britishers 'If Invasion Comes'

London, June 18—(CP) — The Ministry of Information in a booklet distributed today announced seven rules for the guidance of the populace "if an invader comes." The rules are:

1. Whether the invader comes by parachutist, airplane or ship, you must remain where you are. The order is "stay put."

2. Do not believe rumors and do not spread them. When you receive an order make sure it is authentic.

3. Keep watch. If you see anything suspicious, note it carefully and get to one of the nearest policeman or military officer.

4. If parachutists land near your home they will be fearful as well as brave. Do not give any German anything. Shoot them with your bicycles. Hide your maps. See that the enemy gets no petrol. Put your car or motorcycle out of action.

5. Be ready to help the military in any way, but do not block roads until ordered to do so by the military or local defence volunteer authorities.

6. Factory managers and workmen should organize some system now by which a sudden attack can be resisted.

7. Think before you act. But think always of your country before you think of yourself.

BIGGEST BUDGET IN HISTORY TO BE GIVEN THURSDAY

Ralston's Budget Will Call for New Taxes and Increases in Old Taxes

PAY OUT OF REVENUE

Ottawa, June 18 (CP)—Canada's defence effort hitherto considered mostly in terms of men, ships, airplanes, shells and guns, will be measured in dollars and cents this week when Finance Minister Ralston presents his budget, Indications are Thursday will be budget day.

Then the Canadian public will learn not only the general picture of war finance in terms of hundreds of millions of dollars but just how extra monies are to be extracted from the pockets of individual tax-payers.

All signs point to Mr. Ralston presenting the biggest budget in Canadian history so far, a budget calculated for new taxes and increases in old taxes.

The war appropriation bill, already passed by parliament runs to $700,000,000 and estimates of expenditure for normal governmental purposes run to about $450,000,000.

Total Ralston budget will thus propose the raising of these sums, aggregating more than $1,000,000,000 by taxation. Already the government is borrowing from the public through the war savings certificates and there may be large war loan campaigns.

Pay Expenses Out of Revenue

The general policy of war finance, however, as stated at the special war session of parliament last September is to pay expenses out of revenue as far as possible.

In framing the budget and deciding where and how heavily to tax, Mr. Ralston and the rest of the Finance Minister keep in mind the general economic well-being of the country, the foreign exchange situation and the buying power of the people, besides the importance of keeping business going.

Thus the tax changes may be such as to produce as much revenue as possible with a minimum of dislocation. They may bear more heavily on individual incomes and individual spending than on corporate endeavors.

Tariff changes, usually a prominent feature of the budget will be few. The income tax may be increased, with exemptions reduced in order to bring lower incomes, not presently taxable into the tax field.

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

A Southern Port, England, June 18 (AP).—The sudden recall of the fortunes of war against the Allies in France—the Canadian Army Corps found a shipload of Canadian soldiers in mid-channel, bound for the French coast. They had been ordered to make a countermarch to a train at Sable, France, when the order came to move out. They saw no sign of the enemy.)

They got was a corner of Canada when the boys marched down the streets to the ship. Women and children lined the docks and in windows waved flags. A laughing girl ran along beside the navy as she could and missed only half a dozen in sight.

On embarkation they sang, "Oh, why are we waiting". On their return they were grumbling the same words.

French Generals in Near East, Africa May Have Decided to Fight on

London, June 18—(CP)—French sources in London said today they considered it "probable" that General Albert Nogues, commanding forces in North African army and General Eugene-Mittelhauser, commanding the French army in the Near East, had decided to continue fighting.

These sources said they had no direct communication with the Bordeaux Government and there were unable to confirm or deny reports that French leaders had decided to continue the war with the Government established in England but that there still remained many operating from British bases.

(Mittelhauser's command, based in Syria, has been estimated at more than 200,000 men. No estimates have been available on Nogues' command.)

London, June 18—(CP) —Premier Henri Petain and General Maxime Weygand appealed to all French forces to keep on fighting in an order of the day broadcast by the French radio tonight.

The announcement was made at 6:30 p.m. (1:30 p.m. EDT) and directed to French land, sea and air forces.

It said some units were retreating before the Germans "in the belief that France has already laid down her arms."

Then it instructed troops to "continue their resistance with honor as the armistice is not yet signed."

The armistice has not yet been agreed upon, the announcement added.

Bordeaux, France, June 18 (AP). —Isolated groups of the French army continued their dogged resistance today, said the War Ministry spokesman, but he added that from now on there was nothing more to do save wait "the enemy's terms".

Bordeaux, France, June 18 (AP). —The French cabinet met today with Premier Petain, still awaiting an answer to Sunday's appeal to the enemy for "peace with honor."

Battle of Britain About to Begin Churchill Predicts

London, June 18—(CP) — The battle for France was lost by an "unfortunate strategical opening" by the French high command, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today and the "great question is, can we break Hitler's air weapon?"

"The French Government," he declared, "will be casting away their future if they do not continue the war in accordance with their treaty obligations, from which we have not felt able to release them.

"It is not yet certain that military resistance by France will come to end.

"The battle of France is over and the battle of Britain is about to begin.

"If we lose it, the whole world, including the United States of America, will sink into the abyss of a new dark age."

He predicted confidently that forces invading Britain likely would be "drowned in the sea or broken to pieces while trying to land."

NEW PARKING LINES NOW COMPLETED

Bright new parking lines decorate Front St. for its entire length and for a short distance each side as city employees complete their annual job of painting those lines. Gleaming parking is still favored over the alternative of parallel parking down the side but the system is in vogue for the first parking space on each side of intersections and gangways.

Front St. merchants are not altogether fond of the plan which permits parallel parking on both sides of gangways however as it is pointed out that if the car facing the gangway were to be parked diagonally there would be more room available for vehicles using the alleyway.

SERIES OF THEFTS ALARM FARMERS

Grain, Potatoes and Other Articles Taken from 4th Sidney Farms

Farmers residing on the 4th of Sidney have reached a state of alarm following thefts of grain, potatoes stolen from their premises recently. Working under the cover of darkness over-the-weekend, cooks used raids have been made on several farms in the district.

Provincial Constable W. E. Smith investigated the thefts and farmers interviewed told that grain and potatoes seemed to be the chief commodities taken. F. Jay White reported his cellar had been entered with the loss of potatoes and grain. F. L. Fisher, a neighbour, complained of similar losses.

"When we looked into our potato bin this week there was only about enough left to fill two or six bags," Mrs. Fisher told Constable Smith.

At the nearby home of Orval Fisher several attempts had been made to gain entrance to the home. A blue suit coat was left abandoned at the Fisher home last week-end, the owner was given into the custody of the police today.

Mrs. Fisher visiting a neighbor to Frankford is said to have lost a watch and chain.

Mrs. Fisher stated further, that she had definitely heard a prowler the noises I turned on my bedroom light, which no doubt frightened the marauder away," added Mrs. Fisher in explaining how the blue suit coat may have been left at the scene of the intended crime.

Police Roundup Four Men on Charges Under C. W. M. Act

Three persons were arrested and a fourth interned as police of the district moved to check subversive activities and prefer charges under Canada's War Measures Act.

Frank Barinka, alias Frank Baker, a resident of Toronto, was Trenton R.C.A.F. base and an alleged German birth, was arrested by Belleville City Detectives, assisted by Constable Wm. Beatty of the R.C.M.P. and Constable F. W. Smith of the O.P.P. Barinka was lodged in the county jail on remand charges of sedition, the charge being that of being a subject of a state at war with His Majesty the King and also unlawfully using an assumed name, under the Defence of Canada regulations.

Arrested for Alleged Subversive Activities

A second to be apprehended for alleged subversive activities was Arthur Mills, who was arrested by Provincial Constable Palmateer of Bancroft. Grant, who is but 19 years of age, is charged with having stated likely to cause dissatisfaction to His Majesty's forces.

Mills was taken into custody by the police.

The third to be apprehended in the district Monday was a man, who gave his name as James Lee Pee, home address, Toronto, but who is known to the authorities as J. C. Hayes at Tweed after he had been arrested and rendered himself liable for allegedly making statements of disaffection.

Changed Name

Barinka has been employed at Trenton R.C.A.F. station, having assumed name for the past three months, Crown Constable Kirk revealed. Czechoslovakia is under German domination and Barinka considered an alien state. Barinka, who is 29 years of age, is not naturalized Canadian citizen. "I changed my name in order to procure employment," revealed Barinka, who denied ignorance of any offence.

Hayes, also a Canadian-born citizen, however, is alleged by the police to have told Barinka he is one who has two sons in the C.A.S.F. and is said to have made statements that Hitler and Mussolini also is said to have made similar statements in addition to the interest of the district Hayes, who immediately arrested on his was a stranger, unknown in Tweed.

Will be Interned

R.C.M.P. authorities revealed today that Wilhelm Lasek, native of Czecho-Slovakia and who was convicted in a Trenton police court on charges of espionage, recently, would be interned at the expiration of his term in jail. Lasek failed to report to the authorities, as provided under the alien registration regulations, Kirk revealed, where he resided before being arrested loitering near the Trent Canal.

PRINCESS JULIANA ASKED FOR LOVE IN BROADCAST

Netherlands Heir to Throne Came to Canada Because She Was on "Blacklist" of Gestapo

SPOKE IN FRENCH

Montebello, Que., June 18—(CP)—Princess Juliana of the Netherlands introduced herself to Canadians in simple words which added their love but not their "pity"

"No woman ever felt as proud as I do today of the marvellous heritage of my own people," she said in an address over a National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. She spoke from the Seigniory Club in the Ottawa Valley resort where she and her two children are spending the first part of their stay in Canada, where they have come because they are on the "blacklist" of the German gestapo.

"They had always lived their own lives," the Princess said of her countrymen. "They had always maintained the right of the individual to his own liberty to the liberty of his person and to the liberty of his home.

Enemy Takes Into Their Homes

"When such rights were denied them the rights in other parts of the world, they welcomed them then took them into their hearts and into their homes. But when suddenly they were placed before the terrible choice of surrendering those rights or of dying in their defence, they never hesitated. They died, and everlasting glory is the sum of countless names, who, hating and loathing the very idea of violence, stood overwhelmed by the superior power and the treason of an enemy into whom they had always been a generous and helpful friend."

Pity is For the Weak

For these reasons, she said, "never speak to me of pity, pity is for the weak and our terrible fate has made us stronger than ever before." She asked instead for "strengthening love," with a brief, "my name is Juliana," the princess addressed herself to "My unknown friends of Canada" with an added word in French to "you Canadians who share with me the blood of our French ancestors." She spoke opening sentences in French. She also addressed the people of the United States, who heard her over nation-wide network by her country.

The Netherlands Princess had wifely concern for her husband, Prince Bernhard, who was with the allied defending Netherlands forces in Zeeland, Holland."

The little princesses who are with her, Beatrix, 2 1-2 and Irene, nine months, he said: "I hope that you will be kind to them. Please teach them your smile and they will be happy."

'FIGHT ON UNCONQUERABLE'

"The news from France is very bad, and I grieve for the gallant people who have fallen into this terrible misfortune.

"Nothing will alter our feelings that there is our faith that the genius of France will rise again. What has happened in France makes no difference to British faith and purpose.

"We have become the sole champions now in arms to defend the world cause; and we shall do our best to be worthy of this high honor.

"We shall defend our island home and with the British Empire around us, we shall fight on unconquerable until the curse of Hitler is lifted from the brows of men. We are sure that in the end all will come right."—Prime Minister Churchill.

THE PARIS THAT DID NOT FALL

Paris, one of the wonder cities of the world, is now in the hands of the Germans. It has fallen upon the Germans who pass through its streets. Paris, the noble emblem of a great race, cannot be understood by the Nazis, as the New York Times points out, "for one supposes that [Hitler] or any one of his intimates has the least conception of what the city of Paris means to mankind. Nor can anyone suppose that he would have hesitated to level the city to the ground if by doing so he could have added one ounce to the thrust of Nazism.

The Times goes on in praise of this great city. "The city will stand. The material things that men have found to love in it will still be there; the tree-lined avenues, the river of beautiful bridges, the old palaces Notre Dame, the Louvre, the parks, the quays, the cafes in which multitudes of men long hands have sat over little glasses and long existential talks saying what they pleased and thinking their own thoughts." The writer adds that the shell of Paris. "The shell witnesses the obscene triumph of a man and an idea that have invaded not only a city but a country, out of the murk of past history. But it only the lovely shell that Hitler has captured. He has not captured the Paris. Nor can he, with his rotten, his robot battalions penetrate within the walls of that noble city. For all bodily violence it remains inviolate, forever.

"Paris of Voltaire, Rousseau, Victor Hugo, Balzac, Anatole France, Montaigne, Paris of Madame Roland, Lafayette, Danton, Marat, Chateaubriand; Paris of Racine, Moliere, Corneille; Paris of Gautier, Daudet and Baudelaire; Paris where democracy had its modern rebirth; Paris that taught the world how to live and build; Paris that laughed, Paris that used words for rapiers, Paris that turned the troops out to march with muffled drums in the funeral trains of poets; Paris where the first great declaration of modern man loved at its freest and brightest; Paris of museums, libraries, universities in which the mind could range at will; Paris the spiritual, Paris the city of light, Paris that city of light, Paris that quickened the pulse of youth, and hinistered to the serenity of age; Paris the volatile and profound: this is not Hitler's Paris, not today, not ever.

"His armies, his spies, his traitors, his drill sergeants now have the physical city in their grasp. They may park their machines of war in the Place de la Concorde. They may parade the Champs Elysees. But the Elysian Fields of Paris, as of Utopia, an illusion itself, they cannot traverse or conquer."

FRANCE'S NEIGHBOR

If there is a spark of humanity left in the Italian state the people must burn with shame as they think upon how the state has betrayed noble France, the light of liberty and freedom and a sister Celtic state. For the grasping of a dictator, the Italian Fascists have stabbed their sister state in the back.

In the days of the old Roman Empire France was one of the provinces of Rome, being then known as Gaul or Gallia. Italy herself was made up of a number of tribes which came under the domination of the people of the city of Rome, the Latins. Italy began to be a state with the fall of Rome in 476 A.D. It was a united state to God under Rome.

Italy has stabbed France in the back for the sake of its Teuton, the proverbial enemy of Italy and France.

A PROPHECY

The gallant and heroic French soldiers have written one of the greatest of martial stories of all time. For days and nights without ceasing they have battled bombers, mammoth tank, motorized infantry and all the mechanism and force of totalitarianism, but they could sing that great war song of theirs, "The Marsellaise." They knew that France's glories will be revenged and be free. Even at this time of writing though Britain has asked for an honorable peace, French and German armies are locked in battle.

There is enough translations of this anthem which has cheered the soldiers of the Republic for generations:

"Sons of France, the morn is breaking.
The day of glory dawns at last!
See the tyrant's banner shaking
As it beauty streams in the blast.
Hear the fierce soldiers near you,
Pierce foemen advance in their pride.
Confusion spreading far and wide
While they cut your children
Implore you."

And then one of the greatest refrains in all martial literature:

"To arms, and hence away,
To arms this glorious day
March on, march on,
Brave sons of France to fame and victory."

The words that follow are a prophecy of that victory which Britain is determined to achieve for the freedom of the world and the restoration of France and other states to their honored place:—

"Ye tyrants quake, your day is over,
Detested now by friend and foe,
Your every crime and savage cruelty
Ye shall die as traitors do.
Each gallant heart with zeal overflowing
Goes eagerly forth at the call
Through danger may the country fall
Our children will hear the bugle blowing."

PRINCESS OF THE NETHERLANDS SPEAKS

Canada feels proud to be the domicile of those who have had to flee oppression. Princess Juliana and her Netherlanders among those sheltered in this new world Dominion.

Canada, rich as she is in the things of the spirit and material things, can yet learn lessons in national unity from a people who, age as the Princess Juliana, Netherlanders are proud, they ask this sustaining love of Canadians to direct their pity, for the Dutch people are too great to ask pity.

She is a great people the people and the heritage they have handed down from generation to generation and the heritage this generation will hand down in the deathless valor of the Netherlands in the physical and attempt to stem the advance of the Nazi hordes.

How the German Nazis have sunk is shown by the fact that the Gestapo had the Princess and her children on the Nazi blacklist.

As the Princess spoke in perfect English and French of her country's liberty of the soul, the world can realize why the Dutch decided against Nazism.

She showed pride as she said: "Never speak to me of pity. Pity is for the weak and our terrible fate has made us stronger than ever before."

Princess Juliana's speech stirs the manhood in all. It speaks of that happier day when the Nazi will have been crushed.

Lethargy of Democratic Nations During Past Fifteen Years Scored by Wm. A. Fraser M. P.

Canada Determined to Hitch Labor With Material to Speed Up War Effort Says Member

DRAMATIC ADDRESS

"Canada is determined to hitch labor with material and no one will stop her. Her people know now they are dealing with an international murderer; with inroads of the totalitarian school of thought to which they can not or will not live". W. A. Fraser, M. P., told members of the Belleville Rotary Club here on Monday.

"Only in the last month have we realized what contingencies we have to deal with," the dynamic member for Northumberland told the clubmen. "We have broken away from the old red tape of orthodox finance in Canada. This determination permeates all those in the high places of authority with the exception of a few solsisters, and pasin-singers".

In a dramatic address in which he did not "pull his verbal punches", Mr. Fraser lashed out with all his eloquence at the lethargy of the Democratic nations during the past fifteen years.

Peoples of the world, he said, are looking for someone to blame for present conditions. They themselves are to blame, for they refused to recognize what is now imminent as the economics of violence.

Refused to Deal With Facts

"The Christian peoples refused to deal with facts", he said, "they refused to see the training of youth and regimentation of nations as a sacrifice on the altar of violence. The people of the world are to blame, not those of any individual nation".

"The dembcratic nations refused to take cognizance of the facts that made such nations as Germany, Italy and Japan", he said. In his opinion the trouble of the nations of the world was self-inflicted and not the result of misfortunes.

"The free nations", he said, "allowed the weeds of indulgence to contaminate the garden of freedom. They were so blinded they refused to accept the facts, that have been written during the past fifteen years. In Canada, life was too easy. We sang songs and readied about international goodwill. We refused to listen to that echo which rang around the world "Arm and instead of butter, tanks instead of guns".

Men elected to the high places in Canada reflected this belief, the speaker charged. "In the House of Commons, members pronounced year after year their allegiance to spending one dollar for the defence of the liberties we boast about. That was not only a cross-section of Canada", he said, "but a cross-section of Democracy".

Mr. Fraser warned his listeners that life will not be the same in the future as in the past. "I say to all Canadian citizens", he declared, "that they must look on the past in order to guide their steps in the future."

Life to be Changed

"You fathers will know before long, how changed life will be", he continued. "We must realize, that we are being attacked by the miscreant of a world revolution. Conditions in Canada are unravelling so swiftly in these days, that no one knows what may happen the next twilight. No one knows the price Frahce has to pay for the ruthless attack on thousands of innocent people.

"We must all be realists", he declared. "We must start now and realize that the only sacrifice that will defeat the catastrophe is the sacrifice that has been made in their own countries.

"If Britain fights on, there is hope", he added. "If we arise in Canada, through circumstances, is lined up against the continent of the south. I believe that every man and every dollar will be thrown into the pot for the defence of Canada and the western hemisphere".

He believed, he said, that the world revolution is being brought about by the surging divorce from the teachings of Christ in favor of those of economic violence.

Urges All to Become Realists

Declaring that no one can tell what Hitler will demand if the worst happens, Mr. Fraser urged that every man become a realist; and to save everything he has, for "nothing will be worth a nickel if Hitler ever dominates the Western Hemisphere. The life to come is worth only what we make it now".

"We have got to discover everything we have into our effort. If the British Empire hangs together, and with the realisation of America, can help, we can come out victorious, but this can only be done by individual effort and the united effort of the nation. We must be realists," he stressed, "and be willing to sacrifice everything for if the Empire goes down, it will be worth nothing."

Turning again to Canada's war effort, he declared, "I say to all political complexions and religious denominations, we are dealing with Hitler, who believed in the provocation line, and who, substituted Christian teachings for those of economic violence."

Every man is being thrown into the making of munitions," he said. "All I can say is to voice the hope that we can catch up in time. We must all join in the efforts and sacrifices of the country. Yesterday's way of life is gone. We must learn to discipline ourselves or be disciplined by someone behind a bayonet", he concluded.

The speaker was introduced by McLean Hagar with the club's appreciation being extended by W.B. Deacon.

Inter-County Field Day Of Holstein Breeders Held

Gerald Nelson, Junior Farmer, Wins Judging Contest With 144 Out of 150 Points

SPORTS PROGRAM

Stirling, June 18 —(Special)—Competing with nearly twenty recognized authorities in judging various types of Holstein cattle at the Annual Inter County Field Day of Holstein Breeders' Association held on Saturday, Gerald Nelson, brilliant junior farmer of Campbellford displayed the value of junior farmer club training projects, when he took first honors of the day scoring a total of 144 points out of a possible 150. Second in standing was the veteran cattle breeder and judge Alex Bums with a total of 141 points. The meet was held on the splendid farm of E. L. Anderson, miles east of Campbellford and was presided over by one of the most successful in the history of the organization with a total of 160 competitors, 28 of which were ladies, 32 junior farmers and 6 senior men. Speeches were delivered during the noon dinner hour by A. D. Runions, of the teaching staff of Kemptville Agricultural School. E. L. Anderson, Ian McLeod B.S.A. and R. M. Holtby, Dominion-wide authority on Holstein cattle. A lengthy sports program was included in the day's activity and the keen interest displayed in judging was matched by the feeling of thorough enjoyment taken in the social part of the programme.

Interest is Keen

At an early hour in the day, cars began streaming into the gateway of the Anderson property and by the land adjacent to the home was transformed in appearance to that of a city parking lot.

Given the freedom of the farm the visitors spent the early hours inspecting the modern farm equipment and buildings and at approximately 10 a.m. judging began with 102 taking part and equally representing the Counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox-Addington and Northumberland. Experienced judges of senior , years competed for honours against members of the fair sex numbering about 30 and gave keen effort and ambitious to display their knowledge. Imported cattle were used for the competition and the quality of the animals was of such high standard that placing was made extremely difficult. Three classes were judged namely, mature cows, heifers and yearling bulls. Green prizes were awarded to the leaders in the ladies, senior men and junior farmers.

Mrs. A. Merrill was first prize winner among the ladies scoring 138 points out of a possible 150. Below are the winners in order of merit.

Ladies—Mrs. A. Merrill, Mrs. L. Evans, Mrs. B. Bateson (tied), Mrs. C. Stoney, Mrs. Philo Harris, Mrs. Ted McLeod (tied), Mrs. R. G. Petty.

Senior Men—Alex Hume, R. G. Petty, B. Newman (tied), Eric Merrill, J. Caskey, H. R. Bright (tied), W. A. Atkinson and Grant Kerr.

Specials—High scorer of the meet—O. Nelson, Campbellford. High score in Hastings Prince Edward—J. Caskey, Madoc.

Address Delivered

With Mr. Macklin acting as chairman, Mr. Ian McLeod introduced the speaker of the day, Mr. A. D. Runions of Kemptville. He congratulated the organization on the successful event and the display of interest. "All construction effort is of value in time of peace or war. Particularly in war time. Each day we hear the ever increasing plea for more material aid and every loyal Canadian is inquiring what he can can be in the great campaign for freedom. It is difficult for the man living on the concession roads of rural Ontario to grasp the meaning of it all. But he, too, has his job to perform. United effort on the part of the farmers to increase new ideas with greater rapidity will speed up production of the important agricultural products. "There should be no slackening in crop improvement and herd improvement in cattle during these trying times. For in the days to follow we can't afford to start anew in projects that have moved so rapidly on forward up to the present time. There will be a labour shortage for the Canadian farmer in days to come and the demand for his energy increased."

"Co-operation", was the keynote of Mr. R. M. Holtby's address. Co-operation not only in times of stress and strain when we find we really need our neighbour, but at all times. For by no other method can the branches of agriculture be advanced.

LAUNCH FITNESS CAMPAIGN

London, (CP) — Great Britain launched a three-year fitness campaign today to prepare every man and woman of age for any strain of war. The Central Council of Recreative Physical Training said: "Victory will be delayed and even jeopardized unless the standards of physical fitness in the country is raised and maintained at the highest possible level."

MORE ARRESTS MADE

Montreal, —(CP)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police announced today the arrest of "a considerable number of Communists and Fascists" in the province's night raids. In announcing the roundup, an R. C. M. P. official emphasized that the detention of the Communists was not connected in any way with that of the Fascists. He added that those arrested would be sent later to internment camps.

Men 16 to 60 Liable For Service Under New Zealand Regulations

(By J. C. Graham Canadian Press Correspondent).

Auckland, (Friday, June 18 (CP Cable)—The New Zealand government today issued regulations making 200,000 men between the ages of 16 and 60 liable for compulsory National Service, including service overseas, in the home forces or in essential national work.

The decision to manpower this will form a general reserve from which classes will be enrolled as required, according to age, call,liqual status, and domestic responsibilities. From the enrolled classes men will be selected for the armed forces by ballot. Appeal will be allowed against army service on grounds of undue hardship, conscientious, essential work, and conscientious objection.

The regulations provide that voluntary enlistment may be continued. No indication was given whether military conscription will begin immediately. Home units are at their full authorized establishment and ample volunteers are also offering to fill expeditionary force vacancies for several months in advance.

New Zealand's plan of pooling all her manpower in a vast reservoir from which men can be chosen for compulsory service at home, abroad, and in the armament factories today marked a new phase in the Empire's gathering forces for a long struggle with Hitler.

Britain, who has had compulsory service for more than a year, continues to call up classes for training as quickly as equipment and camps are ready for them.

Dominions have conscripted mates and widowers without children are liable for military service in the Dominion, but service overseas is on a voluntary basis.

Northern and southern Rhodesia also have compulsory military service. In southern Rhodesia it takes the form of part time military training for all men between the ages of 18 and 25. Details of northern Rhodesia's plan have not been announced.

Conscription of Manpower For Defence of Canada Becomes Troublesome Question

Ottawa, June 18—(CP)—Conscription of manpower for the defence of Canada has become a troublesome question among Parliamentarians here following the trade development today, but no doubt the issue soon will be raised in the House of Commons.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King will make a statement on the war situation in the House following a cabinet meeting which exercised all the emergency powers of Parliament believe he may announce some limited form of conscription for home defence.

Le Canada, Liberal French-language daily here today said in an editorial today that the revolution of the past week pointed out until the present, made a call only for volunteers, but the defence of Canada demands the mobilization of all able-bodied men."

Did Not Use Word

The editorial, which did not use the word conscription, also said "the question is properly of Canadian concern, arming of our country and calling of the whole nation to the defence of the honour of Canada."

Hon. R. J. Manion, former Conservative leader, in a statement last night urged conscription of manpower for home defence.

Meanwhile Liberal Members are freely discussing the situation and it is understood there is a wide difference of opinion as to the advisability of conscripting manpower for the defence of Canada at this time.

Churchill's Address In House of Commons

London, June 18—(AP) — The partial text of Prime Minister Churchill's address today to the House of Commons follows:

"I spoke the other day of the colonial military disaster which occurred when the French high command decided to withdraw the northern armies from Belgium at a moment when they knew that the French front was decisively broken at Sedan and at the Meuse. The delay entailed the loss of 15 or 16 French divisions and threw out of action the whole of the British Expeditionary Force.

"Our army were indeed rescued by the British navy from Dunkirk, but only with the loss of all their transport, vehicles and modern equipment. This loss is inestimably grave. some days is to repair and in the first two of these days the battle in France had been lost.

When we consider the heroic resistance made by the French army against heavy odds in this battle, it might well be thought that these 25 divisions of the best troops, best trained and equipped—might have turned the scales.

However, General Weygand had to fight without them.

Sent Every Man We Could

Only three British divisions of the original nine which were sent in the line with their French comrades. We sent every man we could to France, as fast as we could reequip and transport their formations.

I am not reciting these facts for the purpose of recrimination. I recite them in order to explain why it was we did not have, as we could have had, between 12 and 14 British divisions fighting in the line in this battle instead of only three.

Mr. Churchill said, with regard to affairs in England:

There are many who wish to rout the inquest upon the conduct of the government and of parliament during the years which led up to this catastrophe.

This also would be a foolish and pernicious process. There are too many in it. Let each man search his conscience and search his speeches, as I frequently search mine. Or this I am quite sure, that if we open a quarrel between the past and the present we shall find that we have lost the future.

Would Not Draw Distinctions

Therefore, I cannot accept the drawing of any distinctions between members of the present government, which was formed in a moment of crisis in order to unite members of all parties and all sections of opinion. . . .

In absolutely necessary at time like this that every minister in the state each do to the best that he can and that shall be respected and their subordinates must know that their chiefs are not threatened man who are here today and gone tomorrow. . . .

The military events which have occurred in the north of France in the fortnight have not come to me with any shock or surprise; indeed, I indicated a fortnight ago, as clearly as I could to the House, that the worst possibilities were open and I made it perfectly clear that, whatever happened in the north of France, no difference to the resolve of the British Empire and its chiefs to fight on, if necessary for years, until if necessary alone.

Mr. Churchill then told of the successful return of 350,000 troops from France and the recovery of large stores of rifle, and munitions which had been allowed to accumulate in France during the last nine months. He said other troops were still fighting with the French and were making considerable success.

We have therefore in this island today a very large and powerful military force. This includes all our best trained and finest troops, including scores of thousands of those who have already measured their quality against the Germans and found themselves at no disadvantage—found themselves at no disadvantage.

Canadians to Defend England

We have under arms at the present time in this island over 1,250,000 men. Behind these we have the local defence volunteers, numbering about 500, only a portion of whom, however, are armed with rifles or other firearms. . . .

We also have the Dominion armies from overseas. The Canadians had actually landed in France but have now been safely withdrawn, many disappointed, and are here with all their artillery and equipment. Very very high class forces from the Dominions will also take part in the defence of their Mother country.

Lest the account which I have given on these large forces should raise the question why they did not take part in the great battle in France, I must make it clear that apart from the divisions training at home, only 12 divisions were equipped to fight on a scale which justified their being sent abroad. . . .

This was fully up to the number that the French had been led to expect would be available in France at the ninth month of the war.

French Naval Fleet Turned Over To Britain States N.Y. Journal of Commerce

New York, June 18—(CP)—The Journal of Commerce, financial newspaper, said today it "is reported reliably" that the French naval fleet was turned over to Great Britain last Friday.

Further, unconfirmed in official Allied quarters, was contained in a review of the situation in relation as a result of developments in France.

(German sources in Berlin ex-

Mr. Churchill then declared an invasion of Great Britain would require the transport across water of the hostile armies and that would be successfully countered by the navy. He said during the first Great War the Admiralty permitted the regular troops to leave the country and took the responsibility of defending Britain against the magnificent German fleet of that time.

The efficacy of sea power, essentially under modern conditions, depends upon the invading force being of a large size, and if it is of a large size, the navy has something they can find and, as it were, bite on.

Now we must remember that even five divisions, even lightly equipped, are would require 250 ships and, with modern air reconnaissance and photography, would not be assembled such an armada and marshal it across the seas without the knowledge of the force to escort it with any possibility that it would not be intercepted long before it reached the coast and the men all drowned in the sea, or at any rate arrived in pieces with their equipment when they were landed.

We have also a great system of minefields, which are continuously, through which we alone know this channel. If the enemy tries to force a channel through with minesweepers it will be the task of the navy to destroy these sweepers and any other force engaged to support them. There ought to be no difficulty about this owing to our superiority at sea.

We are told that the British navy is coming to gain sea superiority in these days. That is not seriously intended, I can only say we shall be delighted to offer Mussolini free, safeguarded passage through the Straits of Gibraltar in order that he may play the part which he aspires to do.

There is general curiosity in the British fleet to find out whether the Italians are going to the help they were in the last war or whether they have left it too late.

Therefore, it seems to me that as far as seaborne invasion on a great scale is concerned, we are far more capable of meeting it than we were at the beginning of the last war.

The navy was never intended to prevent the raids of bodies of five or ten thousand men flung across and thrown suddenly ashore in several points on the coast some night or foggy morning.

Mr. Churchill urged that untiring vigilance be exercised in respect of invasion because the enemy was cunning and treacherous. He said the utmost intelligence service duty played by the officers in charge of the defence organizations.

Some people will ask why it was that the British navy was unable to prevent the movement of a large army from Germany, Austria-Poland across the Rhineland, but conditions in the channel and in the North Sea are entirely different and we still prevail in the Skagerrak.

In the Skagerrak because of the distance, we could give no air support to the Norse army, and consequently, lying as we did, close to the enemy's main airpower in Norwegian waters, we were not able to use only our submarines.

We could not effect an entire decisive blockade or interruption of the enemy's supplies because they could took a heavy toll but could not prevent the invasion, but in the channel and the North Sea on the other hand, our forces, aided by submarines, had a wide area and effective air assistance.

Mr. Churchill referred briefly to the great question of invasion from the air and the immense struggle between the British and German air forces.

It seems quite clear that no invasion on a scale beyond the capacity of our ground forces, to crush speedily is likely to take place from the air until our air force has been definitely overpowered. In the meantime, there may be raids by parachute troops and attempted descents by air-borne soldiery. We have to be able to give these gentry a warm reception, both in the air and if they reach the ground in any condition to continue their display, the great question is, can we break Hitler's air weapon?

We have a very powerful air force, which has grown itself far stronger, for in quality both in men and in many types of machines, we have not been set so far in the numerical force as the battles which have been fought.

In France, where we were at a considerable disadvantage and lost many machines on the ground in the airdrome, we have been enabled to inflict upon the enemy a loss of two or 3 1-2 to one.

In the fighting over Dunkirk, which was a sort of no-man's land, we undoubtedly gained a local mastery of the air and inflicted on the German air force a loss of three or four of three or four to one.

Behind me I have photographs of the re-embarkation, showing the masses of troops assembled on the beaches, affording an ideal target for hours at a time, must realize that this embarkation would not have been possible unless the enemy had resigned all hope of recovery of air superiority at that point.

In these islands the advantage to the defenders will be very great. We ought to improve upon that rate of three or four to one, which we established at Dunkirk.

In addition, there are, of course, great many injured — sailors and men who get down safely after the fight. But all those who fail in an attack upon this island would find no friendly soil and have to fight another day, whereas all the injured enemy machines and their crews would be total losses, so far as the German air service is concerned.

During the great battle in France we gave very great and continuous aid to the French army by fighters and bombers, but in spite of all we could have done allowed the entire metropolitan strength of the French air force to be consumed. This decision was painful, but it was also right.

The battle is now lost, but by the unfortunate strategic opening by the French military authorities seen power of the armored columns led by the new and powerful armance of the German army in numbers.

Our fighter air force might easily have been exhausted as a mere accident in the fighting, and we should have found ourselves at the present time in the most deplorable plight. I am happy to inform the House that our fighter air strength in this island is now relatively and absolutely to the German, which has suffered immense losses, far greater than ever been.

Consequently we believe ourselves to possess the capacity to continue the war in the air under better conditions than we have ever experienced before.

There remains the danger of the bombing attacks, which will certainly be made upon us upon us by the bomber forces of the enemy. It is quite true that these forces are on a large number to ours, but we have a very large bombing force which we shall use to strike at the military targets in Germany without intermission.

Winter Will Be Hard for Germany

Mr. Churchill then reached the matter as to the effect on England's position of the recent developments. He said the fact the German air force was destroyed as a large part of the coast aggravated the possibility of air attack. If military conquest of Britain is achieved it would relieve Britain the necessity of maintaining a large army to defend that country.

If Hitler can bring under despotic control the industries of the countries he has conquered, this will add greatly to the already vast armament output.

On the other hand, this will not happen immediately and we are now assured of immense continuous and increasing supplies of munitions of all kinds from the United States, as well as of aircraft, engines and pilots from across the ocean. The rate of these supplies will go beyond the reach of enemy bombers.

I do not see how any of these factors can prevent the early abatement, on balance, before the winter comes, and the winter will impose a strain upon the Nazi regime which will be enormous, and starving under his heel, which, for all their ruthlessness, will run high.

During the first four months of the last war the Allies experienced nothing but disaster and disappointment and yet at the end their position was far stronger than it was when Germany had moved from one aggression to another.

Reasonable Hope of Victory

I have thought it right on this occasion to give the House and the country such indications as are of solid practical grounds upon which we are basing our invincible resolve to continue the war and I can assure them that our professional advisers, after the most careful scrutiny advise that we should do it with reasonable hope of good and reasonable hopes of final victory.

We have fully informed all the Dominion governments and we have received from all Prime Ministers messages couched in the most moving terms, in which they expressed their devotion and declared themselves ready to share our fortunes and persevere to the end.

Rev. F. E. Vipond Called to Regina

Regina, June 18 —(CP)— The congregation of Metropolitan United Church last night voted for the resignation of their minister, Rev. F. E. Vipond, who has served 6½ over the issue of pacifism.

Opposition argued at the meeting that while no fault could be found with Mr. Vipond's spiritual pastorate, the membership had suffered since his pacifist views became widely known following the outbreak of war. The minister, it was said, was sincere in the belief that he would not sing the line "Send Him Victorious" in the National Anthem, "God Save the King."

MANION ADVISES CONSCRIPTION FOR HOME DEFENCE

Former Leader of Conservative Party States All Military Age Should be Trained

LT. JOHN FARROW AT OTTAWA

Ottawa, June 18—(CP)— Lt. John Farrow, former Hollywood star and son of Admiral Farrow, O'Sullivan, the actress, has succeed ever failed.

"Institute universal military training of all men of military age. It takes months to make soldiers, let us start now. I will be ready in the position of poor Francis. A couple of hours training four days a week for the employed, and regular training for the unemployed will benefit all of them morally and physically—and most of them need it.

"Get our industrial plants at work at once on anti-aircraft guns, planes, tanks, artillery and ammunition. We have none now. That is why France fell and Britain is in terrible danger. Man cannot fight machines except with machines and training.

"If Canada and the United States carried out these suggestions either we could adopt or understands force only. In Heaven's name let us awake before it is too late.

"Conscription,' some will say. So it is for Canadian defence of her own shores. The only conscription that I am thinking of or discussed was for service overseas. Everyone should be for conscription for home defence."

Cards Win 5 Straight Games Since Southwork Took Charge; Cincinnati Back in First Place

Clyde Shown of Cards Pitches and Wins First Full Game Since 1938

BEES WIN TWO

Paul Dean Continues Winning Ways by Defeating Chicago Cubs 2-1

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals may not be going anywhere, but they're unquestionably going there fast.

Since Billy Southworth ascended to the managership last week the club has won five games and has not been beaten. But the Cards were in such desperate circumstances to begin with that this spectacular streak hasn't been good enough to get them out of the National League cellar. Tonight Chicago Cubs are five games ahead of them.

The Red Birds caused a lot of commotion yesterday by blocking-in Brooklyn Dodgers 3-1 and sweeping Cincinnati Reds to regain first place.

All of the Cardinal runs against Brooklyn were unearned, because of four Dodger errors committed by Leslie his first start of the season and went the complete route for the first time since 1938, holding Brooklyn to four hits.

The Reds swiped a 6-3 triumph at Philadelphia to take the 2-game jump over the Dodgers. Whitey Moore relieved John Vander Meer with two on and none out in the second inning and gave up only two hits in eight innings of scoreless hurling.

He had the help of a nine-hit assault on Boom Boom Beck, including a three-run homer by Eddie Joost.

New York Giants got back on the winning track and moved within a game of second place, when Paul Dean continued his mastery over Chicago Cubs by a 2-1 score. The durable Dean permitted only eight hits in the fifth ball game of the season. One of these was a homer by Billy Jurges.

Boston Bees, who couldn't get any sort of pitching worthy of the name in the latter part of the season, benefited from two six-hit performances by Jim Posedel and Al Piechota in sweeping a doubleheader from Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 and 8-1.

The American League was idle.

The Yanks have got to step on it, at that. Some of the dopesters have figured it out they'll have to win seven of every 10 remaining games to take the pennant for the fifth time in a row..... SHELL 'OILERS' IN THREE-WAY TIE FOR FIRST PLACE

Defeat Uptown Juniors 7-2 With Eddie Schrieber on the Mound

FINE FIELDING

Oilers to Play Exhibition Game With R.C.A.F. Squad Leaders of Trenton Loop

Defeating the Uptown Juniors for the second time over the week end the Shell "Oilers" moved into a three-way tie with the juniors and Cementmen for the league leadership of the City Softball League after beating the "kids" 7-3 at the Flats last night, having won 4-1 last Friday.

Eddie Schrieber hurled for the Oilers and was credit with pitching a nine inning aa he scattered seven hits in a masterful manner. Steve Hook hurled for the Uptowns and until the seventh inning had allowed but one scratch hit, although the Bawden-led Oilers had scored two runs in the first and one in the second without registering the least resemblance of a hit. Two hits and two errors gave the Oilers three runs in the eighth and clinched the game and a share in the league leadership. Some fine fielding sensations were provided by Bawden, Mansfield, Yarrow, Henn Sero and Ann.

Schrieber struck out eleven, retiring the side via the strikeout route in the first second and fourth. He walked three, Stook whiffed seven batters, Bawden, Henn, Hinds and Schrieber had two hits each while Yarrow, Ann and Mansfield the only junior batsman to count over one binger. Uptowns were fattened for seven junior hits superbly. Rosaky with a double, had the only extra base hit of the game. On Wednesday night Corbyn Oilers will play host to Trenton on Thursday night at the Flats the Shell Oilers will play the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", leaders in the Trenton League in an exhibition game.

GODOY MAY 'BLOW' $25,000 FORFEIT IF HE WINS TITLE

Likely to Take it Back to Argentine Instead of Meeting Louis Again

FIGHT THURSDAY

Godoy's Manager Signs for Return Bout If Godoy Wins

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 18—(AP)—The Al Weill wink is considerably more expressive than the far-famed Weill wassit, although not quite as large.

He gives that eyelid a click as hearty it can be heard as well as seen. He did it today when someone asked him about the possibility that Arturo Godoy would export the heavyweight championship to South America and defend it from there—provided he takes the title from Joe Louis in Yankee stadium Thursday night.

The situation offers the most interesting possibilities. Of course, first off the Chilean croucher would have to whip Louis—a job he didn't accomplish last February and doesn't figure to come any closer to doing it this time, if you believe those 1-to-4 odds on the bomber.

Let's suppose he does. In that event, there's a strong possibility Italiano's newest trinket will be put on the line outside of the United States for the first time since Primo Carnera turned back the mild bid of Paulino Uzcudun in Rome seven years back.

Would Blow Forfeit

The suggestion in the wink was that, instead of tangling with Louis again next June 18th, a bout he has already signed to do, Godoy would be willing to "blow" the $25,000 forfeit, ship to South America on the next boat and defend the crown in Argentina against the fellows as say, 'Alberto Lovell or maybe Max Baer or Tommy Farr.

Weill's "John Hancock" is on a contract which, if returned, will bind fellows as say, 'Alberto Lovell or maybe Max Baer or Tommy Farr.

Weill's "John Hancock" is on a contract which, if returned, will bind Godoy's purse to Thursday's bout to insure the return. The gate figures to reach a new high more than the $150,000 Thursday, so there's the pleasant possibility Arturo (7 1-2 per cent end won't be enough over the "25 G's" to buy a new pair of dancing pumps.

The return match agreement also stipulates Godoy would defend the crown for a guarantee of 35 per cent. of the gate. Now, ordinarily the titleholder gets 27 1-2 per cent. or more.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Collins

"Don't get discouraged, keep up the good work and eventually your sitting will see the advantage of juvenile sport sponsorship, never fear," were the encouraging words passed along to us by Fred Collins, former manager of the Bell Telephone senior ball club and now a resident of Trenton. Fred dropped in on us recently to pay a visit after 12 months in the Christie Street military hospital in Toronto. Accident Fred nearly cashed in his chips during his long convalescence was his almost. "My faith in humanity increased a thousand-fold, while I was in hospital. The fine treatment I received, the many friends I made and the interest others took in the boys at Christie Street convinced me that life is really worth living and there are some really swell people in Canada after all," openly admitted Fred as he related to us many kind deeds and favours that were extended him by his fellows. "Fellow, take it from me, it's swell to be alive and there are a lot of swell people in this country," repeated Fred.

Fred Collins visited us to ascertain what is wrong with sports among the town aged of Belleville," I see you have no baseball in Belleville not even a junior team and I think that's a disgrace to the community," said Fred, who did not know the only junior sporting attraction in the city was Red Townsend's junior softball team. However, we might add the K-i-y groups are doing a good job in their softball set-up, but actually there is no civic sporting group such as exists in baseball, as in the other cities.

"Show me a city where sport is neglected and I'll show you a breeding ground for juvenile delinquency. We should not be in Belleville there are young underprivileged teen-aged boys who never had a chance of even a finger mitt in their lives. Would be the very opportune time to provide these boys with sporting equipment, baseball outfits, recreation and games for them to build muscle and character, not to set up juvenile courts," asked Fred.

There is no doubt as to the logic of Mr. Collins' statements, as it is a recognized fact that organized sports supervised by adult aged boys in a small community is the safest guarantee against juvenile delinquency yet devised by the mind of man. "If you have boys playing at good baseball during summer months, or any time as a matter of fact, their young growing minds do not have time to drift along the channels of juvenile delinquency or crime. The organizing of sports here in Belleville in the past and you wouldn't have had that scaled phantom burglar, which turned out to be four teen aged boys none of whom had the opportunity of playing organized city sports," added Fred Collins in an effort to bring before us a concrete example of what he was trying to bring before us. We appreciated Fred's visit and are glad to see him out of hospital and successfully recuperating. Any man who can undergo the ser-ous illness Fred Collins suffered and come back to ring words of praise for his fellowmen, has a message for all who will listen.

Do you remember when Sydney Townsend's invasion of United States tracks ended on a sour note in Princeton, N.J., a year ago today when the little Briton was accidentally bumped during an invitation mile run, and finished last in a slow field of five. The diminutive Sydney thought all the way until Blaine Rideout of Texas clipped him on the last turn.

Three important games are scheduled in the girls' softball loop this week, now that the teams have settled away and completed over one-third of their schedule. The Flyers can move into sole possession of first place with a win tonight, but that game should be short-lived as no doubt the Corbys, operating under defeat of last Friday, will take it out on the Vikings Thursday. Meanwhile the real game comes up Friday, when the K-Nines tangle with the K-2 squad. Those two teams are now tied with Corbins and under the Flyers and Vikings on top. However, there have been several upsets in the girls' loop and the week's schedule will see more surprising results.

Twice over the week end the Shell "Oilers" took the measure of Red Townsend's Juniors. Last night with Eddie Schrieber scattering seven junior singles in a fine pitching effort, Harold Bawden's charges finally scored Steve Hook's slants and won a game for Eddie. While Hook did not give on the home run Anne Cementmen took Picton into camp to the tune of 5-1. Ping-Luffman having little trouble in keeping the Dominion's bats on their home diamond. Today we find the Juniors, Oilers and Cementmen all tied for the league leadership at three wins and two losses each, the kids having dropped their last two starts. Incidentally up until the seventh inning last night Steve Olivo had counted just one scratch hit off Hook, although they had scored three runs in the opening canto that time. Both Schrieber and Hook pitched good ball and the scores since the juniors are getting while playing against the local intermediate clubs should prove valuable to them later in the season when they launch into the junior O.A.S.A. playdowns. However, there were injustices, regular first baseman for the K-Nines hurled for her mates in the fifth proved sufficient for the "lubricants" to win.

JERSEY GIANTS IN GOOD POSITION DUE TO RESERVES

Pennant - Winning Clubs Must Have Good Replacements for Every Position

SPLIT TWIN BILL

Gain Half-Game on Rochester, Who Were Defeated by Syracuse Chiefs

(By the Associated Press)

Although a ball team can have only nine men in action at a time, there's a definite reason why clubs carry squads of more than 20 players, and it isn't just to give deserving boys jobs.

There's a need of reserves for every position. A pennant-winning club isn't always the club which has regulars but the one with the best players sitting on the bench.

All this is borne out in the Jersey City's position in the International League. Last year, 1939 pennant champions, are running second in a close race with Rochester Red Wings. They are in a strong position to bid for the pennant because of their reserves. They last ale reliable pitcher, Manny Salvo, in a flurry of trades and trading last autumn but had no trouble finding a replacement. In addition they have a couple of good reserves for other positions, outfielder Herschel Bennett and second Del Young, both purchased from the Phillies.

Taking Salvo's place as a starting pitcher was 20-year-old Hugh Casey who came up this season from the Evangeline League. He made his first start last night in the opening game of a double-header with Syracuse and responded with a 6-1 win in a six-hit job.

Two veterans, Alejandro Carrasquel and Bobby Porter, fought it out on the hill in the second encounter, Carrasquel, the pride of their Venezuelan curver any too good support and was shelled to the as a result they gained only a half game on Rochester's league leaders who took an 11-1 drubbing from Syracuse Chiefs. Jersey City still is two games behind.

While Pop Dambert limited Rochester to six hits, Syracuse teed off on Gene Lillard and belabored him for seven hits and six runs in the first two innings. They made eight more hits off John Grodzicki.

Canadians Give Rations to Refugees Trudging on Roads

Somewhere in England, June 18 —(CP)—Men and women of the Canadian Active Service Force, gave a display of Canada's open-hearted generosity as they were moved by the sight of refugees trudging along French roads.

The men handed their iron rations to women and children and many of whom were walking barefoot.

One woman was taken aboard the ship which carried the returning Canadians. She is Grace Clark, teacher of English at a school in northwestern France and believed to be the last Englishwoman to get away.

Hearing rumors France was about to ask for peace she went to the port from which the soldiers were being evacuated and was allowed aboard.

From Hero to Has-Been Story of Dizzy Dean

Hero of all baseball for his world series pitching in 1934, Dean finds time to pose for a picture with the late Will Rogers, fellow Oklahoman.

Guest of honor—only one of many Dizzy Dean has been.

New York, June 18 — So the great One" passes.

Jerome Hanna (Dizzy) Dean, one of the most unusual, likeable, disorganized and egotistical of baseball players in history has made his exit from the majors, perhaps never to come back.

Dean, the hero of the St. Louis Cardinals, Dean, the "bum" of the Chicago Cubs, Dean, the man who boasted, stunned the umpires, challenged his own teammates, laughed at disciplinary fines, is one of the greatest righthanders of all time. This Dean—he's been waived out of the majors.

Baseball fans everywhere knew it had to come. The man with the $185,000 arm which failed to function is believed to have tossed his last for the Chicago Cubs, with which club he would up his major league career.

Great in 1934

Baseball is going to miss "The Great One." Dean's don't come along every day. And pitchers like Dizz are scarce.

Dean tossed his way right out of the cow country of Oklahoma and Texas into the majors. At once he was a sensation, front page news and the hero of all baseball followers.

He reached his greatest heights in 1934, when he pitched the St. Louis Cardinals into first place and the pennant in the closing days of the season, and then knocked off two games in the world series. Dean won 30 ball games against seven defeats that season.

He commanded big salaries for his pitching feats and his crowd appeal. He received $20,000 last year and won only six games. In 1940 Dizzy will get $10,000, even though he was considered a has-been at the time of signing.

Dean received his nickname in trouble, 1932. His allegedly made derogatory remarks about National League umpires' "fodderitis" suspended.

From a coach of the Chicago White Sox, Dean went on to pitch out several White Sox batters during spring training with Houston, in 1933, kept hitting his players "that kid makes you look dizzy."

Develops Sore Arm

Born at Lucas, Ark., (by one record book), and at Holdenville, Okla. (by another), Dean broke into baseball with St. Joseph of the Western league in 1930. He won 17 games and went to Houston. After 14 games with Houston, the St. Louis Cards gave him a try. But he needed seasoning, so he returned to Houston, and there won 26 games to lead the loop.

The end of the trail. Dizzy's career ends with the Chicago Cubs. Here he walked off the mound for the last time?

In his first season with the Cards Dean won 18 games. He followed with 20 the next year, then 30, 28, 24 and 12. With Chicago Dean won seven in 1938 and six last year.

Dizzy's career and the $185,000 beauty never could make it up. He has pitched occasionally in brilliant fashion, but of late he has been knocked out of the box in the first inning.

Dean now will go to Tulsa of the Texas league. There he will attempt to pitch more often. If successful, perhaps "The Great One" will be back.

Tripping merrily through the role in "Gone With the Wind" Miss Leigh proves an object of real greatness in "21 Days Together" to make it the finest of her screen films and one of the most beautiful love adiries ever filmed, while Laurence Olivier, "Heathcliff" romantic star of "Rebecca" and "Wuthering Heights," surpasses his previous performances, superb as they have been in these latest presentations, an amusing cartoon, Andy Clyde in "All American Blondes' and a new Technicolor travelogue "Beautiful Switzerland" precede the presentation of this big 2-feature bill and round out a program that is second to none so far presented at the McCarthy Theatre.

Netherlands Press Controlled

Amsterdam (German - occupied Netherlands), June 18 — (AP) — A press chamber similar to that in Germany has been established in Holland with administrative powers over the Netherlands press.

The chamber, composed of six members, will be operated along racial lines tin Voelkischen Sinne), meaning that it is empowered to enforce exclusion of Jewish newspaper workers.

Playing the role of Wallace Ford as a boy in the new drama "Back Door to Heaven," now at the Capitol Theatre is Jimmy Lenden. The talented cast also includes Stuart Erwin, Patricia Ellis and Aline MacMahan. On the same program "The Women Men Marry," with George Murphy and Joseph Hutch insen.

AT THE BELLE

"Waterloo Bridge"

One of the most memorable romances ever written for the stage, Robert E. Sherwood's "Waterloo Bridge" has been made into a timely and tender love story, starring Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor and in the role of the feature attraction at the Belle.

With its vital and exciting background of London and the war years, 1917 and 1940, the story is woven around a ballet dancer and an aristocratic young British officer, who meet during wartime, bringing their romance dramatically to a climax.

Miss Leigh is the most talked of actress on the screen today as the result of her Academy Award performance of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind." People have naturally asked, "After Scarlett O'Hara, what?" The answer is "Waterloo Bridge." Her role could be further apart than Scarlett and Myra in "Of Human Bondage," for when Miss Leigh plays in her new film. They have their greatest opportunities which reveal further the versatility of her talents.

In Roy Cronin, the young officer, Miss Leigh has a leading man of mature and dynamically virile characterization. Mr. Taylor is no longer an age translation from a man of twenty-five to forty-eight, giving him a new stature than in any role he has ever portrayed on the screen.

As the outstanding romantic hero of the year, Robert Taylor is under ably supported by such well known featured players as Virginia Field, Maria Ouspenskaya and C. Aubrey Smith.

Lydia Bilanof, Lydia Lee the screen "The Wizard of Oz," dis- many other thrilling roles to be screen by Sidney Franklin, who won renown with his direction of "The Good Earth," "The Barrets of Wimpole Street" and "The Thin Man."

"Home Movies," is the title of a Movietone Novelty Subject to be presented on the same program with the Belle News of the Hour.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Back Door to Heaven"

Movietone's powerful drama as human and convincing as life itself, who enjoy a story that's told with pace that is full of realism and poignant with the heart-interest touch, will enjoy seeing the new Paramount Picture, "Back Door to Heaven," which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre as part of the big double feature program.

Here, truly, is the answer to the question—can motion pictures have drifted away from human interest? Here is a story that might have happened to a man you know or to you, or to me, and shows how circumstance and environment never gave him a chance. Shows him growing into manhood, doing his best to be a valuable citizen, but when he tries to attempt through no real fault of his own, fighting against logical events rather than abstract flights of the creative mind, it is a story which is close to the heart of any moviegoer — for you, too, have a man like him in your town.

Selected to play the featured roles in this touchy theme picture is a large cast which includes Wallace Ford, Stuart Erwin, Patricia Ellis, Aline MacMahon and Bert Frohman. Wallace Ford is cast as Joey Mitchell, a boy who has definite pace and conviction to the role. He has youth and drive and can plan play the roles of a girl and school teacher respectively who strive to help him, while Stuart Erwin and Bert Frohman are seen in the parts of father and boss of school.

"The Women Men Marry"

An interesting and extremely unusual newspaper story is told in the new picture, "The Women Men Marry."

The story presents a star reporter assigned to track down a cult of false prophets. His managing editor takes advantage of his absence to win his wife. In the absence of his wife, suspecting the reporter sees his cameraman shot to death; he realizes that he has lost his wife and then, as might happen in life, he knows that he has found the girl reporter who has stood by.

George Murphy, former Broadway dancing star, who is an excellent reporter, Josephine Hutchinson is the girl reporter and Cliff Edwards, the "Ukulele Ike" of stage, screen and radio, is the cameraman. Claire Dodd portrays the reporter's unfaithful wife and Sidney Blackmer is commanding as the managing editor. Others in the cast whose work is outstanding are Cecil Cunningham, Ray Walker, Wray, Peggy Ryan, Helen Jerome Eddy and Fuzzy Knight.

A Stone-age Cartoon completes the bill.

INSTALMENT-15.

"Who's there?" Mamie called crossly from behind the locked door.

"It's me, mother! Star."

The door opened to reveal the fat, middle-aged woman in a cheap silk night-gown. Her feet were encased in bedless slippers and she had not waited to put on a dressing gown.

"What's the matter now?" she scolded. "Hungry again, I suppose." Then on the saintly note was used on Mamie!

"I'm not the one in trouble," she warned. "It's Joe."

An expression of horror came to Mamie's face. She seized Star's arm so tightly that it hurt.

"What's happened to him? Out with it. Where is he?"

"He's dead," Star said grimly.

"Dead?" Mamie repeated. "How do you know?"

"Some one forced his truck into a ditch and shot him. I was in another car and saw who it was."

"Who?" Mamie moaned.

"Who was the doing, mother?" Caution came in the last letter moment veiled Mamie's eyes.

"They didn't find anything, did they? Joe wouldn't. What did they say?"

"No one seemed to know. The truck was empty."

Mamie sighed, then she asked, "You didn't tell any one who he was?"

"No," Star said.

Tears streamed down Mamie's face as she cried, "Some one will pay for this! Joe had friends. . . . But that won't bring him back. What shall I do without him? How can I live?"

Star had been prepared for this.

"I'll do everything I can for you."

"I loved him," Mamie wept. "more than any one in the world. He had no mean to me sometimes but I loved him."

"No," Star said.

Tears streamed down Mamie's face as she cried, "Some one will pay for this! Joe had friends. . . . But that won't bring him back. What shall I do without him? How can I live?"

Star had been prepared for this.

"I'll do everything I can for you."

"I loved him," Mamie wept, "more than any one in the world. He had no mean to me sometimes but I loved him."

"No," Star said.

Black waves of despair swept over the girl as she heard what she had always suspected. How little she meant, how little she had ever meant to her mother compared to Joe. But this was no time for self-pity. Something must be done and the grief-stricken woman to go to bed while she made some coffee and brought it to her. Mamie protested but refused to touch the toast.

"I want a drink," she said calmly. "Will you get it for me or shall I get it myself."

"I'll bring it to you," Star promised.

Perhaps it was better that way. Star thought miserably. At least it would save the pain of that first shock although sooner or later Mamie would have to face it. She was glad it was dumpy so that she could stay with her mother.

She started the police to appear in investigating Joe's death but no one came to the apartment or telephoned until late in the afternoon. Then a furtive voice came over the phone, asking for Mrs. Delevan.

"She is asleep," Star said. "Who is calling?"

"Never mind that," the voice answered gruffly. "Just tell her that Joe Delevan is killed. I have the morgue under his other name."

His other name! Star's name! But before Star could ask this question the person at the other end of the line had hung up. Joe was carrying on his illicit activities, whatever they were, under another name? A name Mamie knew. The knowledge plunged the girl into new depths of shame. But there was too much to do to worry about it. The kitchen was filthy with unwashed dishes and unemptied garbage. The living-room was littered with weekold papers and cigarette ashes.

Removing her dress and donning an old apron Star set to work scrubbing and cleaning. She found a reason to her own overwrought emotions by bringing order into the chaos in which Mamie lived. It was after eight o'clock before she had finished. Her mother was lying on the bed provided with grief, but fitfully, a note giving Mamie here telephone number but omitting the address.

"You can call me here any time you sing," she said. "And here is five dollars, which is all I have with me. Don't worry, mother. I'll help you all I can."

On the way home she bought copies of the morning papers which were already on the street. There was no mention of Joe but in one corner of one paper she found a small account of the murder of a truck driver named Dick McCoy. This must have been his other name, then, but what his business or connections were Star was never able to learn.

Joe's secret died with him, and Mamie, who had given up everything in life worth having for him, kept faith to the end. He was undoubtedly the only human being she had ever really loved.

Yet even this, Star admitted wearily, did not release her from her own obligations. She would have to accept the responsibility of her mother's support, and how was she to do that on the salary she was now making?

When she reached her room she found a note under her door.

The note unsent Star's door was from Clifford Payne and Bruce Donovan, with whom she was driving when she witnessed the killing of Joe.

"What's happened to you? Is this a nice way to treat your fellow musketeers?"

Star smiled as she read it. She liked these two clean-cut boys, her fellow-boarders, and knew that she knew now that the joyous life they represented was not for her. She would never be as happy as Mamie Delevan lived.

Yet she was to find that fate seldom deals a blow without at the same time bestowing some consolation. The very day she received a promotion.

Sitting at her desk typing with less efficiency than usual when she was summoned to the office of the business manager. It had been several weeks since she had seen Miller, and she had unconsciously herself on conquering her silly infatuation but when she saw him sitting at the desk which held the photograph of his beautiful wife Star's unruly heart warned her that she was far from cured. He was so quietly magnetic. His dark head was bent over some papers but when she entered he lifted his eyes and his smile was like the sun warming her whole being.

"Good morning," he said. "How would you like to be my secretary?"

Her pale face flushed as she asked. "Temporarily, you mean?"

"No. Permanently. Miss Hale is married, you know, and it seems she is forced to renounce her business career in favor of raising a family. Very sensible of Miss Hale but most unfortunate for me. I've learned to depend on her too much."

"Are you going to let me take her place? Do you think I can?"

Milton Wood replied, "I'm sure of it although it may take some patience on both sides until we get used to each other. I'm very difficult at times."

Star didn't believe it, but even if he were—she told herself she could forgive him anything for the many privileges of working with him.

"When do I start?" she asked.

"Right now. The fact is Miss Hale is too ill to be working at all but she will come in later this afternoon to explain things to you. Okay?"

"Yes, of course!" Star replied, feeling important and excited.

"You will get a much better money as she does to begin with." her employer added. "But I will give you a five-dollar raise now and the full amount in six months if you can work."

She hadn't even thought that part of it. But wasn't he kind? Star's pleasure about her had ever known, Star thought gratefully.

What's she want to act like that for over a awful looking mutt like that, pop? I said, and pop said, It prolerly never occurred to her to have any children, and all ladies, whether they're sensible or not, have a certain amount of what is known as maternal instinct, and what you just witnessed is prooerly maternal instinct beat firing.

And we sat down on another benich at the other end of the square and there was another lady on it already, talking to a little girl, saying, Now darling, you've had 2 big pieces of peanuts today and that's all that's good for you, and the little girl saying, No it aint, no it aint.

And she started to kick the lady's foot and the lady said, Why sweetheart, is that NICE? and the little girl said, Yes And she kicked it 2 more kicks and the lady said, How dearry, be a good little girl and maybe you can have one more bag.

Let's go again, pop said.

WALL STREET

New York, June 18.—(AP)—Prices were on the upgrade in today's stock market despite persistence of war gloom.

Steels, Rails and Rubbers moved out in front at the start and picked up gains of fractions to around two points.

The principal bullish prop, brokers said, remained in the outlook for heavy defense spending and augmented demands by Britain for military supplies.

Stocks ahead the greater part of the day included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, N.Y. Central, Goodyear, United Aircraft, American Telephone, Western Union, Anaconda, Du Pont and Allied Chemical.

Canadian issues were firm. Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagram, up a fraction, and Lake Shore down 1-8 were the only listed stocks. In the Bond Market Canada 4s were up 1 3-4 points.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, June 18 —(CP)— Prices advanced on Toronto Exchange today. Only 67,000 shares changed hands. Uneasiness about the war was responsible for the absence of buying demand.

A few issues reflected the strong New York tone. International Nickel advanced more than two points to 23 3-8 and then dropped about half the gain. Smelters firmed 1 1-2 and Pend Oreilles, Steep Rock and Waite-Amulet advanced moderately. Gains were limited to a few cents in the Golds.

Senior Oils, Foods, Utilities and Building Stocks posted more gains than Rails, and the Steels were a bit heavy.

ADVANCE GUARD

Led by Maj. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, the division moved toward France a week ago today. For days and nights long columns of motor transports rumbled to the ports of embarkation. Escorted by British and French naval forces, the leading transports carried the first brigade some advance units, vehicles, ammunition and supplies, reaching port last Thursday night.

All of Them Loaded

Troopships crowded with more Canadians expecting to come to grips with the Germans rode at anchor in a southcoast harbor, while still other units streamed hourly into the assembly area.

Then suddenly came the news that the "show" had been called off. The men didn't know then why the change had been made, now they know.

Meanwhile the Canadian advance guard had moved on towards its zone of concentration in France, and had reached Sable, near Tours. They hadn't the faintest idea of how light the German ring was being drawn.

Their train glided quietly into the yards; in the early hours of Friday, No person was in sight, but French engineers accosted a few blasts of the locomotive whistle, but there was no response.

Told to Depart

Brig. A. A. Smith, of Winona, Ont., at the head of the 1st. Infantry Brigade, and Lt.-Col. R. W. Baldwin, M.C., of Toronto, head of the 48th Highlanders, started off to investigate. They met a man who identified himself as a British military transport officer. He told them that the Germans had broken through the French defences and that the situation at that very moment advancing on Sable.

"I'm not sure but of here as quickly as you can," he advised, and then vanished into the darkness.

The Canadian officers were dumbfounded. They tried to find their informant again, but failed. Inquiries elsewhere, however, convinced them that their plight was serious.

Orders were given to the train crew to prepare to return, but the crew declined to move without a word from the station-master, who could not be found. Furthermore, they said there wasn't enough steam in the boiler. And they added: "Besides, the war is over."

Engineer Won Over

Finally a firing crew was made up of soldiers and the engineer, upon being given a carton of cigarettes and a bottle of wine, agreed to take his place at the throttle.

When the train reached port, a different port to the one they started for, the Canadians found that sons of the British or French officials there had been expecting them. Leave was with the Canadians, however, for a fast cross-channel ferry was tied up at the dock.

Within 15 minutes the Canadians were aboard and on their way back to England, more than 2,000 men cramming into quarters normally accommodating only 800.

They received a welcoming roar of cheers upon their return to England, despite the fact they had seen no action.

50,000 FRENCH

These troops. It was believed here, might wage a last ditch fight if necessary to win a peace with honor.

The first 300,000 are fortress troops of the lower Alsace Maginot Line, most of them under command of General Besson, snatched from the jaws of the Nazi trap as it closed shut behind the big fortifications.

Story of Escape

This is how it happened:—

Sometime between the fall of Paris and the fall of Verdun the Maginot defenders were ordered to send out all available reserves, and at the same time two divisions of Alpine Chasseurs were rushed from the Italian front to reinforce the Verdun sector.

Before the Chasseurs reached the Verdun region, however, the Germans broke through on the Marne and sent an armored division to close the door behind Alsace-Lorraine and the Maginot zone. On Sunday they cut the Chasseurs force in two. Less than a division was left between the Germans and the Jur Mountains.

Stood for 36 Hours

Nevertheless, despite their small force and their weariness from several days' fighting they stood for 36 hours against the Germans, using several batteries of 75's and 101's which they found at the position they took on Little Fresse Mountain about 30 miles from the Swiss frontier.

Behind them the Maginot army of 300,000 men moved out of the trap in overloaded trucks.

Finally, last night after the last of General Besson's forces had passed through the gap, the Chasseurs broke.

Almost 1,000 of them stumbled toward the Swiss frontier, battle-weary, but only a few came into Switzerland to be disarmed. The remainder turned south to take up new positions for more fighting.

Abandoned for Need of Fuel

French refugees reaching Les Verrires said that Premier Petain may have had to ask for peace terms because of the situation behind the lines. They said that road, used by the rear guard were lined with trucks and motor cars abandoned for lack of fuel.

They reported that refugees were moving by tens of thousands southwest along the interior roads, delaying and sometimes hopelessly entangling military transports.

They said also that French officers were despondent over munitions lost when Paris fell and loss of gasoline dumps along the Seine.

Passage of the 50,000 indicates here that although German panzer divisions reached the Swiss frontier early this morning, the Alsace-Lorraine area is still far from being sealed off from the rest of the French forces.

Artillery Fire Ceases

It was considered impossible for the Germans in two days to have extended its motorized legions in the area from Verdun to Jura in more than a thin line.

Artillery fire just north of Basel ceased today, but the thunder of guns was still audible from the region around Neuf Brisach, where the Germans are maintaining a hotfige heads at the Rhine and the Rhine-Rhone Canal.

Huge clouds of smoke marked the passage of French troops in withdrawal. They were burning oil and gasoline reservoirs, dynamiting bridges and destroying munitions dumps behind them.

The main French army of the south, according to advices reaching here, is being reassembled at the junction of the Rhone and Saone Rivers.

HOUSE DESTROYED AT CAMPBELLFORD

Owners of Property, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Jenkins, Not at Home When Fire Started

Fire completely destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Jenkins of Seymour Township, six miles west of Campbellford Sunday afternoon. The family had left for church in the morning and were in Hastings when the fire broke out. They learned of the conflagration which had destroyed their home.

Two boys from a neighbouring farm, Earl and Frank Garnett, were first to notice the flames and were nearly caught in the blazing inferno in a vain attempt to remove the furniture. They were half a mile away when they noticed smoke arising from the back kitchen and by the time they reached the building there was nothing they could do but attempt to remove the furniture from the front part of the house. The boys managed to get considerable furniture out of the house and onto the front lawn before the flames had advanced so rapidly that when they were attempting to remove the piano, the ceiling of the room collapsed forcing the boys to beat a hasty retreat.

A defective chimney is believed to have caused the fire which caused damage amounting to $8,000.

Farmer Narrowly Escapes Death When Team Runs Away

West Lake (Special) — While working on his farm on Saturday, Mr. Roy Crawford narrowly escaped serious injury when he slipped off the front of the wagon frightening the horses which ran away, the loaded wagon passing over both legs below the knees. He was taken to Dr. McQueen, where he was rushed to Prince Edward County hospital for an Ex-ray. It was found that no bones were broken. Mr. Crawford owes his miraculous escape to the fact that the field was a sandy one and freshly ploughed. Had it been a hard clay his legs would no doubt have been crushed.

The horses, a valuable team lately purchased, overturned the wagon, breaking loose and stopped one on either side of a fence, none of having passed under the wire and were turned completely round in the harness. The team was not injured.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

CONFLICTING testimonies are found in the astrological map for this day. While the mental faculties are under excellent stimuli bright and keen as well as fortified by deep insight, shrewdness and sound judgment, yet there will be several adverse situations to cope with by bold initiative, quick decisions and a cleverness penetrating obscure, subtle or sinister circumstances. This intrigue or opposition may arise through elders.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year in which sagacity, quick and shrewd insight supported by reliable intuitions may be exercised to cope successfully with some hidden or sinister factors as well as down-right opposition from elders or superiors. All depends on the decisive use of finely stimulated forces.

A child born on this day, while having brilliant mentality, deep insight as well as intuitions and imagination, should be industrious, systematic and quick to grasp subtle or curious complications.

NO TENDERFEET THESE

When Australia raised the 6th division, it was composed entirely of volunteers. Many of these were among the men who answered the call to fight for the Motherland. All are veterans of the first world war, as the medal ribbons on their breasts signify. All are ready to go over there again, but the probability is that they will be kept in Australia for home defence.

Cumulus clouds are amazing! Devotees of gliding are students of clouds. They like cumulus (those big, billowy, white clouds) because they know beneath every cumulus there is a rising current of air on which they may float and sail like sea gulls. Although many cumulus clouds are short-lived, that is exist for only a few minutes, others have a life of several hours. They are formed on a warm day by thermal currents (air rising over a warm or hot ground) of much less often by warm, moist wind blowing up a slope. Of course, there are rising currents before cumulus clouds are actually seen, but there are no clouds at all if the moisture in the rising currents is low.

May Evacuate 200,000 Children Overseas is Report

London, June 19 (CP).—Morning newspapers reported that the government is considering a plan for evacuation overseas of 200,000 children between the ages of five and sixteen.

Expect Nazis Will Appeal For Food on Behalf Of Subjected Countries

London, June 18—(CP)—An authoritative statement amplified today Prime Minister Churchill's warning against coming attacks on the Nazi regime—"with half of Europe writhing and starving under his heel."

The statement declared enemies would come to European territory under Nazi acquisition because crop prospects are bad in Germany.

Wherever Germany has occupied a country there has been a food shortage because all available supplies have been seized to feed the German war machine, the statement said.

This is not expected in Allied official circles that there will be any alarming food crisis in Germany this year, but a severe winter and poor harvest prospects have brought a breakdown very nearer than at first was thought possible," the statement said.

The food situation is critical in Norway and Belgium.

Official circles in London said it was expected that in a few months appeals would be made to North and South America on behalf of the populations in the subjected countries as "a part of the Nazi plan to procure food on humanitarian grounds and so utilize it for maintaining the war machine."

Widespread German Plot to Seize Uruguay Exposed by Report

Montevideo, June 19 (CP-Havas).—A widespread German plot against Uruguay was described in the first sections of a report by the congressional committee investigating Nazi activity, made public today.

The committee claimed to have proof of the existence of a large and powerful military, political and economic Nazi network.

The German legation was declared to be directly implicated. Evidence produced by the committee stated to prove that Otto Langmann, the German minister, had engaged in subversive activity.

The report charged that Uruguay has become the centre of the Nazi organizations throughout South America, excepting Brazil and Argentina.

The charges came officially to light today on publication of the proceedings of the first two secret sessions of Congress, which form the report of Julio Iturbide, secretary of the investigating committee.

Describing the role of the legation as shown in the documents amassed by the committee, Iturbide said: "One constantly finds that Minister Otto Langmann has engaged in the activity of Nazism in Uruguay contrary to our institutions."

The committee came to 31 separate conclusions from the facts its investigators had gathered. Among

2,000 STUMBLE ACROSS BORDER

French Soldiers, One General and Other Officers Surrender to Swiss and Then Fall Asleep on Grass

Le Locle, on the French-Swiss frontier, June 19 (AP).—Two thousand French soldiers, including a general, two colonels, four lieutenant colonels and 35 other officers of the aviation staff for the Dijon region stumbled wearily across Col Des Roches Ridge into neutral Switzerland today.

They surrendered to Swiss army border guards, and without a murmur many fell exhausted to sleep on the grass.

The steady flow of refugees continued across this part of the Jura frontier—the old and the young in the dispirited masses.

They said many of their number were killed or wounded in towns of the Doubs valley, southeast of Besancon, France, and that others met death when they were caught helplessly between the German and the French fighting forces.

One woman brought her dead child across the frontier in her arms. The child had been killed by a bomb fragment, she said.

Volunteer Civic Home Guard Proposal to be Placed Before Council

Plan is to Call for Volunteers Who Will be Willing to Give Their Services at Moment's Notice

TO PREVENT SABOTAGE

Plans for the organization of a Volunteer Civic Home Guard were formulated at a meeting held in the council chamber in the City Council by Mayor Ben Thompson this week following a special meeting of the Belleville Anti-Sabotage Committee held Tuesday.

Although all plans are as yet tentative, the purpose of the unit is a call for volunteers, who are willing to give their services at the moment's emergency when special guards may be needed at local strategic points at a moment's notice.

The organization of such a Home Guard was suggested by the local Anti-Sabotage Committee by Mayor Thompson, who received approval from the government, pertaining to the matter of organization. Once the unit has been established by the city council a registration can be begun and it was suggested by the Anti-Sabotage Committee that a call for men for military age might volunteer for such a proposed volunteer service.

Lieut.-Col. Ben Dafoe was named as a committee of one to interview Sergt.-Major Major Mc-Jack, a veteran of the last war, relative to having him assume the duties of instructing the proposed Volunteer Civic Home Guard. If ratified by the City Council Thursday night, Mayor Thompson will proceed to appoint a committee of three from the Provincial government and registration will commence immediately. Arm bands and shields will be provided the guards in order that they may be readily distinguished and military drill will be essentially confined to the teachings of the use of fire arms.

This Volunteer Civic Home Guard will not over-lap with the Federal Government's plan of home defence, nor with the present Veterans' Home Guard now in force, Thus Civic Home Guard is purely a volunteer organization and should be composed of men who can be called upon at a moment's notice to assist in the preservation of peace, guards might be needed in the event of an outbreak of "sabotage," explained Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, K.C., a member of the committee.

PLEA TO DISCARD SOMBERNESS IS MADE BY SPEAKER

P. C. MacLaurin, Past Lieutenant Governor of Rotary of Kiwanis International, Speaker on All Kiwanis Week Program

OLD MEMBERS ATTEND

An impassioned plea for all to discard the sombre attitude that has permeated the Dominion during the last fateful days of the battle of France and to work and look forward to the day when the British Empire will be bigger and better than ever was made by P. C. MacLaurin, past Lieutenant-Governor of the Kiwanis Club in speaking to his own club in this city on All Kiwanis Week program outlined by the Kiwanis executive. The program was in charge of Past President Cliff Baragar, Chairman of Kiwanis Week committee here and a number of the members of the club in former years were guests of the club and enthusiastically welcomed by the Committee Chairman.

Bill Anderson presided at the meeting during the first part of the proceedings, after which it was turned over to Cliff Baragar, who as chairman thanked the former members who had visited the local club during their membership and stated that in a large degree they to build the Kiwanis club in this district. Harry Bryant, a former president was also given a hearty thank-you and the members for the Kiwanis Club of Belleville Color Guard. Joe Imlah, another past president, introduced the officers of the club and each received a nice band, while Harold Seldon introduced the past presidents among whom were present: P. C. MacLaurin, Dr. Lloyd Thompson, Lee, Joe Imlah, A. B. Collins, Cliff Baragar, Frank Donnelly, Eddie Hall and Dr. R. A. Flynn.

Officers Named

A. B. Collins in charge of the papers for incorporation of the Kiwanis Club, the slate of officers be named for the proceedings to follow and Jack Keighan as Secretary. Chairman and Rose Silver secretary. The meeting adjourned for a short time to allow time the full incorporation proceedings and Secretary Keighan and Richardson was again sergeant-at-arms with Harold Seldon and Bert Hall. Dr. R. Riggs accompanied on the piano. The Brown Brothers Quartet of Glee singers Savings Stamps to the collection. A similar meeting to the one mentioned scheduled for next Monday night had been arranged but was postponed due to the war situation. It was felt it was no time for any meeting but that of war and all to go to work to help the British Empire. Mr. Keighan in a few remarks stressed the duty of democracy.

The speaker of the day was introduced by J. O. Herity and the thanks of the club for the address by Dr. Flynn. Dr. Flynn, Dickens, also a former member of the club, also a Kiwanian stated that in the past week the British Empire had been attacked on all sides. He pointed out: "People are sitting in their homes stunned with the news that comes every minutes over the radio," said the speaker. "There is no time for sombreness or gloom. All are despondent but how can we help by remaining despondent and gloomy? Well I would suggest that all of us roll up our sleeves and get to work at the job that is best fitted for us. We have done nothing to be sorry for, to be gloomy. We are the last nation to fight. We are the last to fall," the speaker stated that Canada was the best country in the world and the best country in the British Empire. "It is composed of stalwart men, and of loyal British subjects," continued the speaker, "Britain is ready to meet and will be successfully thrown down by Germany and Italy and it is not at all impossible that Canada and will fight. If the hands of the British Empire are the centre of the British Empire's power. Hope and confidence in our country will perform the high honor that has been bestowed upon it."

Canada Has Good Neighbors

Mr. MacLaurin stated that Canada has many good neighbors and with their help we will win. There is no hope and no time for sadness or gloom. We are the last nation to fight. We are the last to fall. I think it would be a good time to have the secretary write to the secretaries of club and invite them to come back for the duration and to attend the meetings in that capacity. The speaker also thought it would be a good idea to have the picture of the President of International hung in the club room that the members would know their leader. He described the scenes that were displayed at the Kiwanis polls, where the Kiwanis International-wide election was held and he reviewed the address given by the president, Bernard Richardson. The speaker stated that the Kiwanis International was established on the second 23 years of service with three objectives: Friendship, Humanitarianism and Philanthropic ideals. The speaker declared that the president's address to the International was for the "human being" and that during the past 25 years of service the Kiwanis International had undertaken 100,000 different activities and that one million boys and girls had been touched by these activities.

The speaker stated that the convention with its organization at Cleveland would discuss finance and fellowship and citizenship respectability and the price of liberty. He stated the president said there were three types of life—the past, plan for the future and act in the present—and he hoped that all would go out from the meeting convinced there was something to fight and live for and that there was a job to be done and realize that Kiwanians can play an important part in that work.

Q. A. S. PRESENTS FINE PROGRAM SCHOOL MUSIC

Duets, Solos, Choir and Chorus Numbers Comprise Program at Annual Musical Festival

Youthful voices lifted in song brought pleasure to the parents, friends and school mates of classes in Queen Alexandra School Tuesday afternoon on the occasion of the annual musical festival arranged under the direction of Miss Phyllis May, supervisor of music in the Belleville public schools. The several items rendered by groups showed the commendable progress that is being made in the various classes and the enthusiasm displayed by the pupils brought out the best efforts of the teachers of the school. The many fine voices of individual pupils were brought to the attention of the audience while the chorus numbers showed the wide scope of musical training, all part of the school curriculum.

The visitors were extended a cordial welcome to the school by the principal, W. G. Anderson, who introduced the supervisor, Miss Mae May, who was the accompanist for the afternoon. The program included duets, trios, solos, choir and chorus numbers, each grade contributing to the interesting event. Following the program on behalf of the careful planning received in the preparation of the school year. The stage was beautifully decorated with clusters of Union Jacks and the only flags on the hangings, while masses of peonies added their lustre to the scene.

The visitors included Mr. Reg. Moncrieff, chairman, and Mr. H. Moncrieff who gave a brief address when he offered high praise and congratulations to the instructors of the children for the excellence of the afternoon's programme. It was a pleasure to know that Miss May was doing such splendid work and that the Board was more than justified in selecting her as supervisor of music. Speaking as a father of those children had been pupils of Queen Alexandra School, Mr. Moncrieff paid a sincere tribute to the work of the staff of this educational institution. Too often the work of the teacher is taken for granted and parents do not pay enough attention to the patient efforts, the understanding and the sacrifice that make up the teaching day. He thanked the principal and staff for their work in the training and education of his children.

Following a brief recess the programme continued with demonstrations by the senior classes. Adding a note of variety to the occasion was the folk dance by intermediate music appreciation classes which received much applause from the audience.

The afternoon's program follows:

1. Mixed chorus, "Maple and Mistletoe"—"There Came To My Window", "Dancing In The Moonlight Orchard".

WITH THE EMPIRE AROUND US

"We shall defend our Island home and with the British Empire around us we will fight on unconquerable until the curse of Hitler is lifted from the brows of men. We are sure that in the end all will come right."

These are the words of Winston Churchill, Prime Minister of Great Britain. They express the confidence of the people of the Motherland and the Empire in the ultimate result without minimizing the cost.

These words mean a struggle carried on with every ounce of human and material energy of a people who have been the great colonizers of the world, a people who have produced a system of democracy which develops colonies and Dominions to the status of freedom.

Hitler knows only the iron band, and the lash to whip his so-called "empire" together. His breathes and breeds wherever the stain of nazi Germany is laid. She cannot be an empire for she has nothing to give.

British Isles have given everything to their Empire and with their stands as their great ally in danger's hour. Not by bayonets such as the Nazis use to hold in subjection Czech and Pole, but by the principle of fairness, British has attracted all her colonies with herself as the centre. That "island home" is to the world a sun in the empire the centre of gravity of the world's civilization. In the deep darkness are Hitler's enslaved states, the nations overrun as well as the German Reich or Empire, itself the most enslaved of all, so enslaved that the people think the very evil Nazism, Prejudice and tyranny is really good. The captives of Germany know it as a curse.

The word praises the British Empire, but the German government is an execration on the lips of millions in Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium and the now prostrate portion of France. "Curses loud and deep" must have been expressed for Italy of Germany's late partner in crime, the fascist state which tries to make itself indispensable to Germany. But these latecomers have been given a taste of fire in the Mediterranean which they have been rather badly mauled by R.A.F. planes.

"The world is with us," Britishers may well say. The spirit of right is on our side. Every soldier who fights for British principles, every sailor who labors at his utmost for the cause, every citizen or soldier of Allied states who has done his part, and who prays for democracy's victory and every woman or child, is more truly a crusader than those who went to the Holy Land to fight against the Saracen.

In this testing hour great will be the glory of those who, enlisted in a righteous cause, struggle on to victory until the foul clouds of fascism are dispelled and the air is pure again.

"We shall fight on unconquerable."

BRITAIN BRACED FOR CONTINUANCE OF WAR

Britain is braced for the ordeal when the enemy attempts to invade, Prime Minister Churchill has declared.

"Let us so brace ourselves to our duty and so bear ourselves that if the British Empire lasts one thousand years, men will say, 'This was their finest hour.'"

Those are the words which challenge the people of the tight isle of Britain as her soldiers and her sailors, her airmen and her home defence stand on guard for her.

In ringing words Mr. Churchill declared, "Hitler knows that he will have to break us on this island or lose the war. If we can stand up to him all Europe may be free and the life of the world may move forward into a broad sunlit upland." On the other hand if Britain failed, a new dark age would like a yawning gulf engulf mankind. Civilization made more sinister and perhaps more prolonged by the lights of perverted science."

The Prime Minister told how today Britain was better able to repel sea invasion than before.

He declared that Britain looked to the future the four-to-one casualty rate on German fliers in Flanders if they attempt to invade Britain.

As he stated he gave the members of the House of Commons "some indication of the practical grounds on which we are basing our invincible resolve to prevail in the war." He spoke of "good and reasonable hopes of winning the war."

CHURCHILL'S COMMAND OF WORDS AND THOUGHTS

Mr. Churchill can use the English idiom to perfection. In his great brief address over the radio on March 30, he used a couple of phrases which will go down in history. One was "fight on unconquerable" which expresses the spirit of Britain and the moral support of the countries devastated by Hitler's invasions.

The other was the phrase which tells the cause of all this strife an orderly world has been forced to face in Hitlerism. His words were "until the curse of Hitler is lifted from the brows of men." These are words which should make the Fuehrer curl with rage.

TRIBUTE

Buxom or slender
And tiny or tall
I must surrender
And yield to your thrall,
Girls of the city—
Each bright as a star
I bad forgotten
How pretty you are.

Maids of Manhattan!
No others reveal
Quite such a satin
And silken appeal,
Charm that conceives
My heart from afar
I had forgotten
What Circles you are

Girls! I'm retreating
To pastoral sod;
Lord, what a beating
You've given my wad!
Will my pill ever
Recover to par?

THE SPASTIC OR IRRITABLE BOWEL

So much has been said of the dangers of constipation that many individuals are unhappy and feel that illness will overtake them if they have to miss a bowel movement every day. To correct this constipation, many take drastic purgatives which are the cause of nervousness of an irritable bowel, or spastic colon as it is called.

As a matter of fact, the nervousness, this worry about constipation and its effects, can be traced to the long continued use of cathartic or overuse of cathartics and irritants due to fermentation and decaying or putrefactive processes within the bowel, and to the great irritability of the nerves supplying the bowel due to nervousness, or emotional disturbance.

Dr. Ralph C. Brown, New York, in Medical Clinics of North America, states that these nervous or emotional individuals are oversensitive or over responsive to anxiety, fear, fatigue, and mental strain. There are two types (a) the one who is always in a state of emotional upsetment with weak, flabby muscles, narrow chest, undersized, "dropped" or low stomach and intestine, cold and clammy hands and feet, and very low blood pressure. The other type is made of individuals of average health who in fair circumstances who develop a spastic bowel only at times when things are going wrong with them.

Treatment of the spastic bowel is to relieve bowel is learning to acquire more calmness of spirit and the use of a soft diet.

STILL FIGHTING

Admiral Francois Jean Darlan, 58, gray-haired, clear-eyed supreme chief of the French navy, included in this cabinet, has at his command a navy practically unscathed by the war. In the event of France making terms with Germany, he is expected to turn his ships over to Great Britain.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Further Lessons From Europe

New York, June 19.—So there stands France to day—France, the intellect of Europe, France, the home of the sweetest and most famous of civilizations—her land smeared with blood, her homes empty of occupants, with the hideous cross flying over the City of Light.

People are responsible for this. So thinks the common man in France. The last gasp of a decadent leadership, the last gasp of fury is directed inward. Hatred now rises in the wounded and defeated hearts of Frenchmen to blame the fatal Third Republic.

The culprits, they think, are everywhere. The old capitalist grinds his teeth and remembers the French Jew. While the Germany was working her factories morning, noon and night, shift after shift, every worker calculated, every worker driven, 90 per cent of the total energies of the nation—energy units, not money units—was being spent. Money, every year, for arms, arms, arms, the French trade unionist hears demanding shorter days, slower work, higher pay, a "more abundant life." Where is the abundant life now? Where is any life?

Tomorrow it will be work for Germany, under the German rules.

The workers' eyes blaze with fury. Didn't they warn us? Didn't we warn all those people who had investments in Germany, who had factories and branches there? Weren't they kicking about taxes, trying to get more money from one hand and France with the other? Didn't they, the capitalists, that got us into this. They declared we were "neutral" in Spain—and Germany and Italy and the Germans have ganged up on us. They declared we were "neutral" when they made us break the Russian-French pact. They declared guns away—to the Germans to be used against us.

* * * * *

Our Allies let us down, they all scorned us, they didn't British-air-ish have more divisions? Why didn't they have more co-operation? How about a Government which, at last, could act in the last minute.

Wasn't that the British Government's fault about our politicians? Manoeuvring among themselves as to which would be the most popular, but would come out on top, right down to the last minute?

And so thousands of them begin to say: "Better Hitler than war," like the Nazis have proved that they are fit for survival. All we stand for, all our ideals and our thought was just words and catchwords.

Yes, this is happening in France, this bitter, exhausted outward, turns inward.

The lesson to be learned from this disaster is that defense begins within. That is where it must it begins with unity. But unity must be something more than shouting concrete. It cannot be created by emotional appeals to patriotism. People unite for a common purpose and for a common aim. They unite for defense, they unite for a common grab except a common grab is a common defense of property. A common grab within is a contradiction in terms.

A defense program must be for defense of a definite thing, and for this. Otherwise the guns we forge may be used one of these days for purposes we have not foreseen or dreamed. We speak of "defending the British Commonwealth," but defending what Western Hemisphere? Surely not the Commonwealth of Philosophy of politics, must be created, in order to have a unity around which one is defending.

As things are now in the Western Hemisphere, it will be as difficult to defend it as it was for France to defend the five separate states of Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Belgium, and anything really its North and South America together except the United States, a weak fortification on which to build fear. At present the South American States are afraid of losing their European markets, and therefore most of them will be scrambling to switch their line with whatever Herr Hitler wants.

The lesson of Europe is that a unity can be defeated, but not a disunity, a division that may at any moment dissolve by the mere change in a Premier. The Balkan States, the last quarter of a century, not by loans, which can at any moment be repudiated, but by foreign State, but by the most intricate web of economics in terms of real things, not money. As it turns out Hitler is getting all the money that the British and French lent their Allies. The Turks have it and still are the Allies of Great Britain. But their guns, even if paid for in English pounds, were purchased in the Skoda Works, formerly belonging to Czechoslovakia, and in German hands, and the ammunition for those guns had to be purchased in Germany.

* * * * *

Germany created the real interest in the Balkans. The Allies had only military political power and easily soluble financial dependencies.

Tomorrow, if we mean to defend Pan-America we must have a Pan-American unity that involves a very great and difficult program. The first step is that Pan-America must will create will be a European customs union, with a common tariff against it. It is going to be very difficult to compete with in this world. It will cut against our profit from that system with anything that will interfere with it.

Pan-America means a customs four elements of a common army and navy. It means a common economic policy toward the rest of the world. It means creating our economics complementary to each other, economics that make things are possible, and not only possible but profitable for the establishment in the Americas of a real "New World."

Such a program would mean being able to throw off our old habits of thought. It would certainly mean that we must industrialize the country to the south of us, that is industrialized at present. It would mean that we must help it of us to eat them. We certainly are not going to be able to eat them and throw them in the ocean. We would have to make plans for this.

We failed to make a system of collective political and economic security to protect the scheme of democracy in the world after the war. This column has consistently pointed out that it is now a thousand times easier to protect the Western Hemisphere by all holding together, than to adjust ourselves to what Hitler will do to Europe. But that is all waiting under bridges now, except for the fact that we can begin with the aid of whatever we can send to Britain, and whatever we can bring we have, because she is unconquered. But it is clear that the only force on earth that threatens us from the Atlantic is Hitler.

But one must also have forethought in order so to build security that she loses the war as definitely as Hitler has won it. We have to build Pan-America; it means vigorous new Pan-American politics with economics that will be proof against everything because they are really mutually beneficial and bound by ties that cannot be dissolved by a mere change in Ministries.

In union is strength. On this hemisphere we are now divided on this continent 190 years ago.

Sacred Islands Of Incas Offer Travel Romance

By TEMPLE MANNING

The glory of the Mayans, the Incas—these only names breathes mystery. To follow in the wake of these ancient peoples, what if it be centuries later, is to experience a thrill that is never quite equalled, a thrill that is the highlight of Central and South America's travel. Beauty, delight, mystery, enchantment . . . they all have their place in the journey through the Inca country.

The approach to the Inca country that is the most fascinating is the journey over Lake Titicaca, highest navigable water in the world. The lovely lake is 12,500 feet above sea level, and once stretched through Bolivia nearly to the Argentine border. But it is now, in fact, as a sicely blue, for it is fed by ice cold mountain streams.

Sacred Islands

It is the islands on the lake that offer the best introduction to the Incas. Two are held in greatest reverence by the Indians—the Islands of the Sun and Moon. From the former says the legend, came the first Inca or Ruler, while his wife came from the latter. Here the first Inca couple began a long line of Incas. The legend continues that the first Inca was given by the Sun a long rod of gold that he was to throw into the earth wherever he stopped on his travels. Where the rod sank into the ground without pressure, there was the site of the capital of his empire. The spot is Cuzco, where the reign of the Incas began.

The highest lake in the world.

"Johannes' Prophecy"

The following remarkable prophecy was made nearly 200 years ago by Johannes an illuminati scribe, who was well known throughout middle Europe for his wisdom and apt sayings. The records in many French and Swiss museums contain writings and letters by him, but among them all not one is so remarkable as the "prophecy." Close students of political history will see a wonderful picture, part of which has been fulfilled before our own eyes and part is nearing fulfilment.

"JOHANNES' PROPHECY"

(About 1800 A.D.)

Part of an extraordinary prophecy made by "Johannes" in 1800, quoted in a recent issue of "The Tablet" and copied from the paper Figaro" and copied from the paper The New York Evening Standard.

Key to the Prophecy:

France is represented by a Cock. England is represented by the Leopard. Russia is represented by the White Eagle. Germany is represented by the Black Eagle. Austria is represented by other Eagle. The Lamb always portrays Purity and Truth.

Toward the year 2000 the Antichrist will manifest himself and his army will surpass in numbers all that can be imagined. There will be Christians among his legions but they will be concealed as a race among the defenders of the Lamb. For the time being they will be on all red. There will not be a single spot in the Antichrist's army that will not be red, and red will be in the heavens, the earth, and even in the air, for blood will flow in the domains of the Antichrist at once.

The Black Eagle will throw himself on the Cock, and lose many of his feathers but will strike back heroically with his spurs, and will possess fortresses, armies or vessels.

The White Eagle by order of St. Michael, will rise in great force from Europe and will instal himself at Constantinople. Then will begin a series of peace and prosperity for the earth, and there will be no more war. The Cock will reign governed according to its desires and living according to the rules of the Lamb.

There will no longer be Lutherans or other sects. The Lamb will reign and the supreme happiness of Christianity will begin. Happy will be those, who, escaping the perils of that warfare, will be able to enjoy the fruit of the reign of the Spirit and of the purging of humanity which can not come after the defeat of the Antichrist.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Despite the continued obscurity of the French position Great Britain proposes to fight on. The British have reason to hope the capitulation of France will not be complete, that the British Army, the French fleet, or the French armies in Asia Minor and Africa.

The fate of those forces the moves that are now taking place between the new French government and the enemy may alter the course of the war but it can not end it.

So long as Britain is able to resist invasion and to keep a fleet on the seas and an air force in the air Hitler has not won the war. The inability of the British to launch a powerful offensive blow against the enemy on land may prolong the struggle indefinitely. The Germans, however, even as masters of the whole of Europe, will be unable to feed the Italians may not be in a position to stand a long war.

The extent of the conquered territory in itself is a source of weakness, particularly if the populations recorded should resort to passive resistance, should refuse to operate the factories, the mines and the farms in a manner conformable to the requirements of the enemy.

MEMBERS OF B.E.F. WITHDRAWN FROM FIELDS OF FRANCE

Taken to England to Prepare for Battle of Britain That Soon Must Come

NO ANTAGONISM

By DREW MIDDLETON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, June 17 (delayed) (AP)—All that is left of the British Expeditionary Force after 36 days that have shaken the world trampled stoldily through the cobblestoned streets of a French port today to ships waiting to carry them home to be ready for the "battle of Britain".

As they marched, French soldiers of a dozen regiments, sailors and nondescript civilians stood sullenly watching.

There were no cheers of "Vive Les Anglais", no smiling children to salute the Tommies with the British "thumbs-up" gesture.

With lightened speed, the news that the British were withdrawing and that the French army already cracking, was covering the withdrawal, spread through the city.

Then came the realization toward the British — only bitterness over France's painful predicament.

Confered With Reynaud.

Prime Minister Churchill and Gen. Sir John Dill, chief of the Imperial General Staff, conferred with the former French Premier, Paul Reynaud, at Tours Thursday night.

They hastened there after a series of warning messages from their commanders had outlined the hopelessness of the British situation unless the French could hold their own part of the line.

Speaking plainly, Mr. Churchill said Sir John told Reynaud that British troops were withdrawing "as long as the French fight".

Then, on Sunday, the long British trek to the sea began.

It was not a withdrawal similar to that from Dunkirk, however. The line was miles farther east, and troops and transports rolled through sections of Brittany where the British soldiers had been since 1918.

During the withdrawal the German Air Force was remarkably quiet.

In a six-hour drive toward the coast yesterday (Sunday) I saw only one German plane.

Part Not Bombed.

The evacuation port had not been bombed, although three big German seaplanes had flown over amid a hail of anti-aircraft fire.

The British troops took the withdrawal hard. Here and there some sang "Tipperary", but most faces reflected bewilderment.

"We stood them (the Germans) off every place we fought them," said a fusilier with a touch of irony and fantasy. "Then the French would gave way on one flank or the other and we'd have to fall back."

One British division, thinned by casualties, had its hold 10,000 yards (more than six miles) of line with less than 8,000 men against five German divisions totaling 15,000 in each.

The number of Britons withdrawn at this second reinforcement in a month was not large. The B.E.F. in France consisted of an infantry division, the remnants of a Scottish division, three of communications troops, various units of divisional artillery, and a general headquarters staff and its troops.

ENEMY MINE SUNK LINER NIAGARA

Prime Minister Peter Fraser Announcement in Australia Made Announcement in Parliament

Auckland, N.Z., June 19 (AP).—Prime Minister Peter Fraser told parliament today that an enemy mine had sunk the Canadian-Australian liner Niagara, which was down yesterday 30 miles off the New Zealand coast. This was the first official indication that German mines had been sown in Pacific waters.

As Mr. Fraser spoke, rescue ships and planes were aiding the 146 passengers and 160 members of the crew of the stricken liner. The Niagara, largest vessel who took to their boats following the explosion was also armed. Her guns were declared safe and proceeding here.

Mr. Fraser told parliament that minesweepers despatched to the scene early today had found only one mine, removing all doubt as to the cause of the sinking.

Survivors Safe.

(Last month the South African government said that an enemy mine field had been found off the Cape of Good Hope and that its rescue ship had picked up 45 of 61 men who official indication of how many ships may have been sunk by sow mines so far from their bases.)

The 13,415-ton Niagara had left Auckland at 4 p.m. Monday, only a few hours before the explosion. The vessel's master was Capt. Gordon Wilson.

The Niagara was the first Canadian merchantman lost in the Pacific since the beginning of the war. During the last war she was frequently hunted by Germany's sea raiders, but always outdistanced them.

Passengers included Rev. and Mrs. John Gibson Inkster of Toronto. Mr. Inkster is the minister of Knox Presbyterian Church at Toronto and on his way to Vancouver where he was scheduled to preach July 7.

COMMONWEALTH BEHIND BRITAIN IN WAR EFFORT

Canada and New Zealand Answer Call Quickly and Australia Starts Thursday

S. A. GIVES AID

(By The Canadian Press)

Prime Minister Churchill's declaration that Britain and the Empire will fight on undismayed at all evil victory found the Commonwealth's part well in implementing his once-ageous words, with war-strengthening legislation.

Canada and New Zealand in particular stepped up their war effort Tuesday and Australia is expected to do the same Thursday.

The Ottawa government announced it has put the mobilization of all of Canada's material and human resources for prosecution of the war under the immediate launching of national registration of manpower.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared that Britain's decision to fight on "has won the undying admiration of Canada."

The New Zealand government issued regulations making 500,000 men between the ages of 16 and 60 liable for war service, including service overseas, in the home forces or industrial national work.

Out Thursday the Australian parliament will meet in Extraordinary session and is expected to pass emergency laws conscripting wealth and labor, similar to those in force in Great Britain.

The New Zealand government appointed a war controller to help direct the country's war effort. The controller includes Prime Minister Fraser, the ministers of finance, defence, supply and national service, the foreign currency and economics, workers, farmers, Maoris and returned soldiers.

South Africa Redoubles Effort

At the same time the government assumed powers to take over control of any industry and any supplies and to requisition premises and plants. It also extended the finance regulations for acquisition of all gold coin and bullion, foreign currency and securities.

General Smuts said in a broadcast at Cape Town that South Africa would not hesitate to redouble her war effort by making the utmost demands upon her manpower.

"South Africa's danger is very great, as she is a valuable economic and political prize," he said. "So apart from human considerations, South Africa must stand by Britain to the last."

Viscount Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, said at Belfast that Northern Ireland is with Britain "to the end." He told the Commons that nothing would be left undone to secure the country against invasion and make it a safe base for the British forces and ourselves can make it."

In Australia, where all unmarried males and widowers without children are liable for military service in the Dominion, voluntary enlistments for overseas service continued to mount.

The Times of India, published at Bombay, called for a vast government industry as the answer to "this hour of trial."

"The Indian people in their own interest must cooperate in rigorous prosecution of the war, not merely in manpower but in production of armament," the paper said.

"With British and American technical help, factories must be set up in India to produce airplanes, tanks, guns and motorized war vehicles."

FORM HOME GUARD IN P. E. COUNTY

No Visitors to be Allowed in Canning Factories During the Summer

Picton, June 19—At the request of the Attorney-General for Ontario, Prince Edward County Council will proceed to form a home guard here. The matter was brought up at the session in the County Council, which met here yesterday, when Warden Ruttter of Wellington stated that such a guard had been organized at Wellington this week and that they had decided that no visitors were to be allowed in canning factories in that district this summer. In answering the letter Warden some considered such a guard would do little harm. Municipality, Warden Rutter pointed out that members of the guard as well as all citizens should be on the lookout for subversive activities. He further stated that no summer visitors in the county and that visitors they should be made welcome anything suspicious should be reported.

A heavy rain accompanied a severe electrical storm in this district Tuesday afternoon. Hydro power was disrupted for a short time. The rain is reported to have done some damage to hay and grain by flattening it.

Miss Ruth Minaker, who underwent a major operation at Kingston General hospital, is convalescing at her home, Spring street.

Mrs. C. H. Leavens received a cable this week that her husband, Dr. Leavens, who has been attached to the Office of Health for Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, while overseas, is returning to Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hodgson and Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Ross motored across the Ivy Lea Bridge to Watertown last week-end.

Miss Jessie Redmond of Port William is at her summer home, Bluffs Point, for the summer.

Mrs. Thomas Heffernan left Tuesday for Collingwood to be with her husband Capt. T. Heffernan where his ship is undergoing repairs.

Bernard Kingsley has as new cabin cruiser which was built by Allan Harrison at Bongards during the winter. It is a fine craft and well equipped. Many were present to see it when it made its first trip to Prince Edward Yacht Club dock this week.

Mrs. Gordon Orser left Monday for Toronto for the wedding of their niece, Clayton Metcalfe to Miss Eileen Parr which is taking place at Deer Park United Church. There will be a reception following at the Granite Club.

Mrs. Harold Lemley of Hanover arrived in town Monday for a visit here. He will be married on Thursday here to Miss Olga Ellsworth.

R. C. Sister, manager of the Dominion Bank, Belleville, is to address the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce here on "Foreign Exchange" at their meeting Wednesday evening.

Special services for intercession for Divine guidance and strength are being held twice daily in the church of St. Mary Magdalene here, in charge of the rector, Rev. A. B. Gregory.

The lawns of the local homes are especially lovely at this time. While the iris are past their best, the peonies make a wonderful sight and some gardens have several hundred clumps of them in all colors. With plenty of rain, the gardens are especially good this year.

Strawberries are being sold here at twenty cents a box and are a good crop.

Local people were thrilled to hear that Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment were in the advance party of the Canadian Overseas Division that went to France. Their anti-aircraft guns went into action against German planes and drove them off. The Toronto Highlanders were also in the group and the newspaper stories concerning that regiment also apply to Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. The mention of their local unit is made by the Toronto papers has aroused resentment here, and it is said that the local unit is second to none.

CHURCH OBSERVES ITS CENTENNIAL

100th Anniversary of St. Andrews Church, Burnbrae, Marked Over Weekend

Stirling, June 19 (Special).—Throughout Sunday and Monday over fifteen hundred people visited the historic St. Andrew's Church, Burnbrae, as the congregation marked the hundredth anniversary of the founding of the church. Descendants of the pioneer stock that helped to erect the first building came from all parts of the country for the special services on Sunday and the "social" and program which took place on Monday night which also enjoyed a record attendance.

Recognized as one of the finest rural church buildings in the Province of Ontario St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church has an auditorium with a seating capacity of over five hundred. On Sunday both services filled the church to capacity and in the morning many were turned away. Special music was a feature of the services and a full choir rendering two Splendid anthems at the morning service under the direction of Mrs. (Dr.) McDougall of Campbellford assisting in solo work. The guest minister at the morning was Rev. W. A. Cameron, D.D., secretary of the General Board of Missions, Presbyterian Church in Canada and both messages were high in calibre and the church particularly dealt with the day problems of Christian civilization.

Founded In 1836.

One of the oldest churches of the Kingston Presbytery, the first place for its formation began in 1836 when a group of pioneers met for the purpose of establishing a Presbyterian Church in Seymour. As a result of communications with the Church of Scotland Dr. Robert Neil, D.D. made a journey visit to Seymour in 1840 and accepted a call tendered him.

His ordination ceremony was a simple and sincere service conducted in a log church which is now known as the English line. The pastor's Sunday services in this log preaching his first sermon with the use of a packing box for a pulpit. Forty-five years of continuous service to the people of the charge was the enviable record established by the first minister of the Burnbrae Church. The first building was of frame structure which was later replaced with a large stone building. This was demolished over four hundred people. This building was destroyed by fire and the present structure erected forty-five years ago is still looked upon as one of the finest rural church buildings of Central Ontario. Ministers who have served faithfully and well during the one hundred years in the life of the church include the following: Rev. Robert Neil, Rev. Jacob Shaw, Rev. John Moore, Rev. J. K. Smith, Rev. C. C. Salisbury, Rev. J. J. Black, B.D., Rev. A. D. Mackenzie, Rev. J. A. McMillan and the present minister, Rev. M. E. R. Boodbreat, S.T.D. Social Function Follows Program.

On the Monday evening following the jubilee service a large crowd gathered for a lawn social and a friendly re-union on the lawn of the Manse with visitors present from many parts of the province. Later in the evening a fine program was presented in the church including—musical numbers and readings and addresses by the following speakers: Dr. Boodreau, Mr. Millne, Rev. Mr. Cameron, Rev. Mr. Walker, Belleville, Rev. J. J. Black, Rev. W. H. V. Walker, Stirling, Rev. Mr. Thom, Rev. Dr. Reddick, Campbellford, Rev. James K. Beckel, Stirling.

Musical numbers included solos by Mrs. (Dr.) McDougall, Mrs. W. H. V. Walker and Arthur Duncan, Miss Clara Thain, district president of P.Y.P.S. conveyed the greetings of the provincial governing body to the congregation.

It's Never Too Early

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph. D.

Crime usually begins at home. This I have been saying for years, in this column and from the platform.

Vivien Leigh, romantically thanked with Robert Taylor in Robert E. Sherwood's picture, "Waterloo Bridge," story of love, found in a London blackout, new at the Globe.

Now I am saying it more emphatically than ever. Why? Because of the recent disclosures of the Kefauver crime investigation. Crime is a social disease. It is a symptom of a sick society. Crime is a social disease. It is a symptom of a sick society. Crime is a social disease. It is a symptom of a sick society

Local Family Cables Relatives to Send Children to Belleville

Refugee children of Britain and her Allies will find a warm welcome in many homes in Belleville.

A survey of a cross-section of the residents reveals. Many people have expressed their willingness to take homeless children and other evacuees, and no doubt this important question will be mooted in city organizations in the immediate future.

Evidence of this was seen today when a prominent city family cabled relatives in England to send their children to Belleville immediately, where a welcome will come and a home far from war's alarms awaits them.

The village of Bloomfield, a few weeks ago, established a precedent when the village council wired Ottawa authorities their willingness to provide homes for a certain number of evacuee children, the cost to be borne by the community.

Kinmear expressed the appreciation of the members to Mrs. Bews for her thought-provoking words.

The business of the evening was concluded with the announcement that their next meeting would follow the theme "Health" with Miss Jeffery as speaker. The sum of twenty-five dollars was donated to the Red Cross.

Heavy rain accompanied the storms, but as far as could be ascertained, no particular damage was done to crops.

The storms, apparently, were confined to the southern parts of the district. Reeve J. L. Churcher, warden of Hastings County, in the city to attend a conference meeting, stated that Dungannon and sister township in the north escaped the brunt of the storm. Considerable rain fell but no electrical disturbances were noticed.

U. S. STUDIES NATIONAL SERVICE

Preparedness Program May Soon be Placed Before Congress

Washington, June 18—(AP) The question of compulsory national service for United States youth—now being studied by President Roosevelt—soon is to be put before Congress, where a mixed reception was indicated today.

The President himself has waived aside it during his press conference yesterday, saying that he might communicate with Congress on the subject within the next three or six weeks.

Senator Pat Byrnes (Dem-South Carolina), said he understood the War Department already had worked out plans for such a program.

Aspects of Preparedness Plan

Other aspects of the preparedness program which bid for attention on Capitol Hill were:

1. Informed sources predicted a substantial additional request for funds for the army.

2. Passage of the navy's surprise $4,000,000,000 3-ocean expansion bill was unanimously recommended to the House of Representatives by its naval committee.

3. A Senate committee took steps to provide money for the Civilian Motor Company on the mass production of airplane engines as a government order.

4. Legislation to empower the President to send Red Cross "mercy" ships into the war zone was temporarily shelved by Senator Rush Holt (Dem-West Virginia), who opposed the administration of stirring up hatred. He said the ships might give aid to "the enemy" which would send the country to war.

U. S. Opposed to Transfer

5. The House passed the Senate-approved resolution which put the United States on record as opposed to the transfer of the Danish possessions in the western hemisphere to any non-American power.

President Roosevelt, in outlining his compulsory service program, emphasized that it was still in the study stage.

It contemplated, he explained, eventual government service for all of the nation's young manhood and perhaps its young women—in proportion to the number of defense jobs.

He divided the types of service into four classifications. There would be those in the fighting forces, he said; those in the auxiliary uniformed services behind the lines; those engaged in the production of munitions and defense materials, and those whose task it would be to conserve the nation's resources.

Mr. Roosevelt mentioned a year as the length of training that might be required, and said that such a term of disciplined training would be good for the nation's young people, besides helping defence.

After Hoppy arranges for the gang to steal $15,000 in silver bullion from the mine, the narrative speeds to a thrilling, shootin' climax, but Cassidy has the last say and get. Woven into the action and excitement of romance involving Hopalong and lovely Bernadine Haley, Sidekick Russell Hayden and Jerry Sherman including "Stan o' the Woods."

The popular Belle newsreel and a clever Robert Benchley comedy "Home Movies" precede the feature.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE"

Columbia's consistent record of producing outstanding hits with advance reports of the studio's forthcoming production, "The Doctor Takes a Wife" are to be constantly heard when the picture opens next at the McCarthy Theatre with Loretta Young and James Stewart featured, following in the triumphant wake of such recent successful Columbia hits as "Bachelor Mother" and "Destry Rides Again." The new picture is a romantic comedy that doesn't like men, until she meets a man who likes her, and then she knows how to like men. Ray Milland plays the youthful expert in heart trouble who cannot even cure himself, is also the leading man in this enjoyable portrayal as the doctor who takes a wife.

Supporting the stars in this fun-packed comedy are Reginald Owen as the young author who prefers to write in bed because their mothers depend upon a boy for their well-known Hollywood personalities Rosalind Russell, Mary Boland, British comedian Gail Patrick, Alexander Hall, director of the picture.

Alexander Hall, director of such other hectic Columbia comedies as "There's That Woman Again," "Lady Fingers," Mrs. Wiggs" and "Good Girls Go to Paris," and "Virginia Theodore Woman" wielded the megaphone on the new production.

Charley Chase in his new laugh riot comedy "The Awful Goof" and a technicolored Disney cartoon treat "Mother Goose Goes Hollywood" complete the evening's daily of "The Doctor Takes a Wife."

Vivien Leigh

Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier in John Galsworthy's magnificent love story "21 Days Together" is the screen attraction at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to a splendid array of short subjects which include latest Pete Hayes Melody, Andy Clyde in "All American Blondes, an amusing comedy entitled "A Boy, A Gun and Birds" and a screen subject which is most interesting, entitled "Beautiful Switzerland."

AT THE BELLE

"Waterloo Bridge"

With Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor perfectly teamed in the screen version of "Waterloo Bridge" now on the Belle theatre screen is one of the "must see" films of the year.

Balancing a tender and beautiful love story against a powerfully dramatic war background, the picture has everything in the way of brilliant performances, an absorbing romance, spectacular settings, exciting action and interesting photography.

If Miss Leigh had not already displayed her versatile talent to the public's satisfaction in all in her Academy Award performance as Scarlett O'Hara, her fascinating portrayal of Myra Lester, the Riviera ballet dancer of the Robert E. Sherwood drama, would assure her lasting screen fame. She is completely believable and interesting in every mood of an exacting role.

A pleasant surprise is the work of Robert Taylor, a part that requires him to age from twenty-five to forty-sixty, and in which he is always convincing. He wears a mustache for characterization, which gives him both a new maturity and dignity.

The story has been made vitally timely with its opening scene in the wartime London of today with its blackouts and bombproof shelters and then flickers back to events in the first World War. The romantic theme is woven around the twenty-four hour, whirlwind courtship of the petite dancer and the dashing officer, who meet on historic Waterloo Bridge during an air raid.

Excellent supporting performances are contributed by Lucile Watson, Virginia Field, Maria Ouspenskaya and Lucile Watson. Lucile Watson as Mervyn Leroy is brought to the screen by Sidney Franklin, who is a favorite with fans with such pictures as "The Good Earth," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "Smilin' Thru."

The popular Belle newsreel and a clever Robert Benchley comedy "Home Movies" precede the feature.

Chicago Tribune Advocates Military Alliance Between Canada and United States

Chicago, June 19 —(CP)— The Chicago Tribune was revealed today as an advocate of a military alliance between Canada and the United States, partly on the grounds they are the only two countries in the Americas which have demonstrated they can fight modern warfare.

In an editorial today the Tribune said in part:

"The American people have long accepted the proposition that the United States will resist an invasion of Canada as quickly and vigorously as it would an attack on its own territory. The time has come to implement that policy by making a formal military alliance with Canada, for common defence of our countries. This should be done at once."

The editorial mentioned in Canada's present extensive war efforts and United States vital interests in the Carribbean and South America but said these independent interests are not conflicting and they are less important to either of us than the defence of our shores against invasion.

It said a defensive alliance should be followed immediately by conferences between the Canadian general staff and our own on the joint operation of our armed forces."

Leopold's Children Reported on Way To Portugal

Madrid, June 18—(AP) — The three children of King Leopold III of the Belgians reported today they had to have crossed the Spanish border on the route from France to Portugal.

King Leopold's children, Princess Josephine Charlotte, 15, Prince Baudouin, 10, and Prince Albert, 8, sought shelter in France after the German invasion of Belgium May 10.

There have been rumors that they might fly to the United States by clipper plane, which they could take from Lisbon.

DEER CARED FOR

Orangeville, Ont., June 19 (CP)— Attracted by a fawn in a nearby bush which resembled those of a baby, Constable Clifford investigated and discovered a mother deer attempting to transfer a diminutive baby deer to death. The little victim, now named "Corky," is receiving attention at the rear of the Credit estate where Mr. Clifford is farm superintendent.

"Corky had a front leg broken, and I guess that is why the doe mother wanted to do away with it," said Clifford.

Military Honors Accorded Victim Of Plane Crash

The muffled tones of a blackshrouded drum beat out the slow march of the Dead march at the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force on Wednesday when military honors were accorded Leading Aircraftsman-pilot Chester M. Woods, London, Ont., killed in an airplane crash on Monday.

While planes roared overhead in a last tribute to a gallant comrade, the simple funeral service of the R.C.A.F. was conducted in the base chapel by Flight Lieut. the Rev. J. D. Province, chaplain of the station, before a cross of sunflowers and trailing comrades of the dead pilot.

Following the service, the flag-draped casket, on which rested the dead airman's forage cap, was placed on the grass-covered bottom of an official car and escorted to the station entrance where last rites were performed.

Flight Lieut. Gordon Massey, adjutant, and the base chaplain preceded the cortege which was flanked by the pall-bearers, six sergeants of the station, who carried the supporting party of 46 commissioned pilots. These in turn were followed by a squadron of aircraftsmen and a platoon of the Midland Regiment Reserve Army. Then professional parade in charge of Flight-Lieut. W. Stevenson.

At the station gates, three volleys were fired over the casket, and a khaki-clad bugler sergeant sounded the "Last Post." Reveille followed, and the funeral party was formed in charge of Funeral Director George Hall. Pilots taken out of Trenton from which point it will be sent to the deceased pilot's home in London, Ont.

Pall-bearers were Flight-Sergeants Wilcox and Roberge, and Sergeants McVeigh, Shaw, Perkins and Edger.

Brain Concussion Suffered By Medwick When 'Beaned' In First Frame Against Cards

Recently Purchased Player by Dodgers Will be Out Three Weeks

WALTERS LOSES

Red Hurler Loses Fourth Straight Being Beaten by Phillies 3-1

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Joseph (Ducks) Medwick, the big batter and the leg man who was supposed to bring Brooklyn Dodgers a pennant, is lying in a hospital today and the question is whether he took the Dodgers' championship chance with him.

Medwick suffered a concussion of the brain yesterday when hit by one of Bob Bowman's pitches in the first inning of a game which St. Louis Cardinals ultimately won 7-6 in 11 innings. It's expected he will be out of the lineup about three weeks.

Loss of a player as valuable as Medwick is nothing less than heartbreaking to a club in the heat of a pennant race. It puts the Dodgers right back where they were before they spent that estimated $150,000 and four players for Medwick and pitcher Curt Davis a week ago today.

Walters Loses Fourth

Bucky Walters, who won nine games in a row at the start of the season, was beaten for the fourth time in a row last night as the Phillies pounced upon Cincinnati Reds 3-1. Bob Bragan, a recent shortstop, caused all the trouble by hitting two home runs, one of them with one on to win the game in the ninth inning.

At the same time the third place New York Giants were getting a 6-1 going over by Chicago Cubs in a starlight session at New York. Jake Moody, Chicago's little freshman righthander, held the Giants to six hits.

The six-game winning streak of Boston Red Sox finally was snapped at St. Louis in a modern pitchers' finish that starred John Berardino. He came to bat in the 10th inning with the score tied and the bases loaded—and hit a home run for the Browns' 11-7 triumph.

Lefty Al Smith obtained his seventh victory against one defeat as Cleveland Indians nosed out Washington Senators 2-1.

New York Yankees were set back for the third straight time as Chicago White Sox ended a six-game losing streak of their own, 6-3, behind the six-hit hurling of southpaw Ed Smith.

Louis Finely Drawn And Appears to be In Vicious Humor

New York, June 19—(AP) — Joe Louis is finely drawn and appears to be in a vicious humor for his second fight with Arturo Godoy, the durable Chilean, tomorrow night at Yankee stadium.

His fierce workout yesterday was furious and purposeful. It came as something of a shock to the crowd at Greenwood Lake to see the champion, usually a genial, harmless sparring partner, down and out with a sudden burst of punches.

O'Gatty, under instructions, had been crouching and rushing Louis like Godoy is expected to do, and for a time he had Joe temporarily slightly foolish. But then one of his headlong plunges went wrong, and Louis nailed him flush on the jaw.

This was the first time any one could remember having seen Louis smash an opponent to the canvas before a fight. It was taken as a sign that the champ has been brooding about his failure to stop Godoy in their first scrap and has sharpened his resentment to the edge for this one.

Asked what he intended doing to Godoy tomorrow night, Joe would only say: "I promise you he'll fight this time."

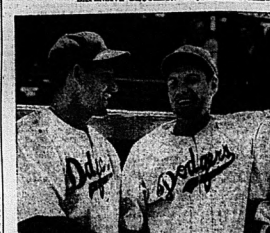
EXPENSIVE BROOKLYN ACQUISITIONS MEET NEW BOSS



Brooklyn Dodgers pulled the standout deal of the fiscal baseball season when they plunked down a bundle of 30's, said to add up to a quarter of a million dollars, to clear the persons of Joe "Duck Wucky" Medwick and Curt Davis from the clutches of the St. Louis Cardinals. Here are Medwick, LEFT, and Davis, RIGHT, sporting their new uniforms for the first time, exchanging greetings with Dodger Manager Leo Durocher before a game with Cincinnati Reds. In a National League game versus the St. Louis Cardinals, Joe Medwick was hit on the head with a pitched ball yesterday. He was removed to the Caledonia Hospital, where it was later announced that no fracture had resulted. Pitcher Bowman of the Cardinals was on the mound at the time.

Goshen, N.Y., June 19 — Out of competition for 18 months, Greyhound, world champion trotter, will stage a comeback this season when he faces another winner of the Hambletonian stake at Good Time Park here, scene of the 14th renewal of the $40,000 harness derby in August. Peter Astra, Hambletonian victor last year and four years younger than Greyhound, will battle the gray gelding on the first step of his comeback.

Although most champs necessarily wait until they are depoced before fighting back, Greyhound, owned by E. E. Baker, St. Charles, Ill., and driven by Sep Palin Indianapolis, is believed ready to take anything on four legs in competition.

To Race Aug. 13

His last defeat was at Goshen in 1936, when Tara thrashed the son of Guy Abbey so badly that his owner withdrew him from the final and deciding heat.

"Doc" H. M. Parshall, Urbana, O., trainer and driver of Peter Astra, owned by Dr. L. M. Gullinger, Andover, O., believes that his youth must be served and that Greyhound will be beaten. The two ex-Hambletonian winners have never met before and may never meet again.

Greyhound boasts the world record of 1.56 1-4, set against time, while Peter Astra earned a mark of 2.02 1-4 in a race last fall at Lexington, Ky.

The clash between the two crack trotters will kick off the annual grand circuit meeting at Goshen on Aug. 13. Two days later both horses, win, lose or draw, will have to content themselves with watching the current crop of three-year-olds fight it out in the Hambletonian stake to which they are no longer eligible. Kuno, owned by Dunbar W. Bostwick, Old Westbury, L.I., is now favored at 4 to 1.

Beaten Only Once

Greyhound, beaten only once since the Hambletonian of 1935, came too close to being thrashed by Rosalind, 1936 Hambletonian winner, when they met at Good Time track in 1938. Owner Baker got such a fright that last year his champion did not start once against competition, limiting his engagement to exhibition miles against the stop-watch.

Peter Astra, who chalked up a sensational record of 2.01 1-2 as a two-year-old in 1938, began to show his mettle of which he is made when he captured the "dress rehearsal" to the Hambletonian at Historic track here in July, 1939. One month later he won the Hambletonian stake in straight heats, giving Jos Reinman his second victory in the blue ribbon harness classic.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS DEFEAT WINGS WITH A HOMER

Hasson, Secured from Royals, Accounts for Five of Six Runs Scored

LEAFS RAINED OUT

Montreal—Royals Defeat Jersey City and Bears Conquer Bisons

(By the Associated Press)

When Manager Dick Porter promised Syracuse fans punch rather than pitching this season, he obviously wasn't thinking of Gene Hasson, but the former Montreal first baseman may keep Dick's promise for him.

Hasson came to the Chiefs May 26 after Gus Suhr took over the first-base duties at Montreal. He has been hitting at a .300 clip or thereabouts for Syracuse and, what's more, has been making his hits count.

Latest example of Gene's pounding prowess came last night in the seventh inning of what started out to be the first game of a double-header but ended right there. With the score tied at 2-2 in the seventh and two outs, which had interrupted the game for a half hour, threatening to end the proceedings, Hasson stepped up and belted a home run with the bases full to give the Chiefs a 6-2 triumph over the league-leading Rochester Red Wings.

In all Hasson accounted for five tallies with a single and homer.

The second game was rained out and it all ended with no serious damage to Hochester's league lead. For the second-place Jersey City Giants took a 6-2 setback from Montreal Royals. Newark's Bears conquered Buffalo Bisons, 2-1, in the only other game played. Toronto and Baltimore were halted by rain. Newark's George Washburn and Buffalo's Floyd Giebell allowed three and four hits, respectively, in a keen hurling duel. Young Ziggy Sears performed the breaking-up stunt with a ninth-inning single with the corners crammed.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

New York—Everett Rightmire, 127 3-4, Sioux City, Ia., and Bobby Supino to win via the war. The idea could well be copied by other such enterprises for the mutual benefit of all concerned. Incidentally Cliff Argue, chairman of the games committee, announced that the season's first club mixed doubles will be held this afternoon and evening and the first War Savings Stamps prize to the winning winners of this tournament, which is strictly a club match.

Statistics show that in 1939 there were 307 lawn bowling clubs affiliated with the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association with a registration of some 7,528 active bowlers. This year there is an increase as already the Provincial Association has 210 clubs as affiliated members, embodying some 7,756 players, while all-in-all it is estimated there are at least 350 lawn bowling clubs in Ontario and more than 10,000 active bowlers. Last year the Provincial Association conducted a tour of the provincial capital and a team composed of Provincial Association officials. They visited Belleville one day in the afternoon and it was through these touring visits that the game in Belleville became more actively acquainted with the workings of the bowling rinks and vice versa. Next to Kingston, Belleville bowlers are the most ardent followers of the Eastern Ontario, the local club always sending members to surrounding tournaments and with more than 300 average success, we add. Today two teams of local bowlers will compete in district play at Picton.

Lou Gehrig, the iron horse of baseball, still finds time to visit the Yankees in their home dugout on occasions and he's always a jovial mood. Lefty Gomez, of course, was right in the thick of the fracas as Gehrig told about the wonders of the Mayo Brothers' clinic in Rochester, Minn.

The "mushmelons" up at Coleman Flats are bewailing the small attendance and decreased interest being shown in the game this year. However, if the local softball teams would only enter in the patrons more, perhaps it would be to their benefit, as the fans are the main cog in the present-day game. If the softball league would provide a series of games whereby the fans could ascertain what teams were playing, what time and score might be and especially what the inning happened to be, such a service would undoubtedly help to bring the fans back into the game. As it is the fans are at a loss to know what is going on, with the possible exception of a few actual playing feats. A local commercial concern was to have erected a scoreboard for the advertising in turn, but the season is half over now. Incidentally softball fans will have an opportunity of seeing the "Flyers" play the Oilers here tonight.

Wet grounds at the Armouries resulted in the postponing of last night's girls' softball game, but the lassies will be on deck Thursday evening with an important struggle, when Corbins can regain the league leadership they now share with the K-Nines and the Bi-Z outfit. However, yesterday's rain didn't dampen the hopes of Don Bell Neighborhood muskballers, Sheridans beating the Orfuns 23 to 5. The Sheridan batsmen lugged along some heavy timber last night, which they swung into action with a vengeance as they pounded the offerings of two Orfun hurlers to all corners of the ball lot. Incidentally the Neighborhood loop is doing splendid work in the primary education of young softball players, and from them a star will be sought by O.A.S.A. teams next season, if not before. The deadline for signing players into the provincial softball realm is sometime the middle of next month and it might prove profitable to some of the City league managers to give this league a glance, especially if they're seeking additional playing strength.

The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club is introducing a splendid new scheme in the matter of prizes for their club rinks. Throughout the season weekly club doubles are played each season at the Lawn Bowling Club with small prizes being awarded each week's winning pair. Instead of some small-valued piece of material, the officers of the local bowling Club will give War Saving Stamps as their weekly prizes. In so doing the Bowling Club winners will not only be helping Canada's war effort, but giving prizes that should be appreciated and which will hold some substantial value, as well as helping the Empire to win the war. The idea could well be copied by other such enterprises for the mutual benefit of all concerned. INSTALMENT 16.

As Star thanked Wood she knew that the few dollars a week would have to go to Mamie but she would be able to look forward to more soon. Star would have been delighted to work for him without any pay but she did not say so. Her habit of reserve prompted her to say nothing but, "Thank you very much, Mr. Wood."

A few moments later she was sitting at the desk in the room next to his answering the telephone, making appointments, saying, "Just a moment, please, I'll ask him"; "This is Mr. Wood's secretary. What was it you wanted?"

Early in the afternoon a feminine voice demanded to speak to Mr. Wood.

"Who is calling, please?" Star asked pleasantly, not recognizing his voice.

"To whom am I speaking?" the voice retorted. "This is not his secretary?"

"His new secretary," Star stated firmly, embarrassed to hear the other snap, "Well, this is Mrs. Wood. I wish to speak to my husband immediately!"

Star's cheeks burned. Jennifer's name had been mentioned.

"Even if she is Mrs. Milton Wood, she doesn't have to talk to me like that," she thought resentfully.

She was thus waiting under it when Susan Hale came in in the afternoon to explain some of the details of the work. But Star was surprised when the other girl said, "By the way, part of your duties as secretary to the boss will be to kiss the feet of his beautiful wife."

"I'll do no such kissing," Star declared.

Susan laughed cynically.

"Oh, yes, you will. You will be sent on errands for her, you will order flowers for her, you will get theatre tickets in your lunch hour and make all the arrangements when she leaves on one of her continual trips. In return she will treat you like something she eat brought in. She is without a doubt the most selfish person I've ever known and one of the reasons I am glad to give up the job, Mr. Wood is a dear, but she twists him around her little finger and why he puts up with it I've never been able to understand. Well, of course, she is his wife," Star admitted.

"She was a model in one of the department stores before she married him."

"That's nothing against her," Star protested.

"Of course not, but it may be the reason she acts so high and mighty, that she would be interested in you like Jennifer's husband, Milton Wood? Why did this have to happen to me?" Mamie wailed rebelliously. There were so many women in the world who didn't have minded losing their husbands but she was crazy about Joe. He had been mean to her sometimes but she loved him.

Star had heard all this many times before. She listened for a while, then suggested that they go out for dinner. She persuaded Mamie to dress and accompanied her to a nearby restaurant. Her interest was to be the following day. Evasive as always where Joe's business was concerned, Mamie said, "The people he worked for are paying for everything."

"I suppose I ought to get a job," Mamie sighed. "But I'm getting on well at my time of life and in such poor health and everything."

"I can get your room and board somewhere," Star offered. "If you will give up this apartment."

But this was precisely what Mamie did not want to do. She couldn't move now she was so near to Joe. This place was the only home she had. Why couldn't Star come back and stay with her; then they wouldn't have to give it up.

Star shivered. She was willing to support her mother, sacrificing anything within reason to do so, but not her liberty. Oh no, not that. She couldn't work and be under the strain of living with her.

"I'm sorry," she said firmly, "But I can't do that. I'm afraid it won't be possible for us to live together."

If she have had not been such a serious one, Star would have been amused at her mother's attitude. Mamie ranted and raved. Her only child had refused to live with her. After all she had sacrificed to give her every advantage, squeezing money out of her grocery allowance for dancing lessons, taking Joe's abuse, going against his advice.

"She always told me I was throwing the money away," she wailed. "She was glad she did! I would treat me like this now that I am all alone. I have nobody else in all the world. No one can turn to—but
